Here is a telegram from Dallas, Tex.:

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

I wish to congratulate you on your stand against OPA. I admired your position ever since the day I met you in Jesse McKee's office in Fort Worth when you decided to run for Governor the first time.

A. A. LANDER.

Those were happy days. I did not know what was ahead of us then. I had been engaged in private business up until that time. All my life I have been making an honest living. Now look at me. [Laughter.]

Here is a telegram from Rio Grande City, Tex.:

RIO GRANDE CITY, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Chamber,
Washington, D. C.:

Morning papers give us good news. Fight them to the last ditch. Why fight dictators all around world for 4 years then turn the life, limb, and livelihood of 140,000,000 people over to political fakers for another year.

IRA O'MEARA.

I cannot answer that question. I am not willing to do it. They have had it long enough.

Here is another telegram from Texas:

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Believe your constituents overwhelmingly support your filibuster and respect and admire your courage. Suggest your opponents spend a 100-hour week each year doing farm drudgery to see how arduous and hazardous it is to produce food for a currency-rich nation.

B. F. PITMAN, Jr.

That must come from some poor old fellow who has been trying to make a living by beating it out of the ground—farming. My sympathies are with him. I think I have done everything there is to do on a farm, but I never did find any job that was easy. It is all hard, from daylight until dark. Now we have an organization which, because there are more consumers than producers in this country, wants to force that poor old farmer to get up before daylight and milk the cows, bring in the milk, have mama churn it and let the children take it downtown on their way to school and sell it for less than it costs to produce it to someone who has plenty of money and is making an easy living. Is not that ridiculous? Is it not silly? Is it not absurd that the Congress of the United States should ever think that it is its duty to establish the price which a man can get for a pound of butter? If a man has a pound of butter he certainly should have the opportunity to get all he possibly can for it. I do not believe there are very many people in the United States who would pay more than they wanted to pay for a pound of butter, or more than they could afford to pay. If they want to pay $1.50 a pound for butter, and if the farmer wants to sell it for $1.50, why should we take sides? They are both American citizens, and Senators are certainly pledged to be impartial.

We have got ourselves into the terrible mess of taking sides on this question. It is easy to understand how it happened. We became involved in war. The President said, "We must do something to stop inflation." When we are in war there is only one man who is the manager of the war, and that is the Commander in Chief. We cannot all get up and say how we think the war should be conducted when we are in it and the fate of the whole Nation is at stake. We should do willingly what the Commander in Chief wants us to do. The Commander in Chief thought we ought to have a price control bill. I think he was wrong, but it does not make any difference what I think. He is the Commander in Chief and I will support any Commander in Chief of this Nation in connection with anything he asks for in time of war, whether I think he is right or wrong. It is his business. We won the war on that principle.

The war is over. Everyone in the United States, except the administration, knows that it is over. Congress has not yet declared it over. But the war is over. We have quit fighting. Our enemies have all been whipped, and have surrendered unconditionally, as we demanded. Technically the war has not been declared over; and in my opinion the reason it has not been declared over is that the New Deal administration wants to hang on to the war powers so that it can regiment the citizens of this Nation as it did during the war. That is the only reason. Does the administration think we are going to get into another war? Let us get out of this one first. If we need to get into another, we will get into it. It is not necessary to make it continuous. We do not have to be continuously at war. We ought to have a little breathing spell between wars. I hope to God we never get into another one.

The way we are going, we are doing everything under the sun to make every other nation in the world angry at us. The way we are conducting our affairs, I do not see how other nations can respect us. We are handling our foreign affairs just as we are handling our domestic affairs, and making a mess of the whole thing. We do not even know how to operate the American Government. We have the wrong people in power. Throughout the United States there are hundreds of thousands who could do a better job conducting the affairs of the country than those who are in charge in Washington. I have in mind some of the people operating grocery stores at the crossroads, some of the bankers, housewives, school teachers, and lawyers. We need in government Americans who have not been contaminated, who have not been in Washington so long that they forget that there is a country back in the States.

The way we are conducting our affairs is a disgrace. If there is any way under the shining sun to make an enemy, it is by lending money. Anyone who does not know that has never tried it. That is the best way to make an enemy. We once held a tea party in Boston because there were some sturdy Americans who would not submit to taxation without representation. So they threw the tea into Boston Harbor, and the British did not like it. We got into a war and whipped them. Ever since that time they have been adding up all the taxes we have been collecting, and after kidding us into believing that they were in terrible shape when they were in better financial condition than we were, with one fell swoop they persuaded us to give them all the American taxes which our American people have paid into the States, counties, and cities ever since the Boston Tea Party. We have just been gathering it up and saving it for them, and we are giving it to them in one big pile. Some day that will make them angrier than did the Boston Tea Party.

What we need in the administration of this Government is someone who has good common sense, someone who has had some experience, someone who did not make a failure of everything he ever undertook, and then embraced politics because he could not do anything else successfully.

Our situation is boiled down and represented by this iniquitous OPA bill. I cannot conceive of any group of school children below the sixth grade who could get together and write anything more ridiculous than this OPA bill. It simply has not a bit of sense to it. We have it hooked on to us. I am trying to get rid of it.

How are we going to get rid of these people in our Government? They are entrenched. They have the taxpayers' money, and they are spending it to broadcast propaganda which is not true, statistics which are not facts, and statements which are false, to try to deceive the American people into believing that we must have OPA or starve to death. We are starving to death fast enough with the OPA. It will never get any better. It will get worse. It has been getting worse ever since it was created, and it will continue to get worse. That is not because we have had bad administrators. I am not going to attack Chester Bowles. I believe that the employees of OPA are doing exactly what they were hired to do. I believe that OPA was set up by the New Deal administration with one objective, and that was to overthrow the American form of government. If that was their objective, they have certainly done a fine job. If that was not their objective, they have done a fine job, anyway, in their efforts to overthrow our American form of government.

The OPA is not the only bureau in the New Deal dynasty which has been doing its level best to overthrow our American form of government and to slide the free citizens of the United States into slavery and bondage for the rest of their lives.

Everyone who has ever had any business experience knows that there are two perfect ways to destroy an individual, a business organization, a corporation, or a government financially. There are two infallible ways. If one can destroy the production or the productive capacity of an individual, a store, a corporation, or a government, he has gone a long way toward wiping it out.

The other way is to dissipate the cumulative savings and earnings, reduce the institution to poverty, and keep it from producing. When that is done, it simply cannot survive.

Those are two well-known fundamental methods of destroying a business or a government. Ever since the New Deal was born in 1933 it has been working day and night, using both those methods to destroy our American form of government. It has run us into debt to the extent of $275,000,000,000 or $300,000,000,000, equivalent to more than $10,000 for every family in America.

The OPA tried to make the American people believe that butter was not costing them so much, by taking money out of the Treasury to help pay the butter bill of those who were in better financial condition than their Government was. The subsidy payments are being added to the public debt. That is destroying the savings which our country has accumulated during its 150 years of progress. Not only are they destroying our accumulated savings, but they have stopped production. The OPA is not the only bureau of this Government that is working on the proposition of destroying production. Several government departments are doing that. They are in absolute cahoots with Sidney Hillman and all these labor-leader racketeers in calling strikes throughout the country to stop the production of everything under the sun.

Mr. President, let me say right here that these strikes are not called by the working people of America. They do not have a thing on earth to do with the strikes. There is no fight between capital and labor in this country. Both capital and labor are doing fine. They are not fighting each other; they get along. But it is the labor-leader racketeers who cause the trouble. Many of them are of foreign birth; they are communistic; and they are in cahoots and in comradeship with the high officials of this administration, working in cahoots to destroy the American form of government—to destroy it by stopping our production, to destroy it by dissipating our accumulated savings. They have done a swell job.

So when it comes to criticizing Chester Bowles or any other administrator, I am not going to do it. I think they have done a swell job for what they were hired to do. Chester Bowles was hired to destroy the American form of government. That is his job, and he will do it if left alone. The only people we can blame for it are the Members of the Congress of the United States. Chester Bowles did not pass this OPA law. The Congress of the United States passed the OPA law, and the Congress is not willing now to give it up. So do not blame Chester Bowles. I do not know where they could hire a man who would do a better destructive job than he has done. If he did not do that job, he would get fired. That is what he was hired to do. Of course, they are not going to admit that. They claim that he was hired to hold down the cost of living; but every day that the cost of this or that goes up, they say that if the Congress abolishes the OPA on June 30, prices will skyrocket, will go up and up and up.

Well, Mr. President, the damage has already been done. It does not make any difference whether prices go up on the 1st of July 1946 or on the 1st of July 1947. The damage has already been done. The OPA has already done its dirty work. It has stopped production, and there is scarcity. Sooner or later prices will find their level and will go up. There are many other influences working against production, and prices are bound to go up. It is like having a bull on a rope. If that bull wants to go on a rampage, if he is kept on the rope he will not be able to go on a rampage. But today or tomorrow or a year from now, if he is still alive, he will go on a rampage if he is let off the rope.

So, Mr. President, in the case of the OPA the damage has already been done. There is no use quibbling about whether the damage was done yesterday or will be done today or tomorrow. The American people will have to pay the fiddler. The damage has been done, and the American people will have to pay for it.

I have been reading telegrams which have come to me from many people who do not have enough money to come to Washington and complain. Even if they did come to Washington, if they tried to find out anything, they would be told, "Well, Mr. So-and-So is in conference." Every time you try to get hold of one of the bureaucrats down here, he is in conference or he is in Chicago, or else he is busy with somebody. One day I was told that one of these big bureaucrats was in conference; but they forgot to close the door, and I saw him sitting in his chair, with his feet up on the desk, and he was having a conference all by himself.

Mr. President, I now read another telegram which I have received:

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
United States Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

I heartily approve your filibuster against OPA. You can serve your country in no better manner than to continue your fight against OPA and all other Government restrictions on business.

W. L. PICKENS.

Mr. President, that is just it. We are not going to save America just by abolishing the OPA. It is only one of the many branches or agencies of this Government that is working for the overthrow of the Government of the United States. They have them on every corner; they have their stooges at every crossroad in America. They are all over this country—farm organizations, cooperative organizations, loaning organizations. Not only are they all over the United States, but this Government has bureaus and departments and corporations and subsidiaries in every nation of the world that will let them in. Our Government has millions and billions of dollars to spend, and all of the money is appropriated by the Congress. The Government is spending it for anything it wants to spend it for, and I do not believe there is a soul in the United States who has any idea of the immensity and the expansion of this giant octopus of our American Government, which is trying to meddle in the affairs of every foreign nation, and at the same time is trying to go into business and put out of business everyone else in America. It is such a terrible thing and it has expanded so greatly that it has gotten entirely out of control. In addition, it has gotten beyond the knowledge and comprehension of anyone. We cannot find out anything about it. If the Government starts to build something, we cannot find out what it is going to be. The Government will send you from one department or one bureau to another. It is impossible to run down anything, to get the truth about it, to find out about it. Everything is covered up. Everything is under cover. They seek to deceive.

I think the time has come when the American people are going to demand a change. The Congress has appropriated billions and billions of dollars. Now we brag about some saving we are making in connection with some millions of dollars we have appropriated; but the fact is that because the war has ended the Government cannot spend that money. So there is no real saving there. We have gotten into the habit of appropriating money in such large sums that appropriations for millions and millions of dollars that are wholly unnecessary go through the Congress like a flash of lightning. If certain of the Government departments or bureaus were abolished and closed, the American people would never know it, unless the news was printed in the newspapers or was broadcast on the radio. Many of the Government bureaus and departments are failing to perform any service whatever for the American people. All they do is try to keep voting citizens on the pay roll. The war has been over a long time, but very few employees have been taken off the Federal pay roll. They do not want to take them off now, because election time is coming pretty soon. Everyone on the Federal pay roll is supposed to vote for the New Deal. They want to keep themselves in power.

Let me read another telegram which I have received.

PORTLAND, OREG., June 27, 1946.
Senator "PAPPY" O'DANIEL, of Texas,
Hall of Congress, Washington, D. C.:
Kill the OPA. Millions of Americans are afraid to speak against it due to blackmail and intimidation tactics used by them. The OPA have instituted mandamus proceedings against our senior Federal Judge Fee because he upheld Oregon laws not allowing unqualified OPA attorneys to practice in our courts. Plus adverse rulings. OPA refuses to accept affidavits as evidence, or dated city permits issued after freeze date as a fact. Even after renter admits nonresidence until 3 months after the freeze date. I am forced, under above tactics, to rent properties at prices as much as 55 percent under those prevailing on freeze date. Early this month they cut rents below freeze date prices on 5 more places. All I did was tell them they ran their office like a 10-year-old kid. May God give you strength to win.

MARVIN HEDGE.

Well, Mr. President, there you are. The man who sent that telegram no doubt is unable to come to Washington to protest. He is way out in Portland, Oreg. He cannot come here to tell how he is being oppressed by the OPA gumshoe investigators, snoopers, and stooges who are told to go out and arrest American citizens. They have to bring in complaints. I am told that in Texas the OPA stooges are hired on a commission basis, and if they do not bring in arrests they do not get paid, but get fired. Yet the Congress wishes to continue the OPA for another year. How can we expect anything better if the same people are continued in authority? There will be no difference. Chester Bowles says he will resign if the conference report is adopted. Well, Mr. President, if he does resign he will be placed in some other position in the Federal Government, because he has pleased the New Dealers. They like him and they will protect him. If he resigns from his present job we shall wake up the next morning to find him in another bureau. They take care of their own. He is a valuable man for them. They are not going to let him go. They are going to have great difficulty in finding anyone else who will do their dirty job for them, administering the OPA as well as Chester Bowles has done it. But if he resigns someone else will take his place and the OPA will continue to operate if the pending conference report is agreed to.

Mr. President, here is a telegram from Greenville, Tex. It reads:

GREENVILLE, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
We believe and hope you can kill the OPA bill.

MILLERS FEED MILL, Commerce, Tex.
BAGWELL FEED MILL, Greenville, Tex.

I believe that is the section of the country in which the OPA board of three counties resigned the other day. The OPA became so rotten that the board resigned.

Here is a telegram from Hazel K. Gregg, of Chicago, Ill. It reads:

The Lord give you strength. You are our only hope.

Mr. President, I surely appreciate anybody who believes in the Lord. He has given me strength to stand up under some pretty heavy loads. As I said a while ago, if I am on the Lord's side I am on the side of the majority.

Here are some more telegrams:

DAVENPORT, IOWA, June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Kill OPA and fear. Put Federal bureaucrats to work. America is equal to freedom.

R. H. HORNBACK.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Sincerely hope your efforts will eliminate OPA entirely.

A. W. BECKER.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Thank God for a real American in the United States Senate. Keep up the fight and don't give up the filibuster until the dishonest and deceitful Communist OPA expires and dies an ignominious death.

STURTEVANT HINMAN.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,

BEAUMONT, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
The OPA is ruining my business. Stop it if you can.
MERACLE MOTORS,
HERSHEL MERACLE.

Mr. President, the sender of the last telegram which I read is not the only person whose business has been ruined. I have statistics issued by the Department of Commerce of the United States which show that during World War II more than 2,000,000 American businesses discontinued operations, or changed hands. Before the New Dealers got into control, if a business was unable to continue because of financial difficulties and it had to be turned over to the creditors, the process was called bankruptcy. Since then a new name has been found for it. More than a million American citizens have been classified as having discontinued their businesses during the period 1941 to 1945. More than another million tried to have their honor—possibly not all of them were in that category—and the disgrace of going broke. When they saw that bankrupcy was the inevitable outcome, instead of going broke some New Dealer was allowed to come along and take the business off the person's hands. The New Dealers can get along pretty well with the OPA. But if a person is opposed to the OPA he had better look out and get rid of his business, because the OPA will get him sooner or later.

Some time ago I received a letter from a man in Missouri. The letter started with a statement somewhat as follows:

I am a coward because I am afraid to sign this letter. I own and control 43—

I believe he said—

separate business enterprises which I have built up through my own thrift.

The man said further:

If the New Deal knew that I was writing this letter to you they would handicap me and put me out of business. They would send their income-tax inspectors around who would figure out inaccuracies and discrepancies in my income tax returns, whether such inaccuracies and discrepancies were present or not. If the New Dealers want to punish you, that is the method they can use. Or, if they do not wish to follow that course, they may make it impossible for me to obtain raw materials. They will not allow me to set my prices high enough to receive back the cost of production.

They have dozens of ways by which they can punish a man in business unless he gets down and washes their feet or kisses their feet, or does something else which the New Dealers may ask him to do.

Mr. President, that man admitted that he was a coward. But he is not the only one who has made similar admissions. The people of this Nation have been whipped. A great many of them believe that their Government has gone, that their freedom has been taken away from them, and that they must receive orders from bureaucrats in Washington. They can see no light of day, and they have become discouraged. It is possible to whip most any person into submission if you pound, pound, and pound away at him.

I remember when the New Deal first started in my State to give money to the farmers. Most of the farmers there were honest American citizens. They did not wish to accept money out of the United States Treasury in order to build fences and fish ponds upon their farms. Some of them held out to the bitter end. They said, "We will not accept the money which the New Deal is trying to force upon us for the building of fences. We built fences before the New Deal was heard of, and we will continue to build them. We do not want any lakes to be constructed on our ranches. We want to use the space for the growing of grass."

However, Mr. President, the New Dealers sent their stooges into the county seats of the towns of Texas. Those stooges were charity workers and goody-goody people. They would call around them the people from Main Street and say, "Do you know what this rancher is doing? He will not accept any money. He will not give you any work. We have thousands of dollars at our disposal for the purpose of enabling you people to go to work, but this man will not take any of it."

Mr. President, those persons created so much pressure that they forced the good people of Texas to accept the money.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOEY in the chair). Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, I cannot yield. I am sorry. I got into a great deal of trouble in trying to be generous on a previous occasion and yield to some of the other Members of the Senate. I do not know of any Senator to whom I would rather yield than the Senator from New Hampshire. I know that he is a good American citizen and wants to do everything possible to restore our American form of government. He probably wishes to put something into the RECORD which will be beneficial in connection with the matter we are now discussing. I wish I could yield to him. However, I endeavored to yield a while ago. Before I obtained the floor I noted that various Members of the Senate asked the Senator who happened to be talking to yield without losing the floor. However, for some reason or other the same courtesy is not extended to me. If I should become big-hearted and yield to the Senator from New Hampshire or to some other Senator, another Member of the Senate would jump up and say, "Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The Senator from Texas has violated some rule." Then Senators would proceed to prove that I actually had violated the rule. I am glad that I did violate it. I was trying to expedite the operation of the Senate machinery. It was desired that the Senate take up and agree to a conference report. I am glad that I yielded for that purpose. My good friend, the Senator from Kentucky, our majority leader, was sorry for what had taken place. It happened while he was out of the Chamber. He came back to the Chamber. I do not know whether he tried to apologize or not, but at least he tried to prevent me from losing the floor, and he told me that he would help me. He did. Afterward the Senator who had made the objection withdrew it, and we were right back to where we started. Therefore, Mr. President, I am afraid to yield. I will yield to the Senator from New Hampshire next Monday. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, here is a telegram from Wichita Falls, Tex. It reads as follows:

WICHITA FALLS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
We are backing you 100 percent.
Henry Hamilton, McClure Bros., Joe Blackshear Nicholson, Jones Motor Co., W. A. Lofton Used Cars, Jones-Steed Motor Co., Willingham Motor Co., North Texas Motor Co., Cliff's Fine Cars, McFadin's Fine Cars, Monaghan-Jones Motor Co., Joe Pistocco, Ray Puckett, Traynham Motor Co., Barrow-Grace Buick Motor Co., Andree & Allard Farris Used Cars, Hanes Used Cars, Weaver Motor Co., Rogers Motor Co.

Some of those motor boys in Wichita Falls say they are with me 100 percent. I know what that means down in Texas. I went along conducting a nice business in Texas, and people got up petitions carrying 54,499 names urging me to run for Governor. Most of them were my customers. When a man gets 54,499 of his customers asking him to do something, he had better do it. So I did, and now look where it brought me. It brought me here, trying to save the country, and I hope I will get some support.

Suppose every Senator who is in favor of abolishing OPA should rise on this floor and say, "Senator O'DANIEL, I am with you. I am going to talk about this OPA. I don't know how long it will take me, but I have received an inspiration from your reading of those telegrams. I have something I want to say about OPA." It would be almost unanimous, and before they got through saying what they wanted to say, the sun would come up next Monday morning and America would again be free.

Think of that, all of you folks who have been listening to OPA and the advocates of OPA, who made you believe the sun would never rise again if OPA were abolished. You would get up before sunrise, and you would say, "I wonder if it is going to come up." You would look toward the east, perhaps you would look toward the west, you would look every way, and say, "When is the sun coming up again? OPA said it would not come up." After a while old Sol would come over the eastern horizon, where he always comes up. Old Sol will come up whether we have OPA or do not. Thank God, the New Dealers cannot do anything about that.

FORT WORTH, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Stay in there and pitch. Sending you box throat lozenges by air mail.

GAYLORD J. STONE.

Those folks think about me in Texas. I appreciate that from old Gay, and I bet the lozenges are already on the way by air mail. I hope I may still be talking when they arrive.

Here is a telegram from Buckeye, Ariz.:

BUCKEYE, ARIZ., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

You are on the right track—stay in there and pitch.

A. E. ROOKS.

There are fine citizens in Arizona, as there are everywhere else in this country. They think that at last they have found a friend here in Washington. I am trying to be their friend, and I am trying to save America for them. It will not mean so much to me. I have just about run my race, I am getting to be an old man, but I have some children and I have some grandchildren, and they are going to have a terrible time getting along in America. I think America is the greatest nation on earth. It is just fine if we operate under the Constitution which our wise forefathers wrote for us. But that Constitution is not automatic. The Constitution does not work by itself. There must be people who believe in it and who will stick by it. So I should like to see the Government get back to the Constitution, not for the benefit of myself, but for the benefit of generations yet unborn.

What makes America great? Why is not America down in the gutter like some of the other nations? What makes it the leading nation on this earth? It is because American citizens have freedom to make their own decisions, and whenever there is an educated civilization like the one we have here in America, each man trying to do the right thing and the honest thing, looking after his own business, it is just impossible to help building a great empire. That is the way we built this great empire, and now some are trying to tear it all to pieces, trying to make it like Russia or some other foreign nation.

Mr. President, I believe in America. It is kind of dangerous for one to stand up and say "I believe in America." The Sunday night soft-soapers, the propaganda agents who get all the radio time to make prophesies about what is going to happen according to what the New Dealers tell them is going to happen, begin to smear you all over with some kind of lotion if you stand up for America. They try to smear me. We have better smear artists in Texas than there are here. They took me on down there for quite awhile. They smeared, and the more they smeared the more votes the people gave me. So this smearing does not worry me. What I am worrying about is the future of America, which is the very thing the people who are sending me these telegrams are worrying about.

Mr. President, I was not figuring on discussing OPA until later in the day. After our majority leader, the Senator from Kentucky, said we were going to have a continuous session, I thought there would be plenty of time tonight, and I was going to do my talking tonight.

My colleague who sits here before me, the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], was all cocked and primed to make a speech, and I know it will be a dandy. He made one a few days ago that was a dandy. His colleague the junior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. MOORE] made one today that was a dandy. It lasted 3 hours. But the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS] very obligingly agreed to let me take the floor for a few preliminary remarks, and read a few of the telegrams which have been coming in. I wanted to get them into the RECORD early. I wanted the people throughout the Nation to know how the telegrams have been pouring in to me all day.

There are many people who did not think I would receive any telegrams. They thought the people were whipped, they thought they were depressed, they did not think there was any hope left, they thought they would just take it lying down. But it is true there is some hope left, that the American people are alive, that they want to get rid of OPA, that they want to get their America back again. So I wanted to get these telegrams into the RECORD early today so that the news could go out through the news agencies, as it did last night. The press boys who sent out the notice about my going to try to abolish OPA did a fine job. It looks as if it penetrated every nook and corner of every State, and that is what gave these citizens their inspiration.

I dare say many of the people who sent these telegrams have not sent telegrams for a long time. It is an expensive business. But there are quite a number of them, and I intend to read them all, whether they are for or against OPA. I want to be fair. I read the eight that were for when I started. I have been reading those that are against ever since. I wanted to get that news out. It might be just a ray of hope to somebody else in the country, when he discovers that hundreds of people have been sending telegrams, because I believe most of the folks naturally want to get some help for me. They want to get me some help on the Senate floor, so I presume they telegraph their Senators.

Mr. President, it is from the people the Senators should get their instructions. I am not going to stand on the Senate floor and attempt to tell any Senator how he should vote on the pending question or any other question. It is the prerogative of each individual Senator to decide for himself. One of the things we have left in America is that Senators can vote any way they desire.

It seems to me some of the Senators here are in a way discouraged. They may think our American form of government is already gone. I am not going to quote what any of them told me; I am not going to divulge information they gave me in confidence or in any other way; but I think some Senators think the case is hopeless and that they might just as well go along. They think that OPA has already ruined the country. They know prices will go up somehow or other, whether we keep OPA or not, and the political aspect of the situation is that OPA has done all the damage, and if there is any Member of the Senate who looks at this thing from a political standpoint, he can see that if he steps in now to abolish OPA, and prices go up, he is going to get the blame for what OPA did, and Senators in that situation do not want to get that blame. They are scared, I think. Perhaps they are not, perhaps I picked the wrong word. I know the people back home are scared. Many of them are afraid to open their mouths. Some may get into trouble through my reading the names of the senders of telegrams. I hope not. They have not told me not to read their names. But I know that throughout the country the people are scared to death. They are afraid they are on the road to serfdom. They are scared like some of the people who have escaped from Russia and who have written books telling how happy they are that they chose freedom. They have gotten over here but they have found that we are building up the same thing that they left over there. They are a little ahead of us in Russia in this matter, but we have people in high position in America who are trying to copy everything that is going on in Russia.

I am not going to stand here and condemn Russia. The Russians have the right to have any kind of government they want. I hope they get a good form of Government. I do not want the kind of government they have, as I understand it, but I am not going to deny the Russian people the right to have what they want. I think they have a lot of new dealers who have foisted communism on the Russian people. But they also have good people there who would like to get out of the country. And there are many people in Washington who would like to get away from the bureaucrats who have taken the American form of government from us and set up in its stead communism, socialism, or some other form of government absolutely foreign to Americanism.

I have made the statement that I should like to see OPA abolished. That is no news. I have been against OPA ever since it was proposed. After the war was over I introduced a bill seeking to abolish OPA. It went to a committee. I suppose it is hidden under the rug there. I cannot get any bill through one of these committees. The only way I can get anything done is to stand here on the floor and talk until OPA is abolished. That is another way of trying to get bills passed. I do not say that I am going to do that, because I do not know that I have the strength to do it. But with the telegrams coming to me and telegrams coming to other Senators, I hope enough of them will come to a sufficient number of other Senators to cause them not necessarily to join with me but to cause them, when I am through talking, to rise and start to speak and say exactly what they want to say.

I hope there will be enough of them so when they all get through saying all they want to say the sun will be coming up on Monday morning. That is what I should like to see happen. I have received no promises. I am willing to accept converts and volunteers. I should like to get some help. But so far I have not obtained the promise of help from a single Senator.

Some Senators, without making any promise to me, have made some good speeches today and saved me a great deal of breath. I just sat back here and listened to them. So long as the lieutenants were out in front winning the battle there was no use for me to get up and talk. I did just what Joe Louis did the other day. He waited until Conn had danced himself tired, and then he administered the fatal blow. I was hoping there would be enough Senators who would speak against OPA between now and Monday so I would have nothing to do except provide the idea. I am bold enough to do that; and I shall do a little talking too. I do not know how long it will last. I know there are other Senators who want to talk against OPA. I started to explain a while ago that the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS] wanted to make a speech, and was kind enough to yield to me, before I wanted to start my speech, simply for the purpose of reading telegrams. When I complete reading all the telegrams, the Senator from Oklahoma is going to make a speech, and then I imagine there will be speeches made by other Senators. I hope this turns itself into a good old-fashioned revival. I hope all Senators will get religion against OPA and that we will get to shouting around here and keep on shouting until we bring Americanism back to America.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I understand Mr. President, that I may yield for a question without losing the floor. Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does the Senator from Texas agree that the price controls of meat and livestock, as a result of their enforcement, in themselves create black markets in beef, and are destroying the legitimate beef business of the country?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I really believe that OPA not only is destroying it but has already destroyed most of it, and what has not been destroyed will be destroyed if we give OPA a little longer lease on life.

Mr. President, the Senator brought up the subject of meat. I now hold in my hand meat orders issued by OPA. There are 113 general orders in this package, and 1,114 amendments. How in the world could anyone in the meat business attend to his business and read all this "dope"? Those in the meat business must read it and follow it or be put in jail. It has been said that the pen is mightier than the sword. The OPA pen wrote these orders. In writing these orders with the pen OPA shot the bull and liquidated the cows. [Laughter.] That is the reason we have no meat. That is the cause of the present situation.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am glad to yield for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. Has the Senator given any attention or thought to the disappearance from the market today of the very necessary products made from the byproducts of meat, a situation which has caused a serious situation in the Nation?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes. I have been informed of the disappearance of many things; not only of drugs, but leather for manufacturing shoes and leather goods, because those who operate in the black market must get rid of everything except the meat. The black-market operators take the cattle out under the trees, string them up to a limb of the tree and butcher them and place them in a car and take them off to sell. They have got to get rid of the evidence. They have got to get rid of the blood, the offal, of the hide and hair. They have got to get rid of all that because the OPA snoopers will come along and catch them, and they do not want to be caught.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes.

Mr. BRIDGES. What is the difference, may I ask, between cattle being killed under the black-market conditions and cattle being killed in the regular federally inspected slaughtering plants? Would the Senator explain the difference so that the general public may understand?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Of course, the legitimate packing plants are operated on a very efficient basis. When the animal comes into a packing plant—and we have many fine packing plants in my State—everything is utilized. It is said that not even the squeal of the pig gets away; that it is bottled up. Everything connected with the animal has a useful purpose. The legitimate packers can market all the byproducts of the animal. But those byproducts are lost to the people of the Nation today on all the meat that goes through the black market.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for another question.

Mr. BRIDGES. The Senator speaks of various telegrams he has received. Is the Senator getting the same type of telegrams I am receiving from sufferers from diabetes who are tremendously alarmed over their inability to buy insulin, and therefore are facing death? Is the Senator getting word from people in his own State along those lines?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I have received letters from people in my State along those very lines. They tell me of ailments that have shown up for which they are unable to get the desired and necessary medicine. In addition to that I have received telegrams and have been told by doctors in my State that there are many cases of malnutrition, many cases of people who, because of improper diet, are deteriorating every day.

While certain diseases may not show up quickly, yet they will eventually show up. That is inevitable, because the American people have been used to a certain standard of living, and a certain diet, and when they are unable to get it, the body deteriorates and becomes susceptible to disease and disorders. That is a great factor in public health at the present time.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. What will happen to some three-quarters of a million people suffering from diabetes if the situation which now exists, of the inability to buy insulin, continues as it must continue if the black market in meat continues? There can be only one answer. Is that not true?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I presume that the logical answer would be that they would suffer the consequences of the disease unless our scientists come through with substitute remedies, or unless something else is discovered which has not yet been discovered which is beneficial to them, or unless some new method of making the medicine which is needed, is devised. But the black-market situation has already upset the whole economy of the Nation. The easiest way, the best way, the most practical way would be to return to the normal system of slaughter and distribution of the animal.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. Has the Senator heard anyone highly connected with OPA express any concern for the people who are suffering from asthma or pernicious anemia, or diabetes, or heart trouble, or hay fever, or any of the other diseases which are kept under control or cured only by the drugs which come from the byproducts of meat?

Mr. O'DANIEL. In my contact with OPA officials I have found no sympathetic heart and no concern for the welfare of any American citizen.

I now resume the reading of telegrams:

AUSTIN, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Heartily endorse your stand on OPA and honor you for it.

H. O. FANNING.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., June 27, 1946.

Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

The elimination of OPA would be a proper and modern declaration of independence for our people. Freeing our people from the clutch of Washington bureaucracy is a vital necessity for survival. You have the courage and integrity of George Washington.

M. I. JAYNE.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., June 27, 1946.

Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

Congratulations on your stand. Filibuster us back to free men.

C. K. SILER.

FORT WORTH, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

The Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association is very disappointed over the failure of the Senate to adopt the amendment releasing control on meat and livestock. We wish you to use every means within your power to prevent passage of bill extending OPA without the McFarland amendment lifting controls on our industry.

TEXAS & SOUTHWESTERN CATTLE RAISERS ASSOCIATION,
C. E. WEYMOUTH, President.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

Congratulations on your attempt to save America for Americans and hope your present tactics successful.

F. A. RODGERS.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Stay in there and pitch. We are for you all the way.

KNOX MILLER.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

We are behind you in your efforts to kill the OPA.

THE ENTIRE STAFF OF GENERAL SUPPLY CO.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.

W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

I have never voted for you. Appreciate your courage in trying to destroy OPA. Every kind of business affected. Most business houses will have to close unless they get relief. Supply and demand will take care increases in prices if OPA gets out of the way.

G. H. JACKSON.

WHITEWRIGHT, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Stay in there and pitch and talk OPA to death. We are backing you 100 percent.

C. E. AYERS.

GREEN VALLEY, ILL., June 27, 1946.

Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senator of Texas,
Washington, D. C.:

Congratulations on your stand on the OPA. Glad somebody thinks of the livestock raiser.

WALTER MILHAHN.

EAST PEORIA.

I believe that many people are beginning to think about the livestock raiser when they go to the meat market and find it empty. But the livestock raiser cannot be blamed for this condition. He has the livestock, but OPA will not let him market it.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question. That is all I can yield for without losing the floor.

Mr. MYERS. Everyone is thinking about the livestock raisers. And everyone is thinking about the next election. But I am wondering if anyone is thinking about the next generation?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes. That is what I am talking about. I was discussing that question a few moments ago.

Mr. MYERS. I am sorry I missed the discussion.

Mr. O'DANIEL. So far as I am concerned, my life is almost run. I am a grandfather. But I am thinking about my children and my grandchildren, the Senator's children and grandchildren, and everyone else's children and grandchildren. I am thinking about unborn generations.

Mr. MYERS. I cannot boast about my grandchildren. I am thinking of my children and not my grandchildren.

Mr. O'DANIEL. They will come along. That is another thing that OPA cannot stop. [Laughter.]

Mr. MYERS. It seems to me that many of us are thinking about the pressure groups in the next election, but I fear that few of us are thinking about the next generation. That was the only purpose of my question.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am very glad to have the Senator bring the subject up, because that is what I am talking about. Most of the telegrams I am reading are from individuals. They are not from pressure groups. They are from those who cannot afford to hire a pressure group.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. MOORE. I should like to have the Senator from Pennsylvania, if he will, elaborate a little on what he means by pressure groups.

Mr. O'DANIEL. The Senator from Pennsylvania cannot do any elaborating while I have the floor, or I will lose it.

Mr. MYERS. I will say to the Senator from Oklahoma that I should be glad to do so, but the Senator from Texas has the floor.

Mr. MOORE. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Texas, if I may do so without any danger of his losing the floor——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator cannot yield for a statement.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, I am yielding for a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A question is all the Senator can yield for.

Mr. MOORE. I was about to ask a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understood that the Senator from Oklahoma was making a statement in reply to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. MOORE. I am not talking about the Senator from Pennsylvania now.

I wonder if these telegrams are the result of the activities of pressure groups. I thought they came from individuals. I do not have a list of them.

Mr. O'DANIEL. As I started to say, most of these telegrams—I think practically all of them—come from individual citizens of the United States, many of whom cannot afford to buy a railroad ticket or an airplane ticket, or other transportation to come to Washington to see what is going on here and try to keep the OPA from being extended. They saw a little ray of hope when they read that I suggested that we might abolish OPA if enough Senators would talk until it died at midnight on June 30. They took heart. They were depressed and downhearted. Many of them had given up. But they saw a little ray of hope, and so these people sent telegrams. I am trying to do what I think is my duty to the persons who placed their confidence in me and sent me these telegrams. I am reading them here, because I think this is the place to read them, so that Senators may hear them.

Here is a telegram from Dallas, Tex.:

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

We surely appreciate your good work. Command us if we can help.

PROPERTY OWNERS AND ASSOCIATES LEAGUE,
ELMER ADAMS,
Chairman, Executive Committee.

I appreciate that telegram, as well as all the others.

Here is a telegram from a housewife, Mrs. Robert Aiken. A housewife is not a pressure group. She is one of the great army of American citizens. During her lifetime she and other housewives have set the prices on consumer goods. They did a fine job of it. But now they have nothing to say about it. They have the OPA to do it for them. All they have to do is to get a chart and find out what butter is worth according to the OPA and then go down to the grocery store and find out that there is no butter. What satisfaction is there in that? Housewives can find out the price of beef or anything else, and then go to the store and say, "I will take some of that"; but there is none of it there. The OPA does not let it get there. One can buy anything he wishes at a good price if he can find it. But he cannot find it.

I used to have a competitor who used that trick. Some one would come into my place of business to buy something. I would quote him my price. Then he would go over to the other man's place of business and be told, "We do not have it, but the price is so and so," which would be lower than my price. Then the man would come back to me and say, "The other fellow's price is lower than yours." I would say, "Then go there and buy it." He would reply, "Well, he does not have it." OPA is using the same tactics to fool the American people.

What does this housewife say?

GENEVA, N. Y., June 27, 1946.

Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

We are depending on your program against OPA. Thanks.

Mrs. ROBERT AIKEN,
Housewife.

This telegram comes from Geneva, N. Y. It was so nice, I thought it came from Texas. There are good people in all the States. It seems that most of the bad ones got into the Federal Government; and the higher they went the worse they became. I should like to see this Government turned back to the people.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield.

Mr. MOORE. The Senator states that the bad people are all in the Government. Does he attribute that condition to the fact that they have been here too long?

Mr. O'DANIEL. That has helped a great deal. The longer they stay here the worse they become. But, generally speaking, they came here when they could not make a living back home. Now they are here telling everyone else how to operate his business. No wonder the people say that the system will not work.

We have enacted a law which provides that the OPA must do this and that. The OPA officials do not care what is in the law. No matter what we write into the law, the OPA gang does not care anything about it. I have heard Senator after Senator say on the floor of the Senate that the Administrator of OPA was not abiding by the law, was not enforcing the law, was not administering the law according to the intent of Congress. That is no news. We all know that. So what difference does it make what we write into the law? The only thing we can do is to abolish the OPA. If we do not enact any law, it cannot operate. If we give the OPA a law and $1,000,000,000 to spend, it will operate. We can write into the law every restriction we can think of, but if we give the OPA $1,000,000,000 it will pay no attention to the law, except to have its attorneys read it and tell the OPA officials how they can violate it.

It has been said that the President may veto this bill——

Mr. MOORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I shall be glad to yield in a moment.

I do not know what the President is going to do. But I know the OPA gang. If they have anything to say about it, the President will not veto the bill. They do not care what is in it. All they want is a law. I do not know what the President will do, but I make the prediction that, no matter what kind of a bill we send to him, he will not veto it if he is guided by the gang which is running the Government. He may get a little inspiration and veto the bill. I do not know what he will do. I will not prophesy exactly what he is going to do. What I am trying to do is to relieve the President of the necessity and responsibility of vetoing the bill. We can simply not send him a bill.

When we passed the last bill we provided that the law should expire on a certain date. In my opinion, Senators contemplated that when the war was over the law would expire. I do not believe that anyone gave a second thought to the possibility that it might be desired to continue OPA after the war was over. The war was the only reason for enacting the law in the first place. The war is over. All our enemies were whipped and surrendered unconditionally. We may have another war coming on, but let us have a little breathing spell. Then if somebody hops on us again, we shall have to get into another one.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from Oklahoma for a question.

Mr. MOORE. Does the Senator from Texas know how much money has been requested for the administration of the OPA during the next year?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I have heard them talking about having a billion dollars for subsidies. Of course, the hundreds of thousands and millions of dollars they spend for administration is merely chicken feed. But all of it is unnecessary. If we simply do not adopt this conference report we shall save all that money.

I now read a telegram which I have received from the Independent Food Merchants of Taylor County, Fla.:

PERRY, FLA., June 27, 1946.

Senator O'DANIEL,
Capitol Building, Washington, D. C.:

We commend you on your stand against the OPA. We feel America should be free from OPA dictatorship. Fight it to the end.

Respectfully,

INDEPENDENT FOOD MERCHANTS OF TAYLOR COUNTY,
Mrs. J. G. TURLINGTON, Secretary.

The following telegram comes from St. Joseph, Mo.:

ST. JOSEPH, MO., June 27, 1946.

United States Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Best of luck in your filibuster against OPA. We small-salaried groups are with you 100 percent.

H. P. RUTLEDGE.

Mr. President, what do you think about that? I have heard a great many statements to the effect that the small-salaried group wants the OPA, but Mr. Rutledge says, "We small-salaried groups are with you 100 percent." Thank God for that telegram.

James Esden, of Shenandoah, Iowa, has sent me the following telegram:

SHENANDOAH, IOWA, June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

We are behind you a million strong. Continue good work.

JAMES ESDEN.

That is from good old Iowa, where Henry Wallace comes from. Henry Wallace is for the OPA and everything else that is communistic.

Let me read these telegrams:

HOUSTON, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Filibuster the OPA out of existence. Get rid of it.

Mrs. C. C. BRYAN.

MILTON, W. VA., June 27, 1946.

Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Don't pass OPA.

GEORGE HARSHBARGER.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., June 27, 1946.

Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Success to you in your filibuster against OPA. Our country needs more men like you if we are to remain a democracy.

Sincerely,

A. V. A. SANGEERT.

JENA, LA., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:

Congratulations on filibuster. More power to you.

T. S. HARP.

That is from the old home town of the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON].

From Dallas, Tex., comes this telegram:

DALLAS, TEX., July 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

We are with you in your fight to kick the OPA into the ash can, and will never forget your great service to our country. We claim to be good American citizens who are disgusted with the present bureaucratic control.

Leo Johnan, Bill Buford, Neil Newton, Jimmie Maddison, Ralph J. Powers, F. B. Clark, Bob Long, Carl Treadaway, Jack Titus, Joe Harper, Dave Mayer.

But, Mr. President, the Senate expects to abolish bureaucratic control by giving the OPA another year to continue on their job of destruction.

I have also received the following telegrams:

ELMIRA, N. Y., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Were glad to recognize in the Senate a statesman and one who has some idea of economics.

CHEMUNG WHOLESALE BUILDING PRODUCTS CO.,
By NORMAN E. SWEET.

JOHNSTON, S. C., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

We are with you. Give the OPA h——.

McQUEEN QUATTLEBAUM.
THOMAS FREEMAN.
G. W. WOOD,
T. M. KNEECE.
SAM PADGETT.
H. K. KNEECE.

Mr. President, does the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON] hear that? That telegram comes from his home State. The town must have been named after him. I point out that those who send that telegram, say "Give the OPA h———." The letter "h" is followed by a number of dashes.

This telegram comes from Chicago, Ill.:

CHICAGO, ILL., June 27, 1946.

Hon. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Three cheers for Senator O'DANIEL. You have our full support in the fight to end infamous OPA.

WOMEN'S LEAGUE FOR POLITICAL EDUCATION.

Let me read this telegram:

ARKADELPHIA, ARK., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

Arkansas we believe is 95 percent behind you in your effort to kill the OPA and preserve our American free enterprise. Stay put.

C. R. WATSON.
B. D. WATSON.
ROY HOUSTON.
J. LEE PORTER.
A. N. SHAW.

That is from good old Arkansas. They believe that Arkansas is behind me in this fight.

From Dallas, Tex., comes the following telegram:

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Your plan to talk the OPA out of existence is meeting with the approval of all thinking people. Congratulations on this and your may other efforts in behalf of the people helping to salvage something from the Washington planners. Hope you tie that OPA into a knot that will be unraveled.

WRIGHT TITUS.

Mr. President, I notice that Mr. Titus says that our plan to talk the OPA out of existence is meeting with the approval of all thinking people. However, I know some thinking people who do not approve of the effort to abolish the OPA. Some of them are not very far from me now, either. But I appreciate that telegram. There are a great many thinking people who give me their approval.

Let me read the following telegrams:

BEAUMONT, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:

Backing you all the way—end the OPA.

Mr. and Mrs. WILLIAM KEELY and FAMILY.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I am back of you in your fight against un-American OPA. I consider it pressure politics and unfair.

Mrs. ERNEST PACE.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

Wish you success in your filibuster effort. If you put this over I think we can make you President in 1948.

E. W. HULSEY.

Mr. President, is not that nice? That telegram comes from my home State.

I have also received the following telegrams:

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Please contact conferees and urge to retain the House Gossett amendment or the Senate McFarland amendment, OPA.

Respectfully,

HIGHLAND DAIRIES.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Congratulations on your determined fight against OPA. Read the Declaration of Independence to the bureaucrats.

W. K. POWELL AND FAMILY.

HANNIBAL, MO., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Anyone in our town starting a black market in meat would be a hero. Merchants have been sold down the river to the public so long as criminals that they have no respect any longer for OPA edicts. Put OPA in the ash-can.

WM. HEIBERGER,
Groceryman.

Mr. President, that is where we put the NRA. That is where the Supreme Court, that good old honest Supreme Court, put the NRA—in the ash can. The OPA is the same old NRA with a touch of red. They just doctored up the tail feathers of the old NRA.

I have also received the following telegrams:

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

For the sake of that grand old national that was the United States of America prior to 1933 please use your best efforts to procure freedom for its citizens from bureaucratic control with its attending unsound theories. All patriotic citizens not influenced by selfish ends are with you in your efforts to do away with OPA and its vagaries.

JOS. A. AIREY.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Keep fighting to wipe out OPA.

FRANK AYRES.
C. L. DEBORDE.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

You are interpreting the mind and will of the American hearts. May your wisdom and courage continue.

R. D. DORSEY.

LUBBOCK, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Power to you in filibustering. You are last hope for free people. Bust OPA.

GEO. W. GRAY.

JACKSONVILLE, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

We endorse your determined effort to end the OPA. The greatest leech on prosperity and human liberty in the history of our country.

TRAVIS CLINIC,
By J. M. TRAVIS.

CULLMAN, ALA., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Democrat of Texas,
Washington, D. C.:

Thanks for OPA stand. Nothing encompasses more injustice.

C. E. HERRIN, M. D.

PHOENIX, ARIZ., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Texas, United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

Kill OPA before it kills business. Filibuster in order.

WM. G. GLICK.

HOUSTON, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Am with you 100 percent OPA filibuster.

JIM TUCKER THE INSURANCE MAN.

ANDREWS, S. C., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Am sure the majority of the American people will stand behind you in your fight to overthrow the OPA. More power to you.

D. D. OVERTON, Jr.

STEPHENVILLE, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Fight extension of OPA. Agree with you on filibuster if necessary. Stay our friend.

L. E. ROBERTSON.

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Congratulations; keep up your fight on OPA. Meat control must go in order to solve black market. We are with you 100 percent.

BONNER FROZEN PRODUCTS CO.,
L. JOHN LEWIS.

Mr. President, that is not from John L. Lewis; it is from L. John Lewis. [Laughter.]

I also read the following telegrams which I have received:

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

We are back of you in your fight against OPA as we consider it un-American. May the Lord be with you.

Mrs. M. BUCKALEW.

ELDORADO, KANS, June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:

Whole community here behind your filibuster.

C. L. SEIBEL.

ELDORADO, KANS., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:

People in this State practically unanimous for your filibuster. Congratulations.

T. S. DUSTIN.

PLATTEVILLE, COLO., June 27, 9146.
Hon. Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

We the undersigned are supporting your views on OPA. Keep fighting.

Red & White Grocery; Fred Taylor; B. F. Kern, M. D.; Ace Campbell Market; Herbert Miller, Miller's Cafe; Robert Bruce; Donald Morgan; Walter Johnston, Funeral Director; I. G. Cook; Gerald Starr.

DETROIT, MICH., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

Best wishes for death of OPA.

Mrs. BOYDELL.

Mr. President, she is very cheerful about it.

I have also received the following telegrams:

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

I operate a 400-acre farm. Unless OPA extension is killed honest farmers and our families have no chance for successful living. Black-market prices make inflation threat a ghastly joke. Public can be trusted to regulate prices; why let cheap selfish politics ruin American way of life.

E. C. WOLCOTT.

UVALDE, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Your courageous action winning overwhelming approval. Congratulations and keep fighting.
JACK CARPER.

The latter telegram comes from good old Uvalde.

I have also received the following telegrams:

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Hon. Senator O'DANIEL: Stay in the fight for small American business. We are with you all the way. Get rid of OPA. From an individual grocer for 25 years in business in St. Louis.
Mr. SCHIMMER.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., June 27, 1946.
Hon. Senator O'DANIEL,
Democrat from Texas,
Washington, D. C.:
Wishing you success on your long speeches.
A. S. BROWN, Jr.,
Veteran, World War II.

DENVER, COLO., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Stick with it, Senator. Millions of livestock, dairy farmers and small businessmen would be eternally grateful to you for eliminating the tyrannical OPA.
A. C. BARROW.

GAINESVILLE, TEX., June 27, 1946.
W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Fight OPA to last ditch, wish we had more like you.
A. L. CHAFFIN,
C & N Packing Co.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
More power to you. I am past 71; no income except from home converted into three apartments which wife and I paid out over 20-year period. Rent control caught us with very low rentals. Have wanted to sell but cannot evict tenants nor raise prices. Looks like Government and tenants own the property.
S. S. BURRIS.

HOUSTON, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
We hope for success in your plan against OPA.
WOOD LUMBER CO.

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Appreciate your effort to return to Americans an American way of life under an American Government and trust you can successfully accomplish this by Monday.
VALENTINE RUCH.

SAN DIEGO., CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
United States Senate:
Take off the controls and we will build twice as many houses in half the time.
WESTERN CONSTRUCTION CO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Kill the OPA extension bill and eliminate Chester Bowles. We want the American way of doing business. Inflation is a scare-all.
W. S. TAYLOR,
FRANKLIN AMERICAN LAUNDRY.

MUNCIE, IND., June 27, 1946.
United States Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.
Hit the line hard. We don't want OPA.
O. F. KIRTLEY,
L. M. WILLIAMS,
C. L. BLADES,
Farmers and Free Holders.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.
Filibuster the OPA extension bill. I am with you 100 percent, even if we have higher prices for a while we will save tax money. Get rid of Chester Bowles.
R. L. BLACKBURN.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
You are on the right track. Stick to it. These United States will never get back to normal way of living as long as we have an OPA and Chester Bowles.
R. L. WILHELM.

DETROIT, MICH., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations. Hope you can kill OPA quickly.
THOMAS HARRISON WELCH.

PITTSBURGH, PA., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Present proposed OPA bill discriminates against lumber wholesalers and will put us out of business on west coast woods if passed. Suggest changing date of figuring costs from January 1, 1946, to December 1941. We appreciate your efforts.
ALLSOP LUMBER CO.

WINCHESTER, IND., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
United States Senator,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:
We are back of you on your fight to remove OPA restrictions.
O. E. ROSS.
OMER W. BROWN.

FAIRMONT, W. VA., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Production most essential of all questions. OPA not only curtailing production at every corner but a curse to our American way of life. Therefore may I congratulate you upon your intelligent efforts to save our country from slavery under a drastic dictatorship. More power to you.
HOWARD W. SHOWALTER.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Many thanks for your courageous action. The black market instigators, the destroyers of confidence in our own people, namely, the OPA, cannot die too soon to bring back the adherence to our Constitution and free America.
GERSON & CO.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Wishing you success on filibuster. It will be nice to live in free country again.
MR. AND MRS. J. B. KENNY.

GRASSLAKE, MICH., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations and more power to you in keeping up the good fight against the OPA.
HARLAN SHELLY.

Mr. President, I have already read about eight telegrams which favored the OPA. Here are a few more:

ALEXANDRIA, VA., June 26, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Strongly protest your stand on OPA, particularly your threatened filibuster. Texas voters are consumers and need protection during this critical period.
Mrs. R. L. MOFFETT.
SAN ANTONIO, TEX.

GALVESTON, TEX., June 26, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
We urge you oppose crippling amendments for extended OPA bill. We want your support extension OPA bill which includes full price controls so that people this State may be able to maintain their families on an equitable standard of living within wages. We demand you make public statement your position supporting OPA with such price controls so that people this State may determine whether you giving full representation. We are now initiating campaign this area refuse buy any commodities save bare necessities of life until such time as justice is done people by their elected representatives.
H. K. DEUCHARE,
Agent, NMU of A.

DARBY, PA., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
COOKIE PUSHER: You produce beef in Texas and we eat it here in the industrial East. If you want all those Democratic friends of yours out of the chips I don't know who is doing any more to elect a Republican President than you are.
ART FRIEL.

I am not talking about electing anybody as President. I am trying to get rid of the OPA. [Laughter.]

Here are two more telegrams:

DETROIT, MICH., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
I think you are one of the worst representatives of the country when you openly declare OPA detrimental to the poor people.
HARRY WARREN.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
If you cannot vote for the OPA bill, then hold your peace. The opponents of OPA that contend the OPA retards production, take a look at the cotton market. There is no scarcity of cotton. It is the only market open to speculation and the lifting of controls is encouraging wild speculation. What will happen to markets of scarce commodities?
H. E. VAUGHAN.

Of course, we recognize that there is plenty of cotton, but I challenge anyone to try to buy a cotton handkerchief. The OPA will not allow manufacturers to manufacture cotton goods into cloth.

Here is another telegram:

AUSTIN, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Please don't make self-respecting Texan ashamed of you by carrying out your filibuster threat. Your action would steal half the income of every citizen.

ERIN COLLEEN MOORE.

I wonder who would get the other half. [Laughter.]

Here are two more telegrams:

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 26, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

We are in favor of passing the OPA.

RAY BECKER.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: The people of Texas want the OPA preserved and we implore you to change your attitude.

Sincerely,

BURTON W. ALLEN, M. D.

I appreciate that telegram from Burton W. Allen, M. D., but I am not changing my mind. [Laughter.]

I read further telegrams:

CROCKETT, TEX., June 26, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Please defeat OPA compromise. To vote for House compromise is direct vote against Texas farmers, ranchers, poultrymen. Black market only solution under OPA regulations.

Rev. R. GAGE LLOYD,
First Presbyterian Church.

BATON ROUGE, LA., June 26, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Please hold that line until Monday.

Mrs. WOODCOCK.

If I can only obtain a little help, the line will be held.

Here is a telegram from San Angelo, Tex.:

Don't stop talking until OPA is dead.

That telegram is signed "Pete Williams."

I wish I could talk until the OPA was dead.

Here are more telegrams:

DALLAS, TEX., June 26, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

The Senate needs a Moses to lead them out of the wilderness. Stay in there and fight.

JACK CHANEY.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., June 26, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

More power to you in the fight. Best regards.

S. T. ROSS.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 26, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Am for you. Hope you filibuster OPA to death.

SAM R. TATUM.

Mr. President, the word "filibuster" is a great word. I do not know where it originated. We used to bust broncos in Texas and in other sections in the West. The men who did that kind of work were called bronco busters. I do not know that I could qualify as an expert bronco buster, but I did participate in such work and derived some fun out of the falls which I took. I presume that the word "filibuster" comes from "bronco buster" because we used to bust also a few fillies. Some of those fillies were not quite as hard to bust as were the broncos, but the word "filibuster" must have come from that direction.

Here is a telegram from Chicago, Ill.:

Don't let them stop you. Remember the Alamo. Kill that OPA and the Communists are through.

CAPT. THOMAS C. VAN HYNING,
National Chairman, Veterans' Aid and Action Committee.

Mr. President, I remember the Alamo all right. The Alamo is a very sacred place in the State of Texas. That is where a little band of noble Texans gathered together in a small building and tried to preserve the State of Texas when Mexico was trying to conquer it. The situation became quite desperate. It did not look as though the Texans had much of a chance. I wish the OPA did not have any more of a chance than did the Mexicans at that time, however. Colonel Travis was in the Alamo with a little band of men, and the situation was pretty desperate. He drew a line on the dirt floor and said, "All you fellows who want to save Texas, get over on this side of the line. Don't any of you straddle the line. The rest of you get out of here." Those men gave their lives to the last man. Not one of them survived. However, Texas was saved. The Mexican Army under Santa Anna thought that they had whipped Texas, and continued on down toward Galveston. Sam Houston took after them and caught them while they were asleep. He captured the entire army, which was composed of about 1,600 men. Texas became one of the great States of the Union.

So, Mr. President, when you have a cause which seems almost lost, if you have only a little courage to keep on fighting, the situation may change and you may win. I am almost down to the last man in the fight which I am waging against the OPA, but I am hoping that some more converts will come to my assistance. There is now a good opportunity to kill the OPA. Senators will not lose their lives by getting on this side of the line. The men who, under Sam Houston, rushed on to Santa Anna's army shouted, "Remember the Alamo!" They avenged the deaths of those great patriots who gave their lives at the Alamo for their country, and Texas became a great State. Texas voluntarily came into the Union of the United States. Texas is large enough and has enough productivity, if we could get rid of the OPA, to raise all the food that is required by everybody in the United States. I am not bragging. [Laughter.]

I know what we can do down there. I traveled there some time back, after OPA came into existence. I went into that magic valley, and there the farmers were plowing under hundreds and hundreds of acres of cabbage and spinach and other vegetables after they were mature and ready to be marketed. I know that; I have pictures of it.

I went out in the fields and talked with them, and said, "Why are you plowing these things under?" They were plowing them under because OPA would not let them get enough money for those products after they had been raised. They lost less money by plowing under those hundreds of acres of food than they would have received if they had gathered it, harvested it, boxed it up, and sold it.

OPA say they are trying to help the poor people. At that very time we were paying at the rate of $1,500 a ton for cabbage on the restaurant tables. I figured up the weight of a little dish of cabbage which sold for 15 cents, and it amounted to $1,500 a ton in Washington; yet the farmers in Texas were plowing it under.

We have plenty of cattle there. All the meat the people here are getting is the offspring of the "female steers" the OPA talks about.

Here is a telegram from Phoenix, Ariz.:

PHOENIX, ARIZ., June 26, 1946.
Hon. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

Hope you go through with your OPA filibuster. If you are short of material read the OPA orders on milk and dairy products. They would last you from now till Christmas. More power to you.

NAT M. DYSART,
Manager, Arizona Milk Producers.

I have those regulations here. If I get time, I shall read them. Congress passed a little law of a few pages and sent it to OPA, and ever since we sent it to OPA it has been passing the laws. Here are part of them on my desk. OPA has stepped into the shoes of the Congress of the United States, and is passing laws. Here are the laws of the United States, not written by the Congress.

Mr. President, I doubt if any Senator here has read all these regulations. But the poor people throughout the United States who have to live under these laws have to read the regulations, the people away out in the filling stations, in the little grocery stores, in the meat markets, in any kind of business. They have to read these laws and abide by them. They have to be very careful and not violate them, or one of the OPA's stooges will be sneaking around the corner peeking through the keyhole and throwing them in jail, or making them pay a fine to keep out of jail.

Mr. President, here is a telegram from New York:

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 26, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL.
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Kindly hold floor. I approve of what you are doing.

HOWELL.

LYNBROOK, N. Y., June 26, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

DEAR SIR: More power to you for a better America. Kill OPA.

ALLAN HARDER.

Here is one from the Continental Ranch Co., of Del Rio, Tex., away out on the silvery Rio Grande, the border between Texas and the friendly Republic of Mexico:

DEL RIO, TEX., June 26, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Present OPA bill makes bad matters worse.
CONTINENTAL RANCH CO.,
HAROLD MARTIN.
COMSTOCK, TEX.

He is right.

Here is one from California:

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., June 26, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
In the name of our beloved country I urge you to eliminate OPA gestapo which creates black markets and racketeering and ignores our constitutional rights preventing free enterprise and collective bargaining and renders punishment without a court hearing. You will also save the country from going bankrupt and the world from starvation.
J. L. VITZ, of Illinois.

CANTON, MASS., June 26, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations, OPA filibuster heartily supported by Damyankee family and friends. Stopping of citizens on street to explain packages by the leech pay roll gives no alternative.
H. M. SPRING.

Mr. President, is that not a nice condition, that American citizens have to be subjected to anything like that?

Now I read a telegram from R. T. Giles, of Atlanta, Ga.:

ATLANTA, GA., June 26, 1946.
Hon. O'DANIEL, of Texas,
Congress Building, Washington, D. C.:
Am very much pleased with your stand against the OPA. Hope you will filibuster and kill this OPA dead. Speaking in behalf of all retail food dealers in Georgia.
R. T. GILES.

HIGHSPIRE, PA., June 26, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
I hope you will carry out your threat of a filibuster and by the help of God you will be able to hold the floor until Saturday night.
J. E. KEEFER.

It is going to take a little longer than Saturday. It will take until Sunday night.

FORT WORTH, TEX., June 26, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
We the average citizens of Texas are 100 percent backing you on your OPA stand. Set them out, Senator, and give Texas a square deal. As American citizens we deeply thank you, sir.
MINNIE B. PEACE.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., June 26, 1946.
Hon. Sentor W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Buiding, Washington, D. C.:
Hold the floor until Monday. Make us free again. God bless you.
COLIN L. LETT.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., June 26, 1946.
W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Get the floor and hold it until Monday. Seems that will be our only hope for America's freedom.
RUFUS JACKSON.

DETROIT, MICH., June 26, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Building,
Washington, D. C.:
I think it would be swell to wake up Monday morning and have a law that we all don't have to violate.
RAY GRANT.

AUSTIN, TEX., June 26, 1946.
W. LEE O'DANIEL,

Washington, D. C.:
Do all you can to kill OPA.
W. C. BUFORD.

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 26, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
More power to you, Senator O'DANIEL. St. Louis rental property owners have taken a heck of a beating so far. Eliminate OPA, please. Thanks.
No signature.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 26, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Filibuster against OPA. Smash OPA.
CARO.

HOUSTON, TEX., June 26, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Just heard over radio your plan to filibuster Chester Bowles, Paul Porter, and their OPA. This is the only alternative with which you can save the people of America from this communistic dictatorship. You are loyal to your country instead of to a group of New Deal demagogues and the people are with you in your efforts to do that which is right rather than that which is popular.
JOHN T. BUCKLEY.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 26, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Radio report tells of your contemplated filibuster to kill OPA. This will hearten and encourage millions of Americans opposed to any European ideas of government. Should inspire other Senators to join your fight for us. You can do it. We heard you on Town Meeting.
CARL AND HELENE JOHNSON.

This telegram says it will hearten and encourage millions of Americans who are opposed to any European ideas of government.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 26, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL, Texas,
Washington, D. C.:
The black market controls this country.
R. A. PAGANO.

PALO ALTO, CALIF., June 26, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Building,
Washington, D. C.:
With you in your fight for Americanism 100 percent.
HELEN M. LANDENBERGER.

BELLBROOK, OHIO, June 26, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL of Texas,
United States Senate Chamber,
Washington, D. C.:
Rural people all with you; all others will thank you before Christmas. Filibuster and defeat the most serious legislation in our history.
MARVI BARNETT.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., June 26, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Keep your word. Bust OPA.
CHARLES DONALDSON.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF., June 26, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Filibuster the OPA out of existence. Be our hero and the country's savior.
EDGAR F. HASTINGS.

PHOENIX, ARIZ., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL, of Texas,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.
DEAR SENATOR: Please do whatever you can to defeat OPA. Why do we have to be shackled by the OPA for another year? Let the people adjust themselves and be free again.
Very gratefully yours,
E. H. MITCHELL.

Mr. President, these telegrams are not an accumulation of messages which have been coming in over a period of time. They came in today and are still coming.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. LUCAS. How long does the Senator expect to speak?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Until I get through.

Mr. LUCAS. I know that; but can the Senator give me a notion as to how long he expects to take?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No. If I knew I should be very glad to give the Senator the information, but at this stage I cannot say when I will get through.

Mr. LUCAS. My only reason for asking the Senator was that the hour is growing late, and I wondered if the Senator had any idea as to how long he expected to speak tonight.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am sorry that I am unable to give the information.

Mr. LUCAS. If the Senator is going to read what he has in front of him we will be here until breakfast, and I have no objection to that, because I am ready to stay.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am very glad to know that the Senator has no objection.

Mr. LUCAS. I think the Senator is doing a great service to the country and to the Senate, and I wanted to find out how long he expected to speak.

Mr. O'DANIEL. The Senator from Illinois does not know how much I appreciate that statement.

Mr. LUCAS. I know it. I am sure the Senator will be able to stay here from now until Sunday night, because he has enough material in front of him to take that length of time.

Mr. O'DANIEL. It does my heart good to know that the Senator of the great State of Illinois recognizes the fact and admits the fact in the Senate that I am doing a great service.

Mr. LUCAS. There is no doubt at all that the Senator is doing a great service to his country in reading these telegrams. It is extremely illuminating.

Mr. O'DANIEL. That is more encouragement than I have received in the last few minutes.

Mr. LUCAS. I want to encourage the Senator, because I do not know how long he can stand on his feet, and he ought to set a record here from the standpoint of filibustering.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am not filibustering.

Mr. LUCAS. What is the Senator doing?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Reading telegrams.

Mr. LUCAS. Is he trying to enlighten the Senate on this question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am merely reading telegrams at the present time. I have some more stuff here to read, too.

Mr. LUCAS. I understand that, and I know the Senate is greatly interested in what the Senator has, but I was wondering whether he was trying to enlighten the Senate and the country, or whether he was filibustering.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I would not attempt to enlighten the Senate of the United States. I think it is the most enlightened body there is on earth.

Mr. LUCAS. I know it has been so since the Senator arrived.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Then it has been by absorption, because the Senator from Texas has not said much on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. LUCAS. No; he has not said much in his filibuster.

Mr. O'DANIEL. What I have said is to express the words of other people.

Mr. LUCAS. That is the only way that the Senator can talk. I perfectly understand what the Senator is talking about. He is reading telegrams from people throughout the country. That is the way the Senator is filibustering on this measure.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I knew the Senator from Illinois would understand what I was talking about, because he has a high degree of intelligence.

Mr. LUCAS. No; I never misunderstand the Senator from Texas.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I hope the Senator never does.

Mr. LUCAS. I do not misunderstand the Senator. I understand the Senator from Texas always. I understood the Senator from Texas a way back in the campaign of 1944 when the Senator from Texas went all the way, and completely out of order, and out of place, against the Senator from Illinois when he was running for the United States Senate in Illinois.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Well, that is not a very long memory.

Mr. LUCAS. No; it is not. And the Senator from Illinois has not forgotten it, and he never will forget it either.

Mr. O'DANIEL. That does not show a long memory, because I was in politics before 1944.

Mr. LUCAS. Yes, the Senator was, and he got into politics in the Illinois campaign in 1944 when he had no business to come into that campaign.

Mr. WHERRY. Why did the Senator from Illinois enter into Nebraska and get into Nebraska politics when I ran against the honorable Senator George Norris? The Senator from Illinois made broadcast recordings which were sent to Nebraska and used in an attempt to defeat me. Dozens of records, containing speeches against me were sent out there by the Senator from Illinois. Drew Pearson wrote articles against me. The Senator from Illinois joined in attacking me. Why did the Senator get into that campaign? And in view of his having gotten into that campaign; why criticize the Senator from Texas for speaking against the Senator from Illinois in the Illinois campaign in 1944?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I make a point of order.

Mr. WHERRY. I have been looking for a chance to say this ever since I came to the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state his point of order.

Mr. BARKLEY. I make the point of order, Mr. President, that the Senator from Texas cannot yield to the Senator from Nebraska to ask a question of the Senator from Illinois.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. The point of order should be made against the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. BARKLEY. No; the Senator from Illinois was asking a question of the Senator from Texas who has the floor.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas yield to me so I may suggest the absence of a quorum?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I cannot yield for anything except a question. [Laughter.] I certainly appreciate the questions that are being asked me by the Senator from Illinois, because I am being honored for doing something that I have never before known I have done.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. I am only trying to help out the Senator from Texas in his filibuster. Will the Senator yield to me that I may answer the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I should love to do so, but I could not do it without losing the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I must insist that the Senator from Texas cannot yield to any Senator except for a question; and to yield to the Senator from Illinois to ask a question of the Senator from Nebraska would result in the Senator losing the floor.

Mr. LUCAS. No, I do not want the Senator to yield for a question. I want to answer the Senator from Nebraska. I have the answer.

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator from Illinois can come here and tell me if he wants to.

Mr. BARKLEY. I make a point of order against that procedure.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I have a telegram here from Dallas, Tex., from Clara Huber and Aurora Kammann.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. WHERRY. Is it possible for me to ask the Senator from Texas to yield so I may suggest the absence of a quorum, without the Senator losing the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator can do that, and if the Senator yields he will lose the floor.

Mr. WHERRY. If I obtain unanimous consent, does the Senator from Texas lose the floor if he yields?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He can yield for that purpose by unanimous consent.

Mr. WHERRY. The reason I make that inquiry is because I think Members of the Senate should be present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That would be a question for the Senator from Texas to decide.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, I am sorry I cannot yield for that purpose. I can yield for a question and not lose the floor. I do not want to lose the floor. I lost it once today and got it back again all right with the help of our able majority leader, and I appreciate that very much.

The telegram from Clara Huber and Aurora Kammann, of Dallas, Tex., is as follows:

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

It would be a feather in your hat to keep on talking when you get the floor from then till Monday on the OPA as it is unconstitutional and against the freedom of America, for the people, by the people, for what we fought the war for.

I read another telegram:

PATERSON, N. J., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: Believe me, stick to your guns. Filibuster to the death of anti-Americanism. Wire me at once if I can help, either with material for filibuster or in any capacity. I will fly at once to assist you at my expense.

A. J. KIEVIT,
Secretary-Manager, New Jersey Butchers Association.

There comes the promise of some help, Mr. President.

I wish to read a number of other telegrams, as follows:

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:

The eyes of Texas and the Nation are upon you. We will pray while you filibuster OPA. Don't disappoint us.

MRS. T. D. MORGAN.

DETROIT, MICH., June 27, 1946.

Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

We, too, would like to wake up Monday morning without price control. Let's go back to the American way of living.

A VETERAN.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Make an end to the OPA. Let the bums go to work for a living like ordinary folks do. More power to you.

EMANUEL GASSMAN,
Attorney.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

We glory in your spunk. Filibuster, if possible. We are proud of your Americanism.

Wish America had more like you. God bless you.

Mr. and Mrs. WILLIAM H. JONES.

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Keep up the filibusters. Get rid of the OPA. Let this be a free country.

SMALL BUSINESSMAN.

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Am with you in the fight to end the black market. God give you strength to continue.

VILLAGE MARKET.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Women organizations have fallen for Bowles and labor propaganda fearing inflation. Prices have soared in spite of OPA. Our rents only thing held down, but plumbers', painters', carpenters' prices up 100 percent. Stay with your filibuster, killing all control and become our famous benefactor.

HENRIETTE PYLE,
Renter Division of Real Estate Board.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations on your filibuster. May you get the floor, and Colorado Senators help you to make United States free once more.

Mr. and Mrs. RALPH W. BELL.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 27, 1946.
Hon. Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.
DEAR SENATOR: We urge you to secure the Senate floor to kill the OPA in all its ramifications and thus give America back to the American people by next Monday morning.

ESTHER M. BRUCE,
MARIONA RODINE
(And a number of mothers).

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Have no meat in my house. Without OPA I could buy it for less than one or two dollars per pound. Radio reports O'DANIEL intends to filibuster against OPA, and I am for him. Supply and demand eventually must regulate prices.

ED C. SMITH, Jr.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Am thoroughly with you on your plan to end the OPA. Have suffered through it myself and would like to see the Government back into the hands of the people. My best wishes for your success in your endeavor.

JOSEPHINE CHASTAIN.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Agree wholeheartedly your plan to defeat OPA by filibuster. Any means should be used to defeat such a vicious bureau. We are for you 100 percent. Best wishes.

PAUL and WALTER HENSHAW.

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
We are behind your fight. Meeting tonight of 500 small grocers. All are behind your filibuster.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Please start filibuster at once. Stay with it until OPA expires. You have the heartfelt thanks of many. Just a housewife, address 3564 University, San Diego 4, Calif.

Mrs. W. O. BOURNE.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., June 27, 1946.
Honorable Senator O'DANIEL,
Senator from Texas,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Follow through with filibuster. Sensible citizens in country are backing you. Kill the OPA.

Mrs. BOB COOK.

SANTA BARBARA, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Hon. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Tonight's papers say you threatened to hold the Senate floor till Monday and kill OPA. You will win the gratitude of the country if you do.

PINE CREST LODGE,
E. CARROLL TABER.

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,

Endorse your attitude regarding OPA as radioed. May success crown your efforts.

LINNIE W. BARRETT.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
In my opinion the OPA is un-American, unfair, unjust, inefficient, and serious deterrent to legitimate business. The entire public would be benefited if the OPA was completely and entirely eliminated. More power to you and may your voice ring long, loud, and clear.

SEVENTH AND TYLER SERVICE,
By WILBER JACKSON.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., June 27, 1946.
Honorable Senator O'DANIEL, of Texas,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Glad to see there are sane lawmakers remaining. Continue filibuster and save American way of life; abolish OPA.

Mrs. D. C. CURDIE.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Chamber,
Capitol Building, Washington, D. C.:
We heartily endorse your stand on OPA, and hope you are successful in freeing the country from one of the fetters that is holding back the production of the necessary goods. The sooner all Government bureaus are ended the better. We believe that 70 percent of the people are with you.

Mr. and Mrs. M. W. WAINWRIGHT.

RENO, NEV., June 27, 1946.
Hon. LEE O'DANIEL,

United States Senator O'DANIEL,
Democrat, of Texas,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

We apreciate your support in placing meat of all kinds on the free list and beyond any OPA regulation. The meat industry wants the old return conditions as before the war.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL MEAT DEALERS.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

Packers cannot operate under OPA. Does our Government want all business to go black market? Packers are closing all over the nation. People are getting tired of being pushed around by OPA regulations. Please use your influence for the elimination of OPA controls over meat and livestock so that the legitimate packers can stay in business.

H. M. FOULKNER,
PINKNEY PACKING CO.

The voice of the people is being heard in the United States Senate.

Here is a telegram from Detroit, Mich.:

DETROIT, MICH., June 26, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Democrat, Texas, Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: I hasten to congratulate you upon your Senate battle toward restoring to the American people freedom from and against the un-American dictatorial policies of insult of the OPA and its communistic ideologies.

ART SEEFELDT.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Junior Senator of Texas,
Washington, D. C.:

We heard over the radio this afternoon that you plan to filibuster the OPA bill tomorrow. You have certainly raised your already high stock with many of your friends and supporters in Texas as well as with people over the entire Nation. We admire your fortitude for taking this action and want you to shoot both barrels at this thing as well as this preposterous rent control. If we had more fearless men like you in Washington such conditions as now prevail would not exist. Of course you will become a much loathed and despised man but your opponents will respect you and we appreciate what you are doing to save all of us from continued regimentation.

Mr. and Mrs. TOM SAWYER.

This telegram is from Mr. and Mrs. Tom Sawyer, citizens of the United States of America, expressing appreciation for the feeble efforts of a United States Senator in bringing this deplorable, despicable, outrageous OPA bill to the attention of the Senate at this time, and urging that OPA be abolished.

I continue the reading of telegrams:

EUGENE, OREG., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

Want you to know we are behind and appreciate your efforts to abolish the controls on meat and dairy products. Because until such control of these vital products is abolished they will remain in the black market and bring inflationary crisis to the American public. Please use all your efforts and filibuster if necessary to stop the gestapo tactics. Supply and demand have been the American businessman's schedule for years. Restore the symbol of Americanism to them. Abolish the controls on meat and dairy products.

LEON YEARWOOD,
Secretary, Eugene Division, Meat Dealers for State of Oregon Association.

PITTSBURGH, PA., June 26, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

If you wish to prevent a national revolt on the part of all business against Government control you will vote to abolish OPA completely. Listen to the voices that are predicting the tomorrows' present polls; refuse OPA 3 to 1; do not refuse to recognize the sounds of the times. Give industry and labor the opportunity of proving itself by eliminating controls for 9 months. If industry and labor fail to meet the challenge by then you can have a completely free hand. Present regulations are impossible, impractical, communistic, and unenforcable under a peacetime economy. When a widow with three children, who desires to start a combination day nursery and home for three children who are now in an institution for two-thirds of the space devoted to the nursery and one-third of the space devoted for the home is refused permission to build without priority assistance it is almost too late to say we still have the freedom guaranteed under our Constitution.

JOHN B. MCCRADY.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 26, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

I am addressing you because your die is cast to fight racketeering and plain dishonesty in Government. To have freedoms is one thing, yet to have them wrongly founded is their nullification. Up to now all forms of belief were founded in the worship of idols in one way or another; an imperfect body as a moral free agent can only live in chaos, unless the imperfections are corrected by adjustment of the ensemble to balance it as it strives toward perfection. Hence the earth's governments must be changed. We must keep each human sacredly guarded by a tax, never a charity. We must find how to divide the treasures of our earthly physical life equally and set that limit as the height of personal ownership—anything above that reverts to the governments as tax to rescue the perishing at the expense of the well and able. Racketeering, intemperance, wanton ruthlessness should be cured in the asylum. This is a simple solution which you have the power and influence to enforce. Until it is done no nation, race, or creed can live with or understand another, and I guarantee you we shall have many wars to the point of extinction and that quickly.

Very truly yours,

VERTNER DAVID BRITTINGHAM.

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 26, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

The farmers of Tennessee urge you to use all the power at your disposal to kill the unjust controls placed on dairy, poultry, and livestock farmers. Having heard tonight of your efforts, you are the only hope we have to prevent bloodshed if Congress and the President insist on taking our products without allowing us a decent living. Who do these communistic labor leaders think they are? Their high wages won't do them any good when they can't eat. If you need military support to straighten out the rats, please call on us.

H. E. SIMPKINS,
An Aroused Farmer.

Another vivid case showing how American citizens are becoming aroused at this oppression, dictation, and regimentation, and the attempt to take away their American rights. The people are expressing themselves in no uncertain words in telegrams, and I am reading them so that Senators may know how the American people feel.

Hearings have been held on this bill. Those who had the money and could afford it came here or sent representatives and they were heard. This telegram is from a farmer in Nashville, Tenn., who did not come. He could not come. He sent a telegram. Here it is. Many others feel the same way.

Here is a telegram from Hazleton, Pa.:

HAZLETON, PA., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Understand you are going to filibuster the OPA to death. Thank God there is a real American still in the Senate who does not fear the 15,000,000 CIO, PAC Commies in these United States. The 120,000,000 unorganized Americans who foot the bill want only the return of legal, honest, old-fashioned American way of doing things in industry and business. Please filibuster the OPA and all other "Commie" ideas to death. We are for you. Have our permission to read this before the Senate.

Dan Cassarella, Evan W. Jones, N. Veneroso, Jr., Helen Fedullo, Evelyn Campbell, John Fedullo, Laura Magazzu, J. Rudy, Estell Fedullo, C. J. Lamont, P. A. Magazzu, Licille Cassarella, John B. Cassarella, Mrs. P. A. Magazzu, Boyd H. Kline, and Olgad Veneroso.

The next telegram comes from Seattle, Wash.:

Today's Seattle Times indicates your possible filibuster against OPA. Thank God for such Senators as yourself and WHERRY, of Nebraska.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. Has the Senator received any telegrams saying "Thank God for Chester Bowles"?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I have not.

Mr. BRIDGES. Has the Senator received any telegrams saying "Thank God" for any one who is out in front shouting for OPA today, and contending for the continuation of its very disastrous control in the Nation?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I have received no telegrams thanking God for those folks.

Mr. BRIDGES. As I understand, the telegrams which the Senator has received thanking God are confined to references to Senators who are attempting to maintain the American way in this country.

Mr. O'DANIEL. The Senator is absolutely correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am glad to yield for a question.

Mr. BARKLEY. Is the Senator familiar with the Biblical injunction to pray for his enemies?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I have received no telegram of that kind.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not talking about a telegram. I am talking about the Bible.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes; I think that is a good idea. I am praying for them. I am praying for the enemies of the American people. I hope they may get salvation. I hope they get right with God. I hope America is saved. I pray for them every night. I think my prayers will be answered. I believe in prayer. The people who are sending these telegrams, and who refer to the Deity, believe in prayer. I think we have a great Christian Nation. I do not believe that the people of this Nation want it to become a nation governed by unbelievers or a communistic nation.

I was about to read a telegram from Seattle, Wash.:

SEATTLE, WASH., June 26, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Texas Senator,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Today's Seattle Times indicates your possible filibuster against OPA. Thank God for such Senators as yourself and WHERRY, of Nebraska. We are for your filibuster 100 percent, and untold millions of real Americans feel the same way. Senator WHERRY is correct if we have another session of OPA we will not only have violence but we will have more thousands of American business people out of business or in violation of many laws. Why allow our country to continue to operate in any such manner? Crush these un-American agencies now before it is too late. If we can help in any way wire us collect, care New Washington Hotel. But get rid of OPA once and for all, even if you have to hold the Senate floor all summer.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. LOGAN,
Tampa, Fla.

The next telegram is from Amarillo, Tex.:

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

Our dear Mr. O'DANIEL, the conditions just passed by the House on the OPA bill are very unsatisfactory to the Panhandle of Texas. As far as meat, poultry, and dairy products are concerned, there is nothing but black market here. As supervisor of Ideal Food Stores Markets, I say, Shall we operate legally and in fair competition or shall we continue to operate with black market? If the OPA continues, the public will be buying at black-market prices, whereas if it is discontinued it would be much cheaper to buy legally and at competitive prices. My belief is that fair competition would discard all necessities of the OPA.

Sincerely yours,

DESMOND DEAN.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am glad to yield to the Senator from New Hampshire for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. Is the Senator from Texas familiar with the survey which has been made of retail stores with respect to how many were violating the price ceilings on meat?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I have seen the survey, but I do not at the moment have the figures in my mind.

Mr. BRIDGES. Would the Senator be surprised to learn that in New York City, out of 401 stores which were visited and 739 cuts of meat purchased, the percentage of stores selling at overceiling prices was 78.8 percent; in other words, that 78.8 percent of all the stores visited in New York City were violating the OPA price ceilings? Would the Senator from Texas be surprised at those figures?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I would not be surprised at those statistics and those facts. However, I am shocked that such a condition exists in America.

Mr. BRIDGES. Would the Senator be surprised that in Washington, D. C., here in the Capital of the United States, in the case of 242 stores visited and 516 cuts of meat purchased, 81.4 percent of all of the meat purchased was sold in violation of the OPA ceiling prices?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I certainly would not be surprised at that, even here in Washington, D. C.

Mr. BRIDGES. Is it not a shock to the Senator to realize that here in the National Capital there are such violations of the OPA regulations?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am not so shocked about it, here in the Capital, as I am in other places.

Mr. BRIDGES. Would the Senator be surprised that in Chicago, Ill., 392 stores were visited and 724 purchases of meat were made, and it was found the 91.1 percent of the purchases made were over the OPA ceiling prices—in Chicago, Ill.?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I would not be surprised at all. But I say again that I am shocked that such a condition should exist in Illinois.

Mr. BRIDGES. Would the Senator be surprised that in Indianapolis, Ind., in the case of 58 stores visited and 102 meat purchases made, 84.5 percent of the purchases were over the OPA ceiling prices?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I would not be surprised at that at all.

Mr. BRIDGES. Would the Senator be surprised that in Milwaukee, Wis., in the case of 70 stores visited, out of 145 purchases of meat which were made, 85.7 percent of the purchases were over OPA ceilings—in Milwaukee, Wis.?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I would not be surprised at all.

Mr. BRIDGES. Would the Senator be surprised that in Memphis, Tenn., where 122 stores were visited and 240 cuts of meat were purchased, 88.5 percent of the purchases made were over the OPA ceiling prices—in Memphis, Tenn.:

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I would not be surprised at that.

Mr. BRIDGES. Now I wish to come to the Senator's home State. In Houston, Tex., in the case of 100 stores visited and 192 purchases made, would the Senator be surprised that there were 94 percent—a very high percentage—over the OPA ceiling prices; right in the heart of Texas?

Mr. O'DANIEL. The folks down in Texas like meat. I know that. I am not surprised at that at all. But Texas generally leads in everything. [Laughter.] I am going to have to consider it an honor that Texas is at the top of the list in anything.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, would the Senator be surprised that in Denver, Colo., in the case of 109 stores visited and 224 purchases of meat made, 84.4 percent of all the purchases made were above the OPA price ceilings?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes; I am surprised that that is not higher. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRIDGES. Would the Senator be surprised that in Los Angeles, Calif., in the case of 200 stores visited and 408 purchases made, 83.5 percent of all those purchases were above the OPA price ceilings?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I am not surprised at that.

Mr. BRIDGES. Would the Senator be surprised that in my own New England, in Providence, R. I., in the case of 35 stores visited and 69 purchases made, 77.1 percent of the purchases were above the price ceilings of the OPA?

Mr. O'DANIEL. That is a rather low score.

Mr. BRIDGES. I myself was a little surprised at that figure for a city in New England.

Would the Senator be surprised that in Newark, N. J., in the case of 74 stores visited and 136 purchases of meat made, 85.1 percent were above the price ceilings of the OPA?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I would not be surprised at that. That is a fairly good score.

Mr. BRIDGES. To summarize the statistics for these 11 cities, would the Senator from Texas be surprised that out of a total of 1,803 stores visited and 3,495 purchases of meat made, the general average for the entire Nation, based on that cross-section of the Nation in the case of those 11 great cities, is that 83.2 percent of all the purchases made were above the price ceilings set by the OPA?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am not at all surprised at those statistics. But I think it is disgraceful that our American people, who are honored throughout the world for their honesty, their integrity, and for abiding by the law, have been forced into evasion or violation of the edicts which have been issued by the Office of Price Administration. I am sorry it has happened, and I am trying to get the OPA abolished, so that those who are hungry and who want some food will not have to violate the law in order to get it.

Mr. President, I now read a telegram coming from Detroit, Mich., from Clovis C. Ferguson, 15857 Meyers Road. The telegram seems to be in the form of a poem entitled "Price Ceilings." It reads as follows:

DETROIT, MICH., June 26, 1946.
Senator PAPPY O'DANIEL,
Texas Senator.
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:

PRICE CEILINGS

The OPA is here today
To keep the prices down.
If that were true
Then it would do
For Smith and Jones and Brown.
But Chester Bowles and other wits
Would put the damper on Without a thought
Of damage wrought
In waste, in want, in wrong.
They set the price of rusty cars,
And new ones just as well,
And make it look
By hook or crook
That everything is swell;
The ceiling price on rusty cars,
That almost fall apart,
Is but one phase
Of OPA's
Judgment of the mart.
They freeze the price of needed steel,
They ask that wages rise,
But hold that line
And keep in mind
The OPA is wise.
The ceiling price on building needs
Drives business from our doors,
And lumber flees
Across the seas,
And lands on foreign shores.
And when you buy a shirt or suit
To cover up your back,
The price you pay as per OPA
Will take a lot of jack.
To start the wheels of all the mills,
To have a better day,
Take off controls,
Ditch Chester Bowles,
Throw out the OPA.

You have my permission to print or use if you desire with name and address.

CLOVES C. FERGUSON.

I do not know whether he is any relation to the junior Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON].

From Los Angeles, Calif., the following telegram comes:

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

In the name of our beloved country I urge you to eliminate OPA gestapos who create black markets and racketeering and ignore our constitutional rights preventing free enterprise and collective bargaining, and renders punishment without a court hearing you will also save the country from going bankrupt and the world from starvation.

J. L. VITZ, Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator where that gentleman comes from.

Mr. O'DANIEL. From Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. From what town in Illinois does he come?

Mr. O'DANIEL. He does not say. He is in Los Angeles now. He sent the telegram from Los Angeles, Calif. Let me read the telegram again since the Senator from Illinois is listening.

Mr. LUCAS. I wish the Senator would.

Mr. O'DANIEL. It reads as follows:

In the name of our beloved country I urge you to eliminate OPA gestapos who create black markets and racketeering and ignore our constitutional rights preventing free enterprise and collective bargaining and renders punishment without a court hearing. You will also save the country from going bankrupt and the world from starvation.

J. L. VITZ, Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. Does he say why he is in Los Angeles?

Mr. O'DANIEL. He merely says what I have read.

Mr. BRIDGES. Probably he is there for his health.

Mr. O'DANIEL. The following telegrams also have been sent to me:

SEATTLE, WASH., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Power to you. Beat the OPA.

JAMES W. FRAZIER.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

I trust you and Senator WHERRY will filibuster on the OPA bill and return our country to the American way of life.

Dr. DONALD J. MACDANIEL.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

Most Congressmen voted to sell democracy for mess of pottage. Nation's salvation depends upon you now. OPA extension means anarchy and revolution. God help America.

MRS. R. L. THOMPSON.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Just heard over the radio your attitude toward the OPA and we are supporting you all the way.

W. B. MARTIN, Sr.

LONG BEACH, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Hon. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

Your proposed filibuster against OPA will win you the undying thanks of all those who believe in the American system of free enterprise. It is unthinkable to all unbiased Americans that a country which outproduced the world to win our recent war cannot outproduce inflation.

L. A. SMITH.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL, of Texas,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

More power, Senator. Hope you can restore our freedom. Distressfully wired and wrote the President about tenant domination.

C. LENNERT.

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 27, 1946.
W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senator,
Washington, D. C.:

Congratulations on your fight against Office of Price Administration bill. Take the hands of Communist bureaucrats off our country and it will prosper. Regard OPA as New Deal Communist inspired measure to break down our form of government. Texas leads the way and I'm proud of it.

WILEY S. SMITH.

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

I earnestly urge you to filibuster to kill the OPA completely. This is our last chance to get rid of it.

A. W. CORSE.

HIGHLAND PARK, ILL., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

I approve your opposition to the OPA bill as reported by the conference committee. Keep up the good fight. Am happy to learn that we will have some leaders with the spirit of the founders of our Constitution.

MADISON, WIS., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

America is back of you and waiting for your very long speech. Good luck and God bless you. Hope for a real America after midnight Sunday once again.

D. RANITZ.

PHOENIX, ARIZ., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Texas United States Senator, Washington, D. C.:

The OPA is causing all kinds of hell in this country. Kill it as you would a rattlesnake. Kill it dead.

JAMES C. RHOTON,
A Corner Grocer.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

I am with you and I hope if necessary you filibuster, not that you will gain a hundred percent but you will win a point. It is time for someone to take a definite action and I believe you are that person. Don't give up.

HAROLD WINTERS.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: Happy to know that my failure to reach you by telephone today was because you were busy trying to extinguish OPA, which is now choking the life of the American form of government and untold numbers of new business concerns like my own. I applied for a price formula on a highly seasonable product in which I have $10,000 invested and they have not had the decency to reply, in spite of two urgent telegrams, throughout a period of 23 days.

Yours truly,

DAVID J. LITTLE.

DENVER, COLO., June 27, 1946.
LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Reports reached me that you intend to filibuster for the purpose of eliminating OPA. Because of my knowledge of the intricacies of OPA as operated, I am in full accord, as I believe are all other thinking Coloradans and Americans. I am sure the complete abolition of OPA now is in the best interests of the Nation. My wonder is, if you are successful in filibustering beyond the effective date of the termination of OPA, will the Senate and the Congress be determined to make law even more stringent thereafter. As amended and as per past performance, OPA is inequitable. Were it possible to make it equitable and realistic, all should be for it. Unless this can be by some definite agreement achieved, I say more power to my understanding of your intentions. Americans want no special advantages, only equal and fair opportunity to compete, to try to win the race. OPA as functioned hasn't learned the meaning of the word "Fair" in most every instance.

FRANK E. MCCAMBRIDGE.

Radio news reporter just said you intended to talk the OPA to death. I compare the OPA to a drunk and I have never known a drunk to get sober by continuing to drink. The only way to recover from OPA is to kill it dead as they say in Texas and let our people once more become fully responsible for their own well-being without malguardianship. All power to your success and I assure you the people of Texas and the United States are behind you 100 percent.

Mr. President, you are listening to the voice of the people. [Laughter.]

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield with the understanding that he does not lose the floor?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am glad to yield with that understanding.

Mr. BARKLEY. Four or five hours ago I suggested to the Senator the possibility of an agreement to vote on the conference report at 9 o'clock tonight. The Senator was not then willing to agree, but he stated that he would give my suggestion consideration, and that I might approach him later with regard to the matter. The hour of 9 o'clock has now arrived, and therefore I do not expect to consummate the understanding instantly. But I wonder if we may agree to vote not later than 12 o'clock tonight?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, I did not realize that time was passing so rapidly. [Laughter.]

Mr. BARKLEY. I may say to the Senator that it has dragged on us, too. [Laughter.]

Mr. O'DANIEL. The time has just rushed by. I had not noticed it go by so fast. It has not been a drag on me. I have been interested in reading the voice of the people. However, I was sincere in my answer to the majority leader when he requested that I enter into an agreement with regard to voting on the conference report by 9 o'clock. When I took the floor I did not intend to make a speech. I have one which I can make, if necessary. I do not intend to make it now. I thought that I would make it at a later hour. I took the floor through the courtesy of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], who wishes to make a speech. I should like to confer with the majority leader, but it is difficult to confer with him and read these telegrams at the same time. If I may dispense with the reading of the telegrams for the time being, and allow the Senator from Oklahoma to take the floor without my losing it, and proceed when the Senator has completed his speech, I shall be very glad to do that.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, would the Senator object if I ask unanimous consent that he insert the remainder of the telegrams in the RECORD without reading?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I want to be fair with all those who have sent the telegrams. It will not take much longer to read the telegrams, but I will do that after the Senator from Oklahoma speaks.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, I do not know anything about any arrangement between the Senator from Texas and the Senator from Oklahoma. The Senator from Oklahoma advised me that he had a brief address to make, and that he expected to get the floor in advance of the Senator from Texas. The Senator from Oklahoma was busy in the Committee on Appropriations during the morning and afternoon, and I assumed that because of that he was not prepared to take the floor at the time he thought he would.

The Senator from Texas has been speaking now for about 5 hours, and it seems we might begin to approach the commencement of an arrangement by which we could vote. I realize how difficult it is for the Senator to give his attention to these telegrams and to me at the same time, and I know that the telegrams have priority over me in the Senator's attention, and I have no complaint of that.

Mr. O'DANIEL. That is only because of the parliamentary situation. If I had my preference about it, I would like to give priority to the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. In view of the Senator's apparent willingness some 5 or 6 hours ago—it was around 3 or 4 o'clock—when he indicated he would give consideration to an agreement to fix a time for voting, I was wondering whether we might approach each other upon that subject and work out an arrangement by which we could bring this matter to a conclusion.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me, with the permission of the Senator from Texas, without his losing any right?

Mr. BARKLEY. So far as I am concerned.

Mr. WHITE. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to something which came to my attention a few days ago in Jefferson's Manual, which is a sort of source material for the rules of both the Senate and the House of Representatives. I find this language, which I shall read, and ask the Senator if it is a precedent, and is appropriate to be urged at this time:

> No one is to speak impertinently or beside the question, superfluously, or tediously.

Does the Senator think that rule laid down in Jefferson's Manual is applicable in the Senate?

Mr. BARKLEY. Is that one of the rules of the Senate? [Laughter.]

Mr. WHITE. I wonder whether, in the absence of a similar rule among the Senate rules, Jefferson's Manual will apply.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not certain whether there is a precedent involved in a ruling from the Chair that that is a matter upon which the Chair could pass primarily, or whether it would have to be submitted to the Senate to decide whether any speech came within those terms. I am not quibbling over technicalities even in Jefferson's Manual. I am very serious in trying to work out a modus vivendi, as is said in Pearl Harbor language.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Will the Senator ask unanimous consent for me to suspend while I talk to him and that I may have the floor again after the Senator from Oklahoma concludes?

Mr. BARKLEY. Would the Senator hold out any hope to me that if we should agree that he suspend while he talks to me the result might be favorable?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Does the Senator mean favorable to abolishing OPA?

Mr. BARKLEY. Oh, no; I mean to reach an agreement about voting. I do not want to go through a futile motion. If there is a prospect, I should be glad to accommodate myself to the Senator. I realize he cannot talk to me and to the Senate at the same time.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Of course, I should like to talk to the majority leader in private about this matter.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator knows I believe in open covenants openly arrived at, and while I am perfectly willing to talk to him privately about it, any agreement we might enter into would have to be entered into here in the Senate.

If the Senator is in a favorable mood, if he is in a reasonable mood, if he is in a mood that he would give consideration to a suggestion of that sort, I shall be glad, so far as I am concerned, to agree that the Senator may suspend for a few minutes while we see what we can do.

Mr. O'DANIEL. And get the floor when we get through seeing?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes, so far as I am concerned, for him to get the floor again. I suppose the Senator has another telegram or two.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes. I am in a favorable mood, and if the Senator will ask unanimous consent——

Mr. BARKLEY. How much time would the Senator want?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I cannot say how much time.

Mr. BARKLEY. I mean to talk to me.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Just until the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS] gets through. I will let him finish.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that, without prejudice to the Senator's occupancy of the floor, he may suspend during the address of the Senator from Oklahoma, and that the Senator from Oklahoma be recognized during that interim.

Mr. LUCAS. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let me ask the Senator from Texas if he would be willing to enter into an agreement that beginning at the hour of 12 o'clock midnight tonight, and during the further consideration of the pending matter, no Senator shall speak more than once nor longer than 1 hour on the conference report?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I would not like to do that, because I yet have hope of getting some converts among Senators on this matter. I do not see any signs of it; but I have hope of it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think, in all good faith the Senator is optimistic on that score.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am of an optimistic nature. I still hope that. I see no signs of it, but I will say to the majority leader, and I appreciate his position, and I want to cooperate as much as I can in getting the bill disposed of, that anybody can realize the futility of one man talking on this bill until Monday. I made the statement yesterday that I would be glad to talk as much as I could on the subject, but that it would be necessary to get some other Senators, who would have the same opinion and the same desire and would like to talk, if we were to talk the OPA to death. I do not see any signs of that around here. I started in early today to read these telegrams because I thought word might get out to the citizens of this Nation, and that some more telegrams would come to some other Senators, and they would get religion right away and come in and want to start talking. I am in that position. I do not care to obligate myself until I can get a breathing spell and talk to the majority leader, but I can say that unless some help comes, and is volunteered pretty soon, we might just as well turn this country back to the OPA.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have done my best to arrange the matter to accommodate the Senator from Texas and other Senators. I have been unsuccessful.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a comment?

Mr. BARKLEY. I have not the floor.

Mr. TOBEY. I merely wanted to point out for the edification of the Senate and the public in general——

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, may I have an understanding that the conversation that is taking place will not deprive me of the floor?

Mr. TOBEY. That is right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. TOBEY. I merely wished to point out to the assembled multitude here that a great tribute is being paid, a silent tribute, to the values inherent in the American cow. I point out that on the desk of the Senator from Texas there is a glass of milk two-thirds gone. He has talked 5 hours on two-thirds of a glass of milk. How far can he go on a quart?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Of milk? [Laughter.]

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, let me in all seriousness, and still not interfering with the Senator's occupancy of the floor, say to him that I think it is the unanimous opinion of Senators present, regardless of their attitude on the conference report, that there should be a vote upon it. I think those who oppose and will vote against it feel that the Senate cannot afford to deny itself the right to vote upon it, and deny the people the right of having the Senate vote upon it. I hope that in view of the situation the Senator will accommodate himself to that feeling, which I think is genuine, and I should be the last one to deceive the Senator with respect to that. I recognize that the Senator is in possession of the floor, and is master of the situation as long as he can hold the floor. The Senator owes it to himself and to the Senate also to facilitate the consideration of a matter of this importance, when Senators wish to vote upon it. I hope the Senator will take that into consideration.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, let me say to the majority leader that I have entertained no hope of defeating OPA by talking it to death unless some recruits come forward among the other Senators. The majority leader states that he thinks there is no chance of that. I should be willing to dispense with any further comments on my part until tomorrow noon, when I presume we will convene again, and if at that time no Senator has told the majority leader that he desires to take part in this debate, I shall be perfectly willing not to attempt to get the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator realizes that the Senate cannot, with that uncertain situation existing, adjourn or recess until noon tomorrow. If the Senate would be willing to fix an hour to vote, even tomorrow, I would not object to a recess being taken tonight. But unless we can obtain some sort of an agreement that will result in a vote I am compelled to ask the Senate to remain in session continuously.

Mr. O'DANIEL. The objective of the effort I am putting forth is to try to get some more telegrams sent to Senators so they will feel inclined to say what they wish to say about OPA.

Mr. BARKLEY. With all due respect to the Senator, I think in that respect he is pursuing a will-o'-the-wisp.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I do not like to dispense with the possibility of such result coming from my plea. If no response comes in by tomorrow noon I am willing to give it up. I think by that time I shall have demonstrated my desire to do my duty. I am trying to do what is right. If no Senator comes along to help by tomorrow noon, I shall not ask for the floor any more, and will let the question come to a vote.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, may I say a word without the Senator from Texas losing the floor?

Mr. O'DANIEL. If the Senator obtains unanimous consent that I not lose the floor, I will yield to him for that purpose.

Mr. WHITE. I ask unanimous consent that I may speak briefly, Mr. President, without prejudice to the rights of the Senator from Texas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WHITE. I want to say a brief word about this situation. I am in very much sympathy with the efforts of the Senator from Kentucky to secure some arrangement by which we can conclude this session at a reasonable hour, and may reassemble tomorrow and dispose of this piece of legislation. I think there is among the whole American people a thorough disapprobation of filibusters. I think they criticize the Senate of the United States on the rare occasions when we talk and talk and talk and postpone definitive action upon legislation of vast importance to the country.

Now, as to this particular piece of legislation, I am not ready to say even now how I shall finally vote, but I do not know of any Member upon the minority side who desires further to discuss the matter. I do not know of any Member of the Senate who desires further to discuss the matter other than the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS]. It seems, if that represents truly the situation which now exists in the Senate, that we ought to find some way to end the discussion and to come to a final determination of the Senate's attitude on this piece of legislation. It is of tremendous importance. The eyes of the whole country are centered on this legislation and on the attitude and the conduct of the Senate with respect to it.

I submit with the greatest respect to the Senator from Texas and to all others who may wish to speak, that we ought to proceed to the voting stage and get this matter to the President in season for action, if he cares to take it either affirmatively or negatively. I very much hope, because I think it will add to the prestige of the Senate with the country, that an arrangement can be worked out by which a voting time can be agreed upon tomorrow.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, I may say that I have the highest respect for the able minority leader, and I realize that this business should be disposed of at the earliest possible date. I think there is plenty of time to dispose of it so that the agency will not die at midnight on June 30. I hope we can decide tomorrow at noon whether or not there are any other Senators at that time who wish to speak. I will take the word of the minority leader as to what the situation is now. But I have hope that there will be a change in sentiment among some Senators. There is a remote possibility of it, but I can see where nothing would be lost if we wait until tomorrow noon to see whether or not any other Senator would want to proceed to talk on this bill.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Oklahoma?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, I am unable to yield to the Senator from Oklahoma unless he receives unanimous consent that I not lose the floor thereby.

Mr. MOORE. I want to ask for unanimous consent. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator——

Mr. O'DANIEL. I cannot yield for that purpose.

Mr. MOORE. Based upon the proposition——

Mr. O'DANIEL. I cannot yield without unanimous consent.

Mr. MOORE. I am going to ask for unanimous consent, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oklahoma?

Mr. HUFFMAN. Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Well, Mr. President, here we are. I have no hope of being able to filibuster the OPA to death by myself. I am calling for volunteers, and I have hope that a great number of American citizens will between now and tomorrow morning realize the situation that exists here, and request their Senators to oppose this bill and to abolish OPA. But that sentiment does not exist at the present time, according to the belief of both the majority and the minority leaders. I do not care to be contentious in this matter. I do want to bring this subject in all its details before the Senate before a decision is made, in case I can get some help. But I do not see any help coming. So I shall continue to read a few more telegrams, and pray that something may happen.

The Gebhardt Chili Powder Co., A. Kronkosky, Jr., of San Antonio, Tex., telegraphs as follows:

Heartily in favor of the stand against OPA. Hoping you are successful in carrying out your plans for forced expiration of OPA Act.

I read another telegram:

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:
We are for you. Hope to wake up Monday morning and find ourselves under American Government.

Wm. A. McAtee, W. C. Porter, R. D. Adams, B. S. Harrison, Geo. Carstens, W. E. Pohlen, Philip Lee Eubank, W. E. Dietert, J. W. Allen, D. A. Skinner

Mr. President, what a grand and glorious feeling that would be.

I read the following telegrams:

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 27, 1946.
Hon. LEE O'DANIEL,
United State Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Senator, congratulations, keep strong. It is fine to know we have Senators who have strong backs and placed Americanism before politics. OPA is oppressive to the point of persecution to property owners and managers. Possession of property to veterans is especially unfair; veterans deserve extra consideration on housing.

BERTHA C. ACKLEY.

LONG BEACH, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Go ahead and filibuster, we're for you.

HOWARD F. MILLETT.
MORGAN A. STIVERS.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Talk till you kill this bill.

J. CURTIS SAMFORD.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Your friends in this locality are hoping and trusting that you will do everything you can to help quash OPA.

W. J. MAERZ.

LEAVENWORTH, KANS., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Kill OPA now. Filibuster long and hard.

SHRINER, O. B. DEMATTEIS
UNIVERSAL TOOL CO.,
Kansas City, Mo.

I read one from O. Dale Smith, of Amarillo, Tex.:

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
All heartily approve of your filibuster. There's no excuse for petroleum being left in bill.

O. DALE SMITH.

Mr. President, the sender of that telegram certainly spoke a mouthful. The idea of holding controls on petroleum when everyone knows that the supply of petroleum greatly exceeds the demand at the present time. It is absolutely foolish to continue those controls. If OPA holds onto control over petroleum, in respect to which it is so apparent that the supply exceeds the demand, naturally OPA will hold control on everything if given the opportunity and the authority. That is the reason I think the bill should not be passed and that OPA should be abolished.

I read several other telegrams, as follows:

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
I deeply appreciate your efforts. Frankly, as both a dairy farmer and a creamery operator, I am convinced that our Nation's dairy industry will suffer great disaster if OPA controls are kept on dairy products.

S. E. KNOWLTON,
Owner, Knowlton Creamery.

MIDLAND, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Member of Congress,
Washington, D. C.:
We want you to know that we are supporting your effort to abolish OPA 100 percent, and heartily endorse your move to organize filibuster and kill OPA entirely. More power to you.

SCRUGGS MOTOR CO.,
MIDWEST MOTOR CO.
WILLIS WHITE MOTOR CO.
ELDER CHEVROLET CO.
MACKEY MOTOR CO.

SANTA BARBARA, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

For heaven's sake, get rid of the OPA. Like most New Deal legislation, it is no good. Free enterprise and American ideals of fair play will solve our economic problems. Throw the New Dealers out.

L. W. NEUSTADTER.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL, from Texas,
Washington, D. C.:

Give the OPA the works. We need industrial freedom. Hope you can organize a filibuster that will last until you witness the death of what is now a national curse—the OPA.

LEYSON PEARSALL CO.

The next telegram is from Santa Monica, Calif.:

SANTA MONICA, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Capitol Building, Washington, D. C.:

Good luck on your filibuster. We are rooting for you.

JOHN KILGORE.

SEATTLE, WASH., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

We are behind you to win OPA battle.

I. W. RINGER,
Secretary, Washington State Retail Grocers and Meat Dealers Association.

HARTFORD, CONN., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL:

OPA must go. Talk until it snows.

CHARLES MCGEE.

There is no sign of it snowing around here very soon.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL.
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

What this Government needs is more men like you who are not afraid to fight for what they know is for the best interest of our country as a whole. Good luck to you in your efforts against the continuance of price control.

J. D. ANSLEY.

UTICA, N. Y., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL:

By all means filibuster OPA, thereby saving the American people their constitutional rights. Congratulations.

GEORGE E. CRESSY.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Keep fighting; we want to beat the OPA.

E. L. BAKER.

SAVANNAH, GA., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

We urge complete abandonment of OPA as our experience with it brands it un-American, unfair, dictatorial, oppressive, and an instrument for the use of those seeking a change of government.

A. F. KING & SON,
Realtors.

WICHITA, KANS., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

We must kill OPA now or resign ourselves to socialism and totalitarian state. Kill OPA extension at whatever cost and return to constitutional government and law of supply and demand and normal business life.

C. C. WHITTAKER.

That is the opinion of many of those who are telegraphing. We must kill OPA now or resign ourselves to socialism and a totalitarian state.

As I have said several times on this floor today, the people of this Nation are depressed. They are heartsick. They have been browbeaten, dominated, dictated to, and regimented for so long that they have just about given up hope. When the people of a nation give up hope, what have we left? The people who have telegraphed to me have renewed hope. That is the reason why I am pleading for time tomorrow, up until 12 o'clock, so that we may hear from many other citizens of the United States who feel that the cause is not lost, and who now see a ray of hope. I feel that they should have the opportunity to telegraph their Senators in Washington. Possibly a change in sentiment will take place. I hope it will.

The next telegram is from Grand Rapids, Mich.:

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

If you kill OPA you have my vote for President.

W. R. BOROUGH.

I am not running for President. I am merely running to kill OPA.

The next telegram is from Houston, Tex.:

HOUSTON, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senator from Texas,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

My family, my many, many business associates and friends give you our wholehearted support in your wonderful fight against the OPA.

JOHN H. BLAFFER.

TEXARKANA, ARK., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Please continue filibuster against OPA.

T. S. HARGIS,
Bowie County Lumber Co.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:

Appreciate your effort to end OPA.

MCCAFFREY RUDOCK
TAGLINE CORP.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Congratulations on your stand regarding the continuance of OPA. The war is over. Let's keep this country American. Let's stop black markets. Let's collect taxes on all the profits. Let's only have laws that can be enforced. Let's give all Americans a chance to remain honest.

R. LESLIE KELLEY.

It seems to me that that is a very sensible telegram. These telegrams are coming from American citizens who like to have their voices heard in the Capital of the United States. They are unable to hire experts and representatives to come to Washington. Many of them are unable to come themselves; so they send telegrams here when they see this faint little ray of hope shining through the clouds. I am reading these telegrams because I feel that it is my duty to do so.

The next telegram is from Pittsburgh, Pa.:

PITTSBURGH, PA., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Your proposed filibuster against OPA would be the best thing that ever happened to our country. We sincerely hope you go through with same.

C. N. HOWLINGSWORTH, Jr.,
WILLIAM ROGERS DRAVO DOYLE CO.

LONG BEACH, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Texas Democrat, Washington, D. C.:

For the sake of every businessman in America filibuster OPA out of existence. We are all for you.

R. F. ADAIR.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

We are behind you 100 percent in your fight against OPA.

C. L., W. B., and J. G. O'BRIEN.

DETROIT, MICH., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Have we given our funds in vain to fight the Gestapo in foreign lands while we yield to one more deadly and savage in our own America? I and millions of mothers who gave beg you destroy every vestige of OPA. Let us have prosperity. Can we help you?

MRS. JOHN A. IRWIN.

That is another very sensible telegram from a housewife.

I and millions of mothers who gave beg you destroy every vestige of OPA.

These American citizens were told, when OPA was first established, that it was a war measure, and that we needed to establish this agency to try to win the war. When the war was over was OPA abolished? No. It continued in operation. There was no unconditional surrender on its part. That bureau is firmly entrenched in Washington. It is a going concern. It has no intention of ever giving up its authority and power to rule over every American citizen who buys or sells. It sets itself up as a dictatorial organization. There it remains. The war has been over for many months. Our brave boys on the field of battle have beaten to their knees in unconditional surrender every one of the Axis Powers. There is no war, and yet we still have OPA. OPA is still with us, trying to save the poor American people from their fate. All it does is to grind them down more and more every day and make slaves of them. It keeps prices of consumer goods down to the point where production is becoming smaller and smaller, and supply less and less. People are becoming more and more hungry, and more and more angry. Yet it is said that we should continue OPA, on the theory that in the future it will be good, that it will commence to put itself in order and release commodities from control when the supply exceeds the demand, when everyone knows that there are now controls on commodities the supply of which exceeds the demand.

Why are such controls continued? Because if the controls are taken off, the employees of OPA will lose their jobs and have nothing to do. They want to keep their jobs. They want to keep the dictatorial power to tell the American people what to do, what to eat, what to pay for it, what to wear, what to buy, what to sell, and what to plant.

For 150 years the American people lived without such dictation from Washington. They refused to take dictation from a foreign power. Yet, we readily submit ourselves and bow down before King OPA. Certain Members of Congress wish to continue it. It may be the proper thing to do to continue it, but I do not think so. I am not questioning the judgment of other Senators, or their motives. I may be all wrong, but if I am, I am honestly wrong. I believe that I have a great deal of support for my contention. As a result of my making a brief announcement to the news reporters yesterday, thousands of telegrams have come to me from all over the United States. It seems to me that the citizens of the United States have a right to express their opinion once in a while on matters which deal with their very lives and all their activities. It seems to me that they should be heard in the Halls of Congress. I am reading their telegrams. I started reading them this afternoon in the hope that the news would spread throughout the United States, that some citizens believed that there was a ray of hope, and that they were telegraphing their Senators in Washington. It was my hope that other citizens might be inspired to telegraph their Senators. I feel sure that Senators have a burning desire in their hearts to please their constituents if they only know what their constituents want. They may be misinformed. But certainly if enough telegrams come to a Senator to let him know that a great many people in his State would like to have him join in an effort to abolish OPA and kill this hideous monster, the Senator will pay some attention to it. I hope that such telegrams will be received.

The next telegram is from El Dorado, Ark.:

EL DORADO, ARK., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Hurray for you. On with filibuster.
W. A. SPEER.

HOUSTON, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:
We, the undersigned voters, congratulate you for your efforts to kill the OPA. Filibuster good way.

SENECA, S. C., June 27, 1946.
Senator "PAT" O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
We are backing you up in your fight against OPA. Put it 6 feet under.
MITCHELL ENTERPRISES.

Put it 6 feet under.

That is where it belongs, Mr. President. But we are trying to give it another year. If it gets another year it will want still another, and we shall be gone.

I now read a telegram from Bartlesville, Okla.

BARTLESVILLE, OKLA., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Just read in newspaper that you contemplate fighting OPA extension to the best of your ability. If filibuster ever was justified it is more than justified against enemies of the American form of government. More power to you from me and the majority of American citizens who wish to retain the American way of life.
A. ARUTUNOFF.

I appreciate that telegram. Some Senators may not like to hear these telegrams. I like to read them.

Here is a telegram from Midland, Tex.:

MIDLAND, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
We want you to know that we are supporting your effort to abolish OPA 100 percent, and heartily endorse your move to organize a filibuster and kill the OPA entirely. More power to you.

Listen to this:

LAS CRUCES, N. MEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Filibuster communistic OPA out of existence before it completely wrecks American industry and private enterprise. Restore constitutional government by killing OPA.
H. C. GILBERT.
H. B. WRIGHT.

Mr. President, the signers of that telegram represent two more American citizens who are urging that they be given back their freedom, as promised them under the terms of the Constitution of the United States of America, the greatest document, other than the Holy Bible, ever penned by man.

I have also received these telegrams:

TEXICO, N. MEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
More power to your filibuster. Keep up the good work. Show 'em there is something in Washington besides fish, fowl, and nuts.
M. C. ROBERTS, Mayor.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
You will receive the thanks of the Nation for killing off the OPA. It is starving the people in food and the businessmen in materials.

HOUSTON, TEX., June 27, 1946.
W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
I support your stand against all President-appointed bureaus and wish you success in your present fight.
Miss MARY ALICE ELGIN.

Mr. President, I am still reading telegrams. All these telegrams have come in today. These are not an accumulation taken from the files. These are spontaneous telegrams thought out and written out by the senders because they see a little ray of hope. They think possibly there will be a change of sentiment in the final citadel of liberty, here in the Senate of the United States. The only place where this measure can be killed at the present time is right here, and I am pleading that it be killed. I cannot kill it all by myself. It will take some help to kill it, but I do not see any help coming.

Will T. Roberts, rural route No. 1, Kansas City, Kans., has sent me a telegram. It is another telegram coming from a good old farmer who lives on a rural route. Those farmers do not have any lobby here in Washington. Will T. Roberts is just a farmer out there. He says:

Stay in and pitch. Filibuster. Kill OPA.

It is not hard to understand that.

From Dallas, Tex., the following telegram comes:

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Please accept this in appreciation of your action against OPA.
TOM STRICKLAND MOTOR CO.

Some of these telegrams come from some of the business firms that have not been put out of business by the OPA. The statistics prepared by the Department of Commerce now use a polite term for those that go out of business. They say, "Business discontinuation." Before the New Deal adopted the technique of having the wrong name for everything, they used to call them business failures. During the war more than 1,000,000 American businesses were forced to the wall. They "discontinued" for one reason or another, and today they are out of business. Some of these telegrams come from the few that are left. I cannot speak for those that are gone. They are out of business—more than 1,000,000 of them. Another million, to keep from having the stigma and disgrace of going broke placed on their shoulders, have transferred their businesses to other people. Those are called business transfers.

Mr. President, we hear a great deal said about the small businessman. From 1941 to 1945 more than 2,000,000 of them were put out of business by the New Deal. Moreover, more than 5,000,000 farmers were driven off the farms of this country. Then is it any wonder that we do not have enough food to eat? The 5,000,000 farmers driven off the farms, whom I have mentioned, do not include the boys who went to war. The 5,000,000 I have mentioned were farmers who simply could not make a living on their farms, so they went into the WPA, and later into the factories. When once they leave the farm, they seldom go back. Work on a farm is too hard. It lasts from before daylight until after dark. But this great big Government of ours says that if a farmer works hard and raises a cow and gets a little milk and skims off the cream and puts it into a churn, and if mother churns it, in the kitchen, and gets a little butter, Chester Bowles will tell her what that pound of butter is worth, and will tell her that the price she gets for it is none of her business—that the butter just belongs to her; that is all. The bureaucrats in Washington are dictating to her as to what that pound of butter is worth.

I know a great many farmers. I myself have done churning. It is hard work. I have milked cows. I have done all the work on a farm, and it is hard work. The farmers milk the cows and skim off the cream and churn the cream into butter and take the butter into town. Perhaps in the town there is a man with a much better job than the job the farmer has, because after all it is impossible to find a job that is much worse than is a farmer's. Perhaps a banker in the town, who is doing fairly well, would like to have some butter on his table. What difference does it make to Chester Bowles or to the OPA or to anyone else, except to the banker and the farmer, what that pound of butter changes hands for? It seems to me we have gotten down to rather small business when we try to tell everyone in the United States how much he can get a pound of butter or a loaf of bread or a pint of milk or anything else he has, it matters not what it is. The OPA crowd are trying to set up an organization in Washington, and now they have the people shaking in their boots for fear that if the OPA is abolished everything will go to the bow-wows. Mr. President, what difference does the exact price make? One American citizen makes the butter or the bread, and another American citizen buys it. Where is there any loss? Those of us who work for the Government receive our salaries—all of us who are sucking the Government's sugar-tit. More than 3,000,000 employees are being paid by the Government. We seem to think we have to tell the people when to get up in the morning, and in fact we even change the clock and try to fool them about when they are getting up. [Laughter.] We are changing the clock and changing the holidays. Then we are told that the prices will not go up. Well, how about coffee? The price of coffee went up. It went up 6 cents a pound. How about butter? The price of butter went up 11 cents a pound. But still we do not get any butter. We just save more money on the butter that we are not able to buy. [Laughter.] In the same way, you can try to go to a store and get some meat, if you have a friend who is running the black market.

So it looks like such a foolish and silly thing to do. It looks as if we have lost confidence in the ability of the American people to run their own businesses.

If we boil the whole thing down, I cannot see anything back of it except a desire to keep this bunch of bureaucrats and Government flunkies on the pay roll, so that they and all their relatives will vote for the New Dealers every time they run for reelection. That is all I can see in it. There may be something else, but in my opinion that is the main thing. I do not think there is any public official in Washington, administering the OPA, who gives a snap of his finger about what anybody pays for a pound of butter or about what those who made the butter get for it or whether they have it or not. I see them; I talk to them. They do not have an ounce of human sympathy in their whole system. They do not care anything about that. All they want is their jobs. They have to do what they are told if they wish to hold their jobs, and that includes voting right.

So, Mr. President, here we are. We have this colossal octopus fastened onto the American people to such an extent that now we are afraid to let go of it. We are scared to death. Where is our freedom from fear? The only freedom from fear we have is no freedom at all. It is fear that somebody will not get elected. God knows that we could not get worse ones elected than the ones we have now. They certainly have gotten this country into the worst fix it has ever been in.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield.

Mr. BRIDGES. Has it been altogether the people elected by the American public who have gotten the country into this mess, or has it been the people who never face an election who have done the harm? Are they the ones who are primarily responsible?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I think the bureaucrats in the Government departments who never have faced an election, or perhaps some of them who were defeated in an election and then came to Washington and were appointed, are some of the ones who have done the dirty work.

But we in Congress have authorized it. The only persons the voting people of American can get back at are those for whom they vote. We in Congress have to take the rap. If we who serve in Congress have done anything for the country that is worth a hoot we should get credit for it. The Congress is the policy-making body of the country. We should get complete credit for any worth-while accomplishments. If anything good should accidentally happen we should get the credit for it. [Laughter.]

If we take the credit for that, we cannot escape taking the responsibility for this mess that we are in now. We in Congress passed the OPA law and we in the Senate confirmed the nominations of the administrators. I have never said a word of ill against any of the administrators. It does no good to pass a law and set up a bunch of bureaucrats in Washington and then, when they start to do something bad, holler, "Wolf! Wolf! Look at Chester Bowles. He is a bad man!" Chester Bowles was hired to do that dirty work. He was picked out for it. His qualifications were examined, just as in the case of any business organization which will look into the qualifications of a man it wishes to hire. When an organization wishes to employ a man who will get a job done, it examines his qualifications before he is hired.

Mr. President, what the administration wanted to do was to overthrow our American form of government. The weapons which it used included the OPA. Chester Bowles was hired as a part of the program. I think he has done a swell job. It has been a dirty job, but he did what he was hired to do. We may talk about having an American form of government; but how can we have an American form of government when a man may not run his own business or work for anyone else, or buy some article without obtaining permission from a bureaucrat in Washington? Not all the damage has been done by the OPA; but no person could get a job administering the OPA unless he were a New Dealer. No one could get a job administering any of the departments of the Government if he were not a New Dealer. Mr. President, I should like to cut loose even one little hold that this giant octopus has on the American people. I am not having much luck, but I am trying to do the best I can. I may be wrong in my understanding of matters, but everyone knows, at least, where I stand. I am against not only the OPA, but I am against the whole New Deal outfit, and I have been against it from the time it originated in 1933 up to the present time. We will never have America until we get rid of the OPA.

Mr. President, we have heard considerable talk about the damage which has been done by the OPA. The New Dealers are in absolute collusion and are working hand in glove with the foreign labor leader racketeers such as Sidney Hillman and others. Those men have the power to call a strike in any division of American industry in which they choose to call out the workers. We witness certain public officials going around and calling labor leaders bad names. Yet, Mr. President, they are all working in cahoots. The American people must pay the bill. The only way to get rid of them is to go ahead and get rid of them. They cannot be eliminated by extending their power from year to year. Do Senators believe that those persons will become good and will improve? Of course they will not. If they improve they will be fired. They must do what they are told to do. They must make good or they will be fired.

I am trying to do what I can with the hope that perhaps I may receive a little help and the OPA will die a natural death on midnight next Sunday. One man telegraphed that we should make July 1 a holiday in the event that OPA dies. I had not thought about that, but if a holiday is suggested around Washington, we may receive some support.

Mr. President, the people throughout the country to whom I have referred are pleading for their lives. They are not asking for hand-outs, subsidies, or appropriations. All they are asking for is to be left alone and to be allowed to operate their own businesses. Yet, are we really looking after their interests? Mr. President, we are afraid that they will be required to pay a nickel more for a pound of butter, which they are unable to obtain. We are worrying ourselves sick in the Senate about the poor people who will have to pay too much for something which they cannot buy. The people are starving to death while they are getting rich on what they are saving on what they do not buy. The predicament is a silly one for us to be in. The people have been regimented so long and pinned down so long that they are about ready to give up, just as did the people in France. Our attitude is, "Let them lie down and go to sleep; we cannot do anything about it."

Mr. President, I have talked to many farmers in my State. I have said to some of them, "If something is not done about food production, the people in Washington will starve to death." I shall not repeat on the Senate floor what one farmer replied to me. I would not want to use the profanity which he employed. But he did not have a great deal of regard for what might happen to the people in Washington.

Mr. President, the American people cannot be outsmarted. They can be pulled down, thrown into chains, and incarcerated in jail, but some day they will rise. They will say, "Oh, no; you cannot do that to me anymore." Then everybody will want to jump on the bandwagon. I can see it coming. In fact, I saw it coming before the OPA bill was originally passed. I am not a prophet. Any person could have seen it. I thought that deceit and deception were being perpetrated upon us when the original OPA bill was brought before the Senate. I thought the bill had been drawn for the direct purpose of overthrowing the American form of government. The NRA had failed and the "blue eagle" had been thrown into the ashcan. But the New Dealers never give up. If they receive a temporary set-back, they put a new hat on the proposal, dress it up, bring it back, and say, "Here; we have another emergency."

Mr. President, a few days ago I heard the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS] make a speech on this floor. He had erected before the Senate a chart, on which there were listed the names of agricultural commodities. He had before him a record of the hearings which were held by his committee on the subject. I refer to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. Here is a copy of the record. If I have time, I shall read it.

Mr. President, the farmers throughout the country are dissatisfied with the OPA. They do not like it. They want it eliminated.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am glad to yield for a question.

Mr. WHERRY. Does the Senator have any telegrams which he received from organizations today or prior to today, similar to one which was sent to me from my State? At the city from where the telegram was sent, 600 farmers are now assembled. They have told me that they want the Congress to abolish the OPA. Has the Senator received any telegrams of that kind?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Many of the telegrams which I have received came from farmers. Not all of them came from organizations of farmers, but they came from individual farmers who gave their rural route addresses.

Mr. WHERRY. Will the Senator from Texas yield for another question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am glad to yield.

Mr. WHERRY. In the telegrams which the Senator has received, or in any telephone conversations which he has had, has he been advised that unless the conference report is rejected there will be violence and strikes throughout the farm areas?

Mr. O'DANIEL. A few minutes ago I read a telegram from a farmer in Georgia which indicated as being true what the Senator has said.

Mr. WHERRY. Yesterday I predicted that if the conference report is agreed to there will be strikes and violence throughout the country. Conditions are bad. A few minutes ago I had a telephone conversation with some farmers of my State who begged me to help kill the OPA.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, I am glad to yield to the Senator for a question, but I cannot yield to him for any other purpose.

I may say that I have received telegrams from many farmers. The situation throughout the country is tense. I am not a calamity howler, but neither the farmer nor any other American citizen can be bound down with chains very long before he will bounce up. The American citizens have been bound down already too long.

Mr. President, my opinion of the OPA is at least consistent. When the original OPA bill was brought before the Senate on January 8, 1942, I was a Member of the Senate. I had been a Member for only a short time, but I was a Member at that time and I still am. I am no prophet, but I have had some experience in business. I could read the plain language of the bill, and I did read it. It was not hard to understand. It was not hard to know exactly what the result of the bill would be if passed. So I rose on the Senate floor and make a few remarks. I was reminded of those remarks the other day when the Senator from Oklahoma was pleading with the Senate to relieve agriculture of this hideous thing known as the OPA. He made an eloquent and forceful address. I thought of the time when, a little more than 4 years ago, I stood on the Senate floor. What did I say at that time that the OPA was? I said that we should not call it a price-control bill but, instead, an antiagricultural bill. Here are my words:

> Mr. President, the antiagriculture bill which is before this body under the name of a price-control bill, is a matter of vital importance, and one which, if put into effect, would greatly affect the welfare of every American citizen.

Mr. President, was that language prophecy? Has the bill not been proven since to be an antiagriculture bill? Has it not affected the welfare of every American citizen?

I am reading from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 88, part 1, January 8, 1942, page 110.

> This price control bill could prove very dangerous and damaging to our Nation.

Has it not?

> And certainly we are all agreed that this is no time to make an unsuccessful venture or experiment which is as hazardous as this proposed price-control legislation.

Mr. President, I was brought up in the West. I know the sentiment of the American people—the rugged individuals of this country, who go out onto the plains of the West and eke out an existence from the soil, true American citizens, the pure American stock. Then here we are legislating, afraid they are going to get too much money for a bushel of wheat, afraid they will get too much money for a pound of butter or a dozen eggs. So we passed this iniquitous bill to hold the American farmer down. They have had these parasites chasing these poor old farmers ever since then. They have them almost scared to death. But the farmers submitted to that because we were in war. Their boys and girls had gone to the front to fight for this Government, to save this Nation, and they did save the Nation.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I send to the desk a privileged motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read.

Mr. O'DANIEL. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Do I lose the floor for the consideration of this?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator does not.

The Chair will read:

> June 27 (legislative day, March 5), 1946
> We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close the debate on the conference report on the bill (H. R. 6042) to amend the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, as amended, and the Stabilization Act of 1942, as amended, and for other purposes.

It is signed by more than 16 Senators. The Chair will file the motion, and the question will be as to whether the sense of the Senate is that debate shall be brought to a close, and it will be passed upon on Saturday 1 hour after the Senate convenes.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BRIDGES. Is the Senate entitled to know the names of the Senators who signed the cloture petition?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is, if any Senator wants the clerk to read.

Mr. PRIDGES. I should like to have the names read by the Presiding Officer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator would not object to the clerk reading them, would he?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read.

The CHIEF CLERK. The signatures are:

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, I feel slighted in not having been asked to sign the cloture petition. We have had such petitions presented in the Senate before, and I offer no criticism whatever; it is in accordance with the rules of the Senate. Every Senator who desires to do so has the privilege and the opportunity of signing a cloture petition.

I have heretofore spoken on this floor with reference to cloture, and I could not say anything meaner about it now than I have said before. Cloture was most effectively put into operation by Hitler on his Reichstag. I had hoped it never would be invoked in what is popularly supposed to be the greatest deliberative body in the world. Nevertheless, I am not objecting to it. It is the privilege of Senators to do it when another Senator conscientiously gets the floor and starts talking, and some of the other Senators get an idea, from the material lying on his desk, that he may talk quite a while. In order to gag him, it can be done. But I am telling my colleagues that the American citizens will know what is happening here, and they are just about fed up on this pussy-footing, this fence-straddling. There is going to come a reckoning some day.

I say again, I am not criticizing Senators. They all have a right to do this. It is in accordance with the rules of the Senate. It will not have any effect on my speech, because I am going to keep right on talking. The main objective of this speech and the reading of these telegrams was an attempt to get word through the "iron curtain" out to American citizens that there is a ray of hope left, that there is an opportunity to recover our American form of government by abolishing one of the most disastrous bureaus that has ever been in the city of Washington.

I was hoping that the word would pierce through. It did go through freely, but some safeguards were set up since the first batch of news went through. I was hoping more news would penetrate through and that the American people would hear that there was an opportunity, that there was a chance to save America, or to start in to save America. Abolishing OPA will not save it. We have to do more than that. But they saw a ray of light, a ray of hope. So these men and women, housewives, farmers, businessmen, preachers, lawyers, school teachers, and all the others of them have been telegraphing me. I suppose they thought the Senator from Texas would read their telegrams, and that their own Senators would hear them. I presume that, in addition, if they had enough money left after they sent me a telegram, they would telegraph their own Senators. The glass of milk is about empty, too. [Laughter.] I thought there might be a change of sentiment in the Senate.

It was never intended that one man should rule the Senate. I do not hope to do that. I have said all along that I could not win this fight without the help of others. I know the limitations of man physically. I did not expect that anything I might say on the floor of the Senate would change the mind of any Senator. I think the minds of few Senators are changed by anything that is said on the Senate floor, regardless of whether the words flow from the lips of the most distinguished, the most eloquent, and the most persuasive Members of the Senate. I think each Senator makes up his mind from several causes, and he has a right to do so, and I hope we continue to have that right.

The main objective of reading these telegrams, as I have said before, was that the people throughout the country might know that there was an opportunity, not that they would telegraph me particularly, but that they would telegraph their Senators, because I believe every Senator on this floor is anxious to know the sentiments of his people back home. This is still a democracy, this is still a republic, we are still representing the people.

If an avalanche of telegrams should sweep down upon the Capitol tomorrow morning from the people of America, I believe Senators would pay some attention to it. I would not want to agree to cut off debate. We are all reasonable men. We change our minds, and I wanted Senators to have the opportunity, if they desired, to change their minds tomorrow morning, or at any time while the bill is before us, if they are in favor of the bill, to have the opportunity to change their minds. That is all I am pleading for, which is the American system as I understand it.

It is not hard to see that the OPA law is unconstitutional, un-American, communistic, unnecessary. Everyone knows that. There are a few people, of course—I do not believe they really are socialistic in their hearts—a few good, honest people who believe we should have OPA. But do they realize that OPA is pure socialism, that it is taking something from their neighbors and putting it in their pockets, that it is a leveling-off system? Is there anyone here who thinks he is inferior to any other American citizen in ability to earn, in ability to produce, in ability to do things? Every American thinks he has plenty of ability, more ability than anyone else, more talent. If just given an opportunity to exercise his talent and his ability, he expects to find a place in the sun—in the economic life of America—and up to the time of OPA he has had such an opportunity, but it is gone today.

I call to mind in particular the case of a young man in my State who had been in business for a few years when he was called to the service. He closed up his business and answered his country's call. He was in the Army 4 years. Fortunately, he came back. He was a good Christian boy and taught a Sunday-school class. When he came back he decided to reenter business. But could he? No; he could not go back into business because of Government regulations. He wrote the whole story to me. He said, "I thought I was fighting for freedom, but I come back home and I cannot even get into business. The Government has certain regulations and certain quotas, and I am precluded from going back into business. Is this America?"

Mr. President, OPA and other New Deal bureaus in Washington are the ones that have sold the American people down the river. The American people would not stand for one moment for a communistic foreign enemy who came to our shores and tried to invade this country and overthrow our American form of government. But the Government has already been overthrown from within. Our only chance now is to recover it. In a football game one team sometimes loses the ball, and then perhaps recovers it shortly. But in this case the ball is gone from us now. Every American citizen knows that to be so.

I do not believe many American citizens want to have the Government in Washington take their part. I think they are willing to slug it out, to fight it out, blow for blow, on the economic field and let the best man win. But here in the Government there are bureaus trying to take sides. It is a very peculiar situation that we here are now taking the side of the largest group in America, the consumer group, which has the most votes.

Mr. President, I was recalling the statement I made on the Senate floor on January 8, 1942, when the original OPA bill was under consideration. I had not been in the Senate very long then, but I considered that I was a Senator the first day I came here. I read from my statement made then:

I regard this price-control bill as a very unwise and unsound piece of legislation.

That is what I said then. Many people now agree with that statement.

In all of the argument put forth in behalf of this price-control bill, I have noted that the discussion has been between various Senators who appear to be interested in making this distasteful legislation more palatable to the farmers of America—

Make it more palatable so they could swallow it. Sugar-coat it.

Since it is apparently a recognized fact that the farmers will suffer most under such a law; and I have been hoping that someone would raise the thought that the entire price-control bill should be abandoned and something thoroughly sound and workable substituted in place thereof, instead of trying to patch up a weak and unsound price-control bill by adding amendments.

Mr. President, it is as unsound as it can be. Anyone can see that. It did not take a prophet to see it. Anyone can see that when it is attempted to set up an organization and bureau in the Government to establish on everything in America a price which will be satisfactory to both the buyers and the sellers, the task is impossible. It cannot be done. There is no one smart enough to do it, even if he wanted to do it. It cannot be done. Pick out two Senators, one has an article and the other does not have such an article, and let all the other Senators try to decide at what price the one who has the article should sell to the one who does not have such an article. It will be found that no satisfactory agreement can be reached. In this case it is the American people who must swallow the pill. I continue to read:

Mr. President, I am opposed to the passage of any bill designed to set up a governmental authority for the purpose of fixing prices along the general lines contemplated in this bill when, in my opinion, it is possible to accomplish the task in a more practical way by an entirely different kind of a bill, which I shall presently explain.

It is useless to condemn any plan unless a better plan can be provided. I condemned OPA, and I proposed something that I thought was better. I said this 4 years ago. I want Senators to know that I was here then and made this statement. I do not think they were paying much attention to what I said then, because they went right ahead and did just the opposite from what I recommended. And they have been doing the opposite ever since. But the situation will change some day. Things will be different.

Whenever we vest in the hands of a governmental price administrator or some governmental board the power to fix prices either of all commodities or of a selective group of commodities, we are in my judgment, setting up an agency which is potentially dangerous and which may be with us—and which may be with us long after this war has been fought and won.

Listen to this, Senators—

If any Member of the Senate can refer back to anything any Senator said at that time that has come as nearly true as has that passage of mine, I should like to go along with him. The OPA has done exactly what I said it would do, and, if it is extended, I make the statement now that it will continue to do more and more of the same iniquitous thing. That is all it can do. If you get milk out of a cow today you will get milk out of the cow tomorrow. If you have gotten this kind of a mess out of OPA for the last 4 years you will continue to get the same mess out of OPA if you continue to keep it alive. I said this 4 years ago last January:

I certainly do not question the sincerity of purpose of the Members of the House and the Members of the Senate who are urging this character of legislation, but I do question their judgment.

I am not going to question the sincerity of purpose of any Senator. Every Senator is on an equality here. It is not up to me to question the sincerity of other Senators. We were under the stress of war when I made that statement. But I do question the judgment of some Senators. I have been doing it ever since, and I still do it. I said:

I wonder if they are considering and if they have considered all the implications of this measure, and what will be the practical results. I wonder, in the first place, what they hope to accomplish by such legislation.

What have we accomplished? Everyone is angrier at the other than he was then. Prices are no more satisfactory now than they were then. No one is more satisfied now than he was then. It is simply impossible to please everyone. When you try to run the other fellow's business, and he has not hired you and paid you to do it, you are not going to do a very good job for him.

I receive a great deal of mail, but out of the thousands of letters I have received, not one person has ever asked me to initiate any price-control legislation.

Is that not strange? Texas is a very large State. It has a population of more than six and one-half million, and I was pretty well acquainted with some of the people in Texas, and they were pretty well acquainted with me. But here comes a New Deal administration bill into the Senate, and not one single individual citizen in the State of Texas had ever asked me to have any legislation of that kind introduced. The people of Texas were not asking for it. They were not clamoring for it. Where did the idea originate? Who asked for it? Did the people ask for it? I never heard of any of them who asked for it.

Who is it that is wanting this kind of legislation?

I asked that question. No one answered.

I can answer for the farmers and ranchers of my State by saying that they do not want any price-control legislation at this time; but if it must come, they want all agricultural commodities excluded.

The Senator from Oklahoma is still trying to get those agricultural commodities excluded. They never will be excluded so long as there is an OPA. The OPA likes to have them included. The OPA will make all kinds of promises, but will not exclude anything.

And if agricultural commodities are not excluded, they certainly want the control of agricultural-product prices left to the Secretary of Agriculture.

It was an old-fashioned idea that agricultural affairs should be left in the Department of Agriculture; but that was what I was advocating. The Department of Agriculture is ruled by the Secretary of Agriculture. He has a Cabinet post. That is not a new bureau. The Secretary of Agriculture for many years in this Nation has performed a great service, not only to the farmers but to the entire population. You cannot do anything that will benefit the farmers without benefiting those who like to eat the products produced by the farmers. You cannot injure the farmers without injuring the entire Nation. I was not speaking particularly for the welfare of the farmers. Many farmers tonight are sleeping with peaceful minds and full stomachs, while many who are not farmers are not so fortunate. The farmers will take care of themselves all right.

Surely nobody would be so absurd as to claim that the farmers of this Nation are profiteering.

If they are not profiteering, why try to reduce the prices paid to them, and hold them down?

So why aim a bill directly at them?

Surely, it would be unwise for this Government to have one department, the Department of Agriculture, telling the farmers to let a certain percentage of their land lie idle in order to bring prices up, and have another department of our Government, the proposed price-control czar, forcing farm commodity prices down. That is what we shall have if we continue the present Department of Agriculture and set up another price-control department to set farm prices.

In the New Deal government, an emergency must be created and then another bureau must be set up to handle it. That makes two bureaus. Never let it be said that the New Deal will get by with one bureau when it can have two.

Certainly this bill does not contemplate raising prices to the farmer. Consequently, it is intended to do exactly the opposite of what the Secretary of Agriculture is now trying to do. Is that not an inconsistent position into which the Senate is considering plunging this Nation?

Think of it. This great Government of ours sets up one department to help raise the prices of commodities which the farmer produces, and another department to hold the prices down. But the only thing that is produced is more bureaus and more regimentation. The result is not the production of any more food, as we have all learned.

Certainly the laboring people do not want such a bill. At least none of them have asked me to initiate such legislation. The rank and file of labor knows full well that the wages of labor at every turn of the route on consumer goods from producer to consumer have the direct effect of increasing prices. They know that this bill effectively to lower commodity prices, or even to keep them from advancing, tends to lower wages, or hold them where they are, and in all events to prevent any wage increases.

The labor people knew that.

Surely wage earners do not want price control, unless wages are excluded, or unless the price control is placed under the Secretary of Labor on all commodities as to which wages are a component part of the price, which, of course, would include practically every commodity in the Nation.

I continued in that address on the floor of the Senate 4 years ago last January:

Now, if the farmers and ranchers and laboring people do not want this price-fixing legislation, who else is left that might want it? Somebody might suggest that the consumers want it. Well, the farmers and ranchers and laboring people constitute most of our consumers, but surely if any other consumers wanted price-fixing legislation, they would want prices fixed on the things they buy at the place where they buy them, and this bill does not provide for price fixing of all retail commodities. I do not believe that the few consumers remaining outside of the group of farmers and ranchers and laboring people are interested in fixing prices of farm products, or any other products, except at retail stores where they do their trading. Even a casual investigation of the prices the farmer gets for his products and the prices the consumers pay for finished products processed in whole or in part from farm commodities will reveal that there is little connection.

For instance, the price of beefsteak in Washington was recently checked, and the retail price was found to be 75 cents per pound—

That was 4 years ago. One could buy beefsteak. It was for sale at 75 cents a pound—while 1 year previously it sold at 45 cents per pound.

Remember those good old days when beefsteak was 45 cents a pound.

During the same year that the price of beefsteak advanced from 45 cents per pound to 75 cents per pound in Washington the price of beef cattle in Texas declined 1 cent per pound.

Was there any connection? In Texas we got 1 cent a pound less for beef cattle, and up here the price of meat advanced from 45 to 75 cents a pound.

What advantage would consumers have from having a price-control czar fix the price the farmer gets for his wheat? Consumers do not eat wheat, and they do not buy it direct from farmers. Consumers eat bread, and the price paid for a slice of bread here in some Washington restaurants would be equal to more than $30 per bushel for wheat, while our farmers get around $1.25 per bushel. The price paid for a cotton handkerchief here in Washington is $1,250 per bale for cotton, while this bill proposes to hold the farmer's price to less than $100 per bale. How does it help the consumer for a price-control czar to set the price of cotton at 19 cents per pound to the farmer and exercise no control whatever over the retail price of the cotton handkerchief and other cotton goods purchased by consumers?

That has been changed since the bill was originally introduced. Now everything is included. Later in my speech I mentioned that if the OPA ever got started it would get everything under its control.

Mr. President, I do not mean to imply that the vast difference between farm prices and consumer prices is all profit. It includes manufacturing costs, transportation costs, handling costs, other expenses, and profit. But I do contend that to protect the consumer, the retail price and all intermediate prices are just as important as the farmer's price. The distinguished Senator from Michigan [Mr. Brown] has repeatedly stated that price-fixing legislation is intended primarily to benefit consumers. It must be apparent to all who study this problem that in order to actually benefit the consumers by price fixing we must fix retail prices, because regardless of what we include in the first price-fixing bill we pass, it is obvious to me that if we are going to attempt to fix prices by law, in the end we will be forced to fix prices on everything.

Was that prophecy? If the camel once gets his nose under the tent, he will get in. I knew what the New Deal bureaucrats would do.

So, before we start out on this road of passing price-fixing legislation, vesting in the hands of a price-fixing "czar" in Washington the power to tell every retail merchant in the country what he shall sell a yard of cloth for, what a farmer shall sell a pig for, and what a manufacturer shall sell every article he makes for, I think it is well for us to consider most carefully the ultimate dangers and probable results of such legislation.

We did not study the problem very carefully. We went ahead blindly and passed the bill. I voted for it. After it was amended and fixed up I voted for it for one reason only, and I have explained it many times. We were at war. The fate of the Nation was hanging in the balance. We had to whip some foreign nations. Everyone in America could not conduct the war. We had to have a head. Our Constitution provides for it. It is a great Constitution. It provides for a Commander in Chief. The Commander in Chief said that he wanted the OPA price bill passed, and I voted for every war measure that our Commander in Chief asked for. I intend to vote for every other measure that any other Commander in Chief asks for, if I have the opportunity. I believe in our American form of government. I believe in preserving it at all costs. But just as soon as the war was over I introduced a bill in the Senate to abolish OPA. It was first established because we were at war. I say that when we get out of war we ought to get back to where we were, so far as our form of government and our system of private enterprise is concerned.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. I wanted to ask the Senator a question. Does the Senator recall that on VJ-day, or shortly after VJ-day, the President of the United States made a statement in which he took rationing off gasoline, and said that other controls would come off in the very near future? I ask the Senator if he recalls that statement; and, secondly, if the controls which were referred to have come off?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I recall some statement to that effect. I do not know the exact wording of it, but I have not seen any controls coming off. What I am trying to do tonight is to get the controls off. The only way to get them off is to abolish OPA. We cannot continue OPA unless it functions and does something; and it is certainly not going to do anything to put itself out of business. So it is not going to take any controls off. It is not interested in the welfare of the American people. It is interested in continuing bureaucratic control over the American people, and that is all.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. Can the Senator think of anything more difficult than getting a bureaucrat to yield up control?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I have never yet seen it done.

Mr. BRIDGES. That would be pretty nearly the $64 question, would it not?

Mr. O'DANIEL. It is worth more than that.

Mr. President, I further stated at that time:

My experience has been primarily that of a businessman, and I am mentioning some of the commonplace ideas which occur to me about this type of legislation, with the hope that some of the things which I mention may result in causing the Senate to give more careful consideration to some features of this proposed legislation.

Right here I want to take occasion to express my 100-percent disagreement with a philosophy of government which it seems to me is rather prevalent today, that is, whenever we have a job to do and appoint a man as an agent of the Government or as a member of some bureau, board, or commission, the action of making him a public official automatically endows him with all the wisdom of Solomon, and gives positive assurance that the problem which we have thrown into his lap will be properly and completely solved. It seems to me that too much of the legislation which we pass is nothing more than passing the buck by simply leaving the particular problem unsolved, and creating some board or commission with instructions to solve it.

We all know, or should know, that price control was an impossible task. We knew that we could not write a law which would accomplish it, so we simply passed the buck to someone else. Since then we have been kicking around those in that department because they have not done the impossible. They could not operate the Office of Price Administration satisfactorily.

On January 8, 1942, I further said:

Based on the experience which I have had in business, I can foresee many difficulties which will arise from any attempt to fix prices by law. For instance, we must have the maximum production from every industry in this country at this time if our national-defense program is to move forward as rapidly as we hope it will. This means that we must utilize not only our most efficient manufacturing plants, but that we must also utilize our inefficient plants. If a flat price is set on any commodity high enough to enable that the least efficient plants can operate, the result will be that the most efficient plants will be earning a tremendous profit.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am glad to yield to the Senator from New Hampshire for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. Did the Senator ever hear this statement before—and I am quoting:

I think that the black market in meat has been very wildly exaggerated.

Did the Senator ever hear that statement before?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes; I have heard that statement.

Mr. BRIDGES. Did the Senator know that that statement was made by one Chester Bowles on April 16, 1946?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes, sir; I knew that.

Mr. BRIDGES. And does the Senator think Chester Bowles was as correct in that statement as he has been in some other statements he has made in the past?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I think he was just about as correct in that statement as he has been in most of the statements he has made. But he was entirely off.

Mr. BRIDGES. Has the Senator ever heard this statement before:

I would say that we are in the business of keeping the law of supply and demand from working.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I do not remember that statement, but I know they are in that business. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. Paul Porter made that statement, and I was interested in knowing whether the Senator from Texas had ever heard it, because that is quite a significant statement.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes; it certainly is.

Mr. President, in the speech I made on January 8, 1942, I said:

Think of all the problems which would be involved in controlling the prices of wholesalers and retailers. What standards would we adopt? Suppose we took the standard of prices which exist today, and said by law they could not be increased; there would be a thousand ways by which such a law could be evaded. The wholesaler could increase the price to the retailer and state that, so far as the price of the merchandise was concerned, no increase had been made, but that he was furnishing services now which he had not heretofore furnished, in the form of advertising or special discounts; in fact, other things too numerous to mention.

Manufacturers or wholesalers could charge the regular fixed prices for certain commodities, but they could force their customers to take with those commodities other articles which did not have fixed prices, and by putting high prices on those items, they would obtain for the job lot a very profitable price. There are hundreds of marketing combinations and schemes which wide-awake merchants can work out and do it perfectly legitimately, within the law.

I was simply pointing out the things that could happen. Everyone knows that they have happened since that law was passed. I simply emphasize the fact that the American citizens have been taught to use their brains for thinking purposes, and they are going to continue to do that, and they are thinking rather solidly right now.

I continue to read from my January 8, 1942, speech:

Whenever we attempt to fix rigid prices, the small industries of the country will suffer more than the others—

I guess that was true. In fact, they suffered so much that the Senate and the House of Representatives set up small business committees to try to save them. More than 2,000,000 of them are not in business now, although, according to the official report of the Department of Commerce, they were in business when I made that statement in 1942.

I read further from the same speech:

Whenever we attempt to fix rigid prices, the small industries of the country will suffer more than others, the reason being that as the larger industries, which are more fully engaged in national defense, daily take more and more of the efficient workmen, the smaller industries will of necessity be called on to operate largely with those who are less efficient, and this lessening of efficiency must of necessity increase community prices. The larger industries produce in larger volume, and volume production automatically produces at lower costs.

They are trying to put all industry in America in a strait-jacket, and they are trying to put all our industries in the same category. That simply cannot be done successfully. Today we are reaping the results. Most of the giant industries in this country sprang from small businesses. They started in a small way, and with the right kind of management and thrift they grew into the larger industries. But here we come along and at one fell swoop attempt to put all of the small industries out of business. How can we expect to raise a crop of large ones when we put all the young ones out?

In the same speech I also said:

It may be said that the price legislation does not seek to go as far as the matters which I am here discussing. The answer to that is to me obvious; no matter how we start in this field of price fixing, in the end we are going to have to go all the way if we get the job done. So we had as well consider now the whole program before we start out on this course.

Well, we have gone the whole way, clear up to tonight. The war is over. Here we are. We still have the OPA with us.

In the same speech I said:

I think it is inevitable, if we start out on the line indicated in the proposed legislation, that sooner or later, either in the pending bill or in some subsequent bill, we will have legislation which will attempt to fix wages by law.

Well, we have it.

I also said:

and to state that there shall be no increases in wages.

Well, we have it.

I also said at that time:

Whenever we do this, we will be taking the very last step in regimenting the lives and daily efforts of all our citizens; and, furthermore, I think we would be attempting to do that which we could not do under the Constitution.

We got out from under the Constitution, in order to do it, and we did it. We are fixing wages and everything else now.

In that speech I also said:

I say that whenever this Government undertakes to put into effect a price-fixing law which will actually get the job done and which will prevent inflation, we had just as well expect at that time to create a department which, sooner or later, will employ seven or eight hundred thousand people to do the necessary price-fixing, policing, and enforcing.

Mr. President, we now have more than 250,000 paid and unpaid OPA employees, but we have not yet done the policing. It would take more than I prophesied then—the 700,000 or 800,000 I then prophesied—to police the OPA job and catch all the black marketeers on both sides of the fence.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. Has the Senator from Texas by any chance received a message from the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER] that he is flying back to Washington to assist in the job on the OPA legislation?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I have not received a telegram from the Senator from North Dakota or from any other Senator that he is flying back to help in this fight, but I shall be grateful for the help of any Senator. The Senator from North Dakota is certainly a good one at talking; and he is a good one at getting votes, according to the way I understand the election in North Dakota went.

Mr. BRIDGES. I ask the Senator from Texas if he heard a rumor to the effect that the Senator from North Dakota is flying to Washington at this time.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes; I heard that rumor here. I have a very keen ear for rumors. It just floated by here a few minutes ago, and I heard it. As I said earlier in the evening, I have been looking for what would seem to be the impossible. I am looking for some converts to this cause.

I should like to say to the Senator from Oklahoma, before he leaves, that I am trying my best to get to the point where I can yield the floor to him. I just wanted a few minutes from him back there yesterday afternoon or this afternoon, or whenever it was. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. When the Senator's keen ear picked up the rumor which passed by—the rumor that the Senator from North Dakota is flying back to Washington to help out—did that rumor lend encouragement to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Oh, yes, sir. The Senator from New Hampshire does not know just how much this Senator appreciates just a teensy weensy little bit of encouragement. [Laughter.] I recognize it and I appreciate it and I hope it will come. It will be encouragement that is justified, and thus we shall get some reinforcements here before it is too late.

In my January 8, 1942, speech I also said:

It is not unreasonable to expect that to get the job done might ultimately require the services of a million employees—

Mr. President, just listen to this—because every citizen of the United States would be a potential law violator.

I am glad I made that speech. I am proud of it. Almost every American citizen has become a little bit more than a potential law violator, if we consider OPA edicts the law of the land.

I also said:

And if we can believe the experience which we had in attempting to enforce that noble experiment known as the NRA, I believe my colleagues will agree with me that we would need an army of employees to make a price-fixing law work, even if we could make it work under those conditions. If it did not work fully and completely, it would fail completely and bring ruin in its wake.

Mr. President, it did not work completely. It has failed completely and it has brought ruin in its wake, to such an extent that the housewives of this country on this very day are unable to get enough of the proper food for their families. Every American citizen knows that to be true, and it is all due to the iniquitous OPA Act, which is in the process of being renewed by this august body of Senators tonight. I am standing here as a lone wolf letting everyone know that I am against its renewal. I alone cannot prevent it. The majority of the Senate will rule. I would rather have that happen than to prevail against the majority, even though I know I am in the right. I wish to keep the Senate functioning. I wish to keep it in authority. But so long as I am a Member of the Senate I will say what I believe and I will contend for what I think is right.

Four years ago, when we were considering the OPA bill, I said:

It is claimed that this price-fixing bill will prevent or retard inflation. That is contrary to my belief; in fact, I believe it will tend to increase inflation.

Well, it has. We have inflation now. It is on a rampage.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask that the Senate be in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will please be in order.

The Senator from Texas may proceed.

Mr. O'DANIEL. In my speech of January 8, 1942, I further said:

I make that statement because, by arbitrarily holding farm commodity prices down, we are sure to lessen production, and all economists agree that as the stock of consumer goods decreases, inflation increases. In my opinion, it is possible to control inflation, but not by price fixing, and especially when the avowed intention of this price-fixing bill, as stated by its sponsors, is to benefit consumers by reducing prices to the farmers, or at least prevent any substantial advance to the farmers. It appears to me that the philosophy of the bill is backward. If we reverse the process and enact legislation to increase the prices to farmers, and take off all restrictions as to acreage planted, the farmers of America will increase their production of consumable goods, and that will tend to retard inflation, according to most economists' theories.

Mr. President, I ask Senators to listen to that statement. I made it on the floor of the Senate on January 8, 1942. I wish it to be known that I am not posing as a prophet, or the son of a prophet. I have merely read a statement which I made in 1942, and anyone may know how my predictions came true if they will but study the bill.

Little attention is now being paid to production of food because we have some surpluses, but with few other nations able to produce food and most of them too poor to buy it, we will face a starving world after the war, if not before the war ends; and now is the time to fill our present storehouses and build more and more food storehouses and pack them to capacity. Unless we do this, there may come a time when we will be as desperately in need of food as we were caught desperately short of war equipment.

Mr. President, that prophecy has come true. We did not build the additional storehouses. We did not give any encouragement to the farmer to increase his production when we knew that all the world was embroiled in a war. We knew that the war would end, and we knew that we would win. And we also knew that the foreign nations engaged in the war would be destitute when the war ended, and that starvation would stalk the world. Every Member of the Senate should have known it. I said it would take place. No one denied the truth of what I said. What I said appears in black and white in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I said that after the war ended, if not before, we would face a famine. All over the world, including our own country as well, there are hungry people who are unable to buy food, although, so far as our own country is concerned, they have the money with which to pay for it. For what little food they do buy they must sneak around the corner and buy it from a bootlegger—a black marketeer. Yet, Mr. President, we are trying to perpetuate that situation. We are trying to continue in control a dictatorial government bureau whose friends are engaged in the black market. Why would those persons want the OPA discontinued?

I continue reading from the speech which I made on January 8, 1942:

Are we to allow inflation to run rampant in this country? Are we to allow all of the evils which come with inflation to go unchecked? My answer to that is very definitely "no."

Mr. President, it seems to be customary when any American citizen fights this communistic bureau that some persons are always ready to say, "Oh, you want inflation." I do not believe any honest American citizen wants inflation. We all know how inflation destroys the substance of cur land. On January 8, 1942, I said, "Very definitely no." My answer still is, "Very definitely no." We do not want inflation, but we are getting it every day. Inflation has been on the increase and is running rampant at the present time. We are raising wages one day and raising commodity prices the next. Where will the procedure end? It is one continuous cycle. It is a spiral. The price of everything is going up. Mr. President, there is a way to prevent inflation, and there was at the time to which I have referred.

Allow me to continue reading from my speech.

I have in mind a perfectly reasonable method whereby we may prevent any unreasonable inflation in this country. The first thing I would recommend would be for the Government itself to stop doing those things which tend to bring about inflation. For instance, if all contracts for Government work were let in a fair and reasonable way, and if a bonus were paid to the contractor based on the amount of money he could save on the estimated cost of the project, instead of awarding contracts on a fixed fee, plus a percentage of the total cost, we would in that case be serving the taxpayer's interests and saving the taxpayer's money, and we would at the same time be preventing conditions in which costs are unreasonably increased and in which the very nature of the contract is such that the more it costs, the more profit the contractor makes. Certainly the Government should have an inflexible rule in awarding contracts, that every contract should carry a provision that it would pay a bonus to the management on the basis of the money saved. It is my belief that the power of the Federal Reserve bank has not yet been used to its full capacity to prevent inflation.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does the Senator believe that measuring the effectiveness of OPA operations by a cost-of-living index is almost meaningless when so many of the items making up the index are unobtainable?

Mr. O'DANIEL. It is perfectly absurd.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does the Senator also believe that when consumers must pay for subsidies two or three times as much as the price of commodities the measuring effect would be rather meaningless?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Absolutely.

Mr. BRIDGES. When prices are quoted for unobtainable articles the measure which is used would be meaningless, would it not?

Mr. O'DANIEL. It would be plain deceit and deception, and an attempt to fool the people.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does the Senator believe that a great deal of the trouble which has arisen during the past few years has developed a sort of general mental condition which causes people to rely on the Government?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, I believe that what the Senator has referred to is one of the most damaging results of the New Deal bureaucracy which have occurred to our Nation. I refer to the effect it has had upon the minds of the people, especially the young people. Persons who were possibly 10 years of age at the beginning of the New Deal era knew very little, if anything, about business, and are now 24 or 25 years old, and all they know is the New Deal philosophy.

Mr. BRIDGES. Has the Senator ever heard it said before that the trouble has been that during the last few years there has developed a state of mind, a psychological condition which causes people to rely on the Government? They say, "The Government must do this for me, the Government must do that for me. I must call on the Government to do it, and I have a right to ask that the Government shall do it, and if the Government does not do it I will curse it." Did the Senator ever hear that statement?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes. That is why the pressure groups are organized for the purpose of coming to Washington to obtain appropriations.

Mr. BRIDGES. I am glad that the Senator remembers the statement. I know that it was made by Mr. Green, the president of the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I did not remember that he was the author of the statement, but he is a good person from whom it could come.

Mr. President, continuing with the reading of my speech made against the OPA on January 8, 1942, I said:

Furthermore, it seems to me it is possible for the Treasury Department to do far more than it has done.

I was speaking of doing something to retard inflation.

When it is necessary to secure additional funds, it should secure those funds directly from the citizens rather than borrowing them through our commercial banks, because when we borrow funds, that within itself is inflation, whereas securing the money from the citizens tends to prevent inflation, and the interests of the Government would be served alike in each case.

As I understand, the basic cause of inflation, as connected with our present war effort, is occasioned from the fact that the pile of consumer goods is reduced for many reasons. It is reduced by virtue of the fact that millions of people who have heretofore been engaged in the process of producing consumer goods have been moved over to the national-defense industries. Therefore, we have fewer producers within this field of consumer goods. Another reason is that the functioning of the priority system, which gives preference to defense industries, causes the consumer-goods industries to produce under capacity because they do not have enough raw materials. All these things, and others, combined, result in a constantly dwindling supply of consumer goods and a dwindling supply of consumer goods produces inflation.

On the other hand, the almost 100-percent employment of all our citizens at increased wages has resulted in a combined increase in the purchasing power of most of our people. In other words, most of our people find themselves in the position of having more money to spend for consumer goods than they possibly have ever had before, but there are fewer goods to be bought. Then the competitive bidding for the small supply of consumer goods begins, and what we are interested in here today is to find a way to prevent the inflated prices, which it appears are inevitable, if prices are not checked.

To me it seems to be more or less a simple problem how to restore equilibrium between the quantity of consumer goods we have for sale and the amount of money which the people have with which to buy these goods. We already have a tremendous deficit in this country. In addition to that we are spending money at a tremendous rate. We are honest, and we expect to pay our debts, and it seems to me that right now is the time to start working toward that end. I believe that if instead of passing price-control legislation, which means creating another board or bureau to regiment the business of this country to tell us what we can do and what we cannot do, if we would adopt a proper system of taxation and enforced savings so as to take this excessive purchasing power out of the market for consumer goods, the result would be that we would retard inflation and get the job done in a sound, positive, and practical manner.

Many business institutions in this country today are earning enormous profits because of the added volume of work incident to the national-defense program. I think the first thing we should do is to enact an excess-profits-tax law which would be based on a fair formula to determine excess profits, and this law should then tax all profits 100 percent in excess of a reasonable earning.

Then there is another thing which it would be necessary to do, and that is to withdraw from the competitive field of buying all excess earnings of our people. Therefore, I believe that along with a 100-percent excess-profits tax on business should go a combination of excess-earnings tax and compulsory savings tax on individuals.

Let me illustrate just what I have in mind. If a corporation has earnings of a million dollars in excess of fairly determined normal earnings which it enjoyed during the period immediately preceding our national emergency, the Government would tax that million dollars 100 percent.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am glad to yield for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does the Senator have the date handy when the OPA legislation was passed?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I do not have that date before me.

Mr. BRIDGES. Was it sometime early in 1942?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes; it was soon after I made the speech from which I have been quoting.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does the Senator know whether or not there was a roll call on that particular vote?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes; there was.

Mr. BRIDGES. And does the Senator recall what the roll call showed?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I do not remember the exact roll call.

Mr. BRIDGES. There were some votes in opposition at that time, were there?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes; I think so.

Mr. BRIDGES. The Senator does not have the list?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I do not have the list before me.

Mr. BRIDGES. Will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. Would the Senator be surprised to know that a Washington housewife would pay today at least $18 for the same bundle of groceries she could buy in 1939 for less than $11?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I would not be surprised at that.

Mr. BRIDGES. Would the Senator call that good price control?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I claim we have had no price control. Prices have been out of control.

Mr. BRIDGES. Will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does the Senator know that if the same woman shopped at one of the higher-priced grocery stores in Washington she would pay $26.20 for the same groceries?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I would not be surprised.

Mr. BRIDGES. Would the Senator call that adequate price control?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I would not.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does the Senator know that if the same shopping had been done in 1939 in chain stores here in the District of Columbia the cost would have been $10.94?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I did not know that.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does he know that if the same list were bought at chain stores today, the same lot of groceries would cost $18.06?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I expect it would.

Mr. BRIDGES. Would the Senator call that good price control?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I would not call that good price control.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does the Senator know examples of commodities which are necessities of life which can be bought at comparable figures to the prices of 1939?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I do not.

Mr. BRIDGES. In fact, does he not believe that prices generally have had a tremendous rise?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I believe they have. It is common knowledge.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does he believe that this bill, as reported by the conference committee, will correct that?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I think that the damage has already been done, and that prices are bound to increase a great deal more.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does he think this particular bill is going to have any effect one way or another?

Mr. O'DANIEL. In the long run, no. I think prices will go up just as much with this bill as without it.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does the Senator believe that we might get a quicker adjustment of prices to reasonable levels if we had an outright repeal of OPA rather than sort of a slow strangulation of OPA?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I think the only way to correct the price situation is to free prices from control and let those who buy and sell determine what the price of every commodity shall be. That would be the quick way, and it would be the surest way. If prices stayed up, production would increase gradually to such a point that prices would soon go down again.

Mr. BRIDGES. How long does the Senator believe it would be before they would start leveling off?

Mr. O'DANIEL. The time would be different for different commodities, depending on when they could be produced, and depending on seasons, and strikes, and other factors.

Mr. BRIDGES. The Senator does believe, does he not, that production is the answer to our problem?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Production is the only answer to the problem of keeping prices down. We must produce in order to keep prices down.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield to the Senator from Kansas for a question only.

Mr. REED. I shall observe the Senator's prerogatives and the Senate rules.

The Senator just mentioned production. I wish to ask him if he does not come from the largest petroleum-produring State, Texas.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Oh, yes; I admit that. I am proud of it.

Mr. REED. The Senator is aware of the fact, is he not, that the production of petroleum in the United States today exceeds the demand for petroleum. Is that correct?

Mr. O'DANIEL. It is absolutely correct.

Mr. REED. And for months past the OPA has been giving those of us from the oil States an intimation that it was going to leave the controls upon petroleum. Is that correct?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I understand that to be correct.

Mr. REED. And the last time the Senator from Kansas, who is speaking now, had the floor, he was interrupted by the Senator from New Mexico, who inquired if the Senator from Kansas wanted performance instead of conversation. Is performance what the Senator from Texas wants from the OPA?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I want the OPA to be abolished. I do not want nor expect any performance from them.

Mr. REED. The Senator does not want either performance or conversation, because all we get from OPA is conversation. Is that correct?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes. I do not believe a word they say, and everything they do, in my opinion, is wrong, unless it is accidentally right.

Mr. REED. May I inquire of the Senator if he can conjure up out of his rather lively mind and imagination any possible reason why the OPA should continue controls on petroleum and petroleum products, when the stocks of gasoline are increasing every week in this country, when the production of crude petroleum is in excess of the current demand for crude petroleum? Is there any reason the Senator from Texas can think of why the OPA, if there were any good faith, if there were any honesty, if there were any decency in the OPA, should continue controls on petroleum?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I can think of no sound reason. Of course, I know the reasons they have, but they are unsound.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. MOORE. What does the Senator mean by saying that he does not know any sound reasons? What are the reasons?

Mr. O'DANIEL. The reasons are that they want to continue their bureau, to keep their jobs, to regiment the people and dictate to the people, and exercise the power which they think they have, or claim they have, under the OPA law—the same reason why Mr. Stalin likes to keep his power.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a moment?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question, not for a moment.

Mr. HAWKES. What I want to do is to ask a question. Does the Senator realize that in nearly every request that is made by collective-bargaining committees for increases in wages the argument is advanced that the living costs which are based upon ceiling prices are not the true living costs, and that the workmen have to buy in the black market, and therefore have to have more wages?

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, that is not a question.

Mr. HAWKES. I asked the Senator if he realized that was so. That is a question, is it not?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes; I realize that is the truth.

Mr. HAWKES. I thought I asked a question.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I understood the question, and I answered the question.

Mr. President, continuing from where I stopped reading a few moments ago, in the speech of January 8, I said:

If the head of a large corporation, by virtue of increased profit, should decide to pay himself a salary of $50,000 annually more than he had normally been earning, this increase should also be taxed 100 percent. If an individual who had normally been earning $2,000 a year suddenly advanced to an earning of $3,000 a year, I think it would be just and right for the Government to say to him, "We expect you to pay to the Government an excess-earnings tax of 100 percent of this increase, with the understanding that 75 percent of this excess earnings will be set aside in nonnegotiable Government securities payable back to you at the end of this emergency or 5 years from date."

The result of a system of taxation built on this broad general principle would be that we would have no excess corporation earnings with which to inflate prices, and we would have no excess individual earnings to serve to inflate prices, but, on the other hand, by a direct system of forced saving, 75 percent of the excess earnings of individuals would be saved for them, and would be available to them to spend during the period which will follow this emergency, which will probably be a period of very substantial depression.

I believe the idea which I have suggested here, with proper safeguards, could be made a part of and added to our present system of income taxing, and I believe it would solve the problem of inflation which we are worrying about here today.

Mr. President, I wish to call attention to the fact that if that system of inflation prevention had been adopted millions of people in America today would have much money saved up which they have uselessly spent, and there would not be so much money floating around to cause inflation.

The big advantage of the plan I am suggesting is this: If we adopt this plan, it could be made effective and carried out by the Department of Internal Revenue. Business would go along on the same basis on which it is now operating. We would not attempt to say to business how much profit they could make, but we would say to them, "If your profit is excessive compared to pre-emergency profits, we expect to take 100 percent of the excess away in taxes." We would not say to the individual who is making excessive earnings that "We expect to take all your earnings at this time," but we would say to all who are profiting from this emergency, "Your excessive earnings which are coming to you by virtue of this emergency must not be used by you to inflate prices and thereby create a situation which will make it more difficult for other workers in this country to live."

Mr. President, in other words, I was making a suggestion which would have carried into effect the statement made by our President at that time when he said "There will be no war millionaires made during this war." We all know that nothing was done to prevent war millionaires growing out of this war. Many individuals became war millionaires. I continue to read:

We have in this Nation today many millions of people whose earnings have not been increased during this emergency, in fact, there are millions of white-collar workers who today are actually earning less in terms of what they can buy than they have been earning during past years. Certainly any system of taxation which proposes to levy flat pay-roll taxes on all people alike would be unfair. I am perfectly willing to go along if it is necessary to levy a flat pay-roll tax on everybody to supplement our national tax bill, but the first thing I want to do is to take completely out of the field of current purchasing power all excessive earnings, whether they be in the hands of corporations or individuals. Then, when we have everybody on the same basis, we can apply flat pay-roll taxes, if necessary, to the normal earnings of everybody.

I believe that the plan which I am suggesting, of utilizing taxation to its fullest power, would prevent any inflation, and that it could be carried out by governmental machinery which we now have. When the emergency is over, we shall not have created another fat Government bureau with about a million employees, which will want to perpetuate itself long after the emergency is ended, and possibly seek to keep American business regimented and under bureaucratic control for the remainder of our lives and possibly the lives of our children.

That is exactly what we are facing here today. We have before us a proposal to perpetuate the life of OPA, and if we give it another year of life, what excuse will we have for not renewing it for another year when that time is up?

I am convinced in my own mind that we have in departments in Washington today in places of power many persons who would completely destroy the present system of free enterprise and free Government in this country and substitute for it a highly regimented, centralized government in Washington. If we pass a bill which creates a new bureau and provides for a few hundred thousand more employees, we will automatically make more difficult the battle which we shall have when this emergency is over to get back to the normal way of doing business.

We are having a hard time getting back to the normal way of doing business. Everyone knows that to be so.

I do not believe that we are forced to make a choice today between having unrestricted inflation on the one hand or unrestricted governmental bureaucracy on the other hand. I believe we cause taxation to pay our debts, and at the same time prevent any unusual price inflation. Certainly no one wants to profit by this war.

While I am talking on this subject, let me say that it is generally recognized that we can prevent inflation not only by restricting the purchasing power of the people to buy consumer goods, but also by increasing the supply of consumer goods. The best way that I know to increase the supply of consumer goods is to remove restrictions which prevent such supplies from being made available. I believe that the provisions of present laws which limit the hours of labor to 40 hours a week and require time-and-a-half for all overtime are very unwise in the present emergency. I believe that American labor should be encouraged to produce all it can. I believe that it should be paid good wages. I am not in favor of wage reductions; but in this emergency if it is necessary for a man to work 10 hours a day I certainly do not believe that the recipient of the labor of that man should be required to pay a premium at the rate of time and a half for all overtime when he could employ other persons to work the additional hours at the regular rate and thus keep the cost down on the consumer goods produced, which, of course, would help decrease inflation. Laws which automatically result in the average producer producing less certainly aid inflation, in that they reduce the supply of consumer goods. Small supplies of consumer goods are, of course, the fundamental cause of inflation.

It may be that the remedies which I am suggesting here today may not be exceedingly popular—

Well, they were not—but I believe we should immediately recognize that we are in a terrible war, and the sooner we bravely and fearlessly face these issues and solve them, the sooner we will win the war and recover from its devastation. We cannot evade the issue by creating more boards and bureaus and passing on to some other agency responsibility for doing the job. I think it is a job which it is the responsibility of the Congress of the United States to do; and I think the best way to do it is by utilizing the power of taxation. I believe it is the simplest way to do it; and I believe we are more likely to have free American enterprise in this country when the emergency is over if we adopt this method.

The cost of 1,000,000 men to administer and enforce price-fixing legislation would be more than $2,000,000,000 annually for salaries alone, and possibly another billion a year for expenses.

We have not got to that point yet, but we are not through with OPA, either.

Such a department would be a dead expense, with no income. To bring about more positive results by taxation the additional cost of operating the Internal Revenue Department would be slight. About the same number of income-tax reports would be made, but the figures would be different. Also, the Internal Revenue Department has an income, and is more than self-supporting.

Yesterday the able Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] discussed the value of money and the effect of a fluctuating currency in connection with price fixing. He delved into ancient history and gave a splendid explanation of our position and the grave problems lying ahead of us in this Nation. While his discourse was eloquent and illuminating, I should like to bring our world problem, or national problem, down to lesser proportions. For illustration, suppose there were only 1,000 people in this Nation and that we used the barter system of swapping and had no money to use as a medium of exchange. Suppose we were then attacked. Part of the thousand persons would devote their efforts to the manufacture of guns and munitions; others would plant crops; some would weave cloth and make clothes; while others would go out and fight the battle. No money would change hands, because they would have no money, and inflation would not be a problem. But they would work, produce, fight, and sacrifice. Those things are the essentials in winning a war.

But there are 130,000,000 American citizens instead of only 1,000, and we must necessarily use money as a means of exchange; but still we must work, produce, fight, and sacrifice just the same in order to win this war. Under our present system the only problem to solve is the money problem. We must keep our entire civilian population working and producing by using money as the principal incentive for their activity, because that is the way we have been trained. Inasmuch as the war is a mutual problem affecting the present and future welfare of each and every one of us we must make sure that not a single person comes out at the end of the war with a greater percentage of our money than he would normally acquire under conditions immediately preceding this emergency.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am glad to yield for a question.

Mr. REED. May I inquire of the Senator from Texas whether he is laboring under the delusion that the OPA ever started out to maintain the free enterprise system in the United States of America?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, I am reading now from a speech I made on January 8, 1942, stating exactly what I thought the OPA would do, and in a great many respects what I prophesied has happened.

Mr. REED. May I inquire further of the Senator from Texas whether he is familiar with the fact that the controlling group in the OPA, in the very beginning of its existence, took the position that small business was inefficient; that the mission of OPA in this war was to destroy small business and put all business into large units which an organization like the OPA or its successor could regulate?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes. I had the idea that that was one of the things they would do. At the time I was making my speech in January 1942 I practically stated that, and I have made the statement further on the floor of the Senate tonight that it is my honest belief that the OPA was set up by the New Deal administration with its main objective to help overthrow the American form of government.

Mr. REED. May I inquire of the Senator from Texas if he is familiar with the fact that there has always been, and so far as I know there is yet, a group in the OPA which is almost a controlling group——

Mr. O'DANIEL. I realize that.

Mr. REED. And which has always been prejudiced against the free-enterprise system in America, and especially against small business?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am familiar with that fact. I know their philosophy.

I continue to read from the speech which I made on January 8, 1942:

We could do this by the taxation plan, which I have just explained, and it would be done thoroughly and fairly and at less cost than by the price-fixing method which is now under discussion. By using the plan which I have outlined we could function under our democratic system without having any aftermath to clean up or adjust.

We are now having the aftermath. We are trying to clean it up, but we are not having very much luck. The only way to clean it up is to abolish it. I continued:

We could keep right on after the war ends with the same system, except to reduce the percentage of excess-profits and earnings tax as our national expenses and our national debt might justify.

This excess-profits and earnings plan can be added to the next tax bill which comes along. It will not be long before we have the new tax bill before us, and very little time will be lost in getting it into effect. Furthermore, as soon as such a tax bill is passed, profiteering will suddenly slow down or stop, and retail commodity prices will drop or will come to a standstill, because very few corporations or individuals will take any particular delight in holding up their customers with exorbitant prices just to have their excess profits turned over to the Federal Government.

That is something which no one can deny. That is sound philosophy. If we were to set up such a system, we would not find any grocers, dealers, merchants, or others who would overcharge their customers merely in order to turn the amount of the overcharge over to the Government in the form of a 100 percent excess-profits tax. It would simply eliminate all incentive to try to profit above the normal profit which was being made prior to the emergency, as determined by a formula.

What I have said would apply to all lines of commercial activity, including manufacturing, transportation, wholesaling, retailing, construction, to every line of business, and to all individuals. Our President has said there are to be no war millionaires made during this war. There are some persons who are well on their way to becoming war millionaires at this time. Are we going to stand idly by and permit such a disgraceful thing to happen, or are we going to back up our President? The plan which I have proposed will do the job, and it will eliminate all possibility of any war millionaires being made during this great crisis.

Mr. President, there is another grave danger in this proposed price-fixing legislation. I do not know who will be the Administrator, but it is quite likely that in time to come there will be many administrators. There is no use to talk of personalities. We are concerned about principles and not personalities; and my remarks are not intended to reflect on anyone. But it is easy to see that by this proposed legislation we shall be setting up a most dangerous vehicle if it should be administered by any person who would use it for personal gain. Tip-offs could be made in advance of price changes, and such tip-offs would permit those who received the information to make immense fortunes.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. REED. I will put it in the form of a question. I inquire of the Senator from Texas if he is aware that Mr. Bowles hopes to run for Governor in Connecticut on the Democratic ticket, on the basis of his magnificent record in the OPA. Has the Senator heard that?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I have not heard that.

Mr. REED. What would be Mr. Bowles' chance of election in Texas as Governor on that platform?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I do not think his chances would be very good on that platform or any other platform.

I further stated on January 8, 1942:

Tip-offs could be made in advance of price changes, and such tip-offs would permit those who receive the information to make immense fortunes.

We have heard something about those tip-offs. We have heard about the manipulations in OPA, and the deals which have been made to cause prices to fluctuate.

I continued:

Such legislation would lay the foundation for the most colossal ring of profiteering ever imagined.

We have had it. I said 4 years ago last January 8:

Such legislation would lay the foundation for the most colossal ring of profiteering ever imagined.

We have the most colossal ring of profiteering and racketeering today in the black markets that the Nation has ever experienced.

Even if some future Administrator did not take part in the plot, with so many employees it would be possible for leaks to take place, and that would be extremely disastrous. As I said before, we are not dealing in personalities; but we are setting up the machinery, and we should be absolutely sure not to set up machinery susceptible to such grave abuses. Under such a set-up, racketeering could be conducted on an enormous scale—

It is. We have racketeering on an enormous scale. Four years ago last January the Senator from Texas was looking into the bill which was before us, and plainly saying that that would be the result. We have the proof of it now. I am standing here tonight telling those who are listening to me that if OPA is continued we shall have continued racketeering on a colossal scale. Everything of that nature will become worse. Nothing will become better. The only way we can cure the evil is to get rid of OPA.

Under such a set-up, racketeering could be conducted on an enormous scale—greater than any ever before dreamed of by the greatest crooks in history—

If any of the greatest crooks in history who are still alive have not heard about Washington, D. C., they are dumb.

and it would be possible for that to happen without any criminal intent whatever on the part of the Administrator.

That is what I have said all along. I have not dealt in personalities. I have not dealt with Chester Bowles or any other Administrator. I say that there is no man living who has sufficient wisdom to operate the Bureau known as OPA and set prices on all the commodities in this great Nation so that they will be satisfactory to everyone concerned. No one has that much wisdom. No one has that much ability.

As one of the first Administrators of price control, the President selected a Member of the United States Senate, where there is supposed to be much wisdom. He chose one of our ablest Senators. Never a word has been said against him that I know of. He was wise enough to understand the OPA and to guide the OPA legislation through the Halls of Congress and have it enacted. He was the manager of the bill on the floor of the Senate. I think he was conscientious when he was trying to have the bill enacted. He was simply mistaken or deceived.

After Mr. Brown, with all his wisdom and ability, was selected and placed in charge of OPA he soon learned that he could not make it work. There was something wrong with Mr. Brown. He did not fit into that organization. He had in his make-up some character, some honesty. He could not make the OPA work, so he got out.

I continue to read:

And it would be possible for that to happen without any criminal intent whatsoever on the part of the Administrator.

Mr. President, I must have been very brave to have said this:

Mr. President, should such a dangerous department be set up, the blame would rest entirely upon the Congress of the United States.

That brings it down to our own front door. We might as well admit it. Chester Bowles did not organize OPA. Leon Henderson did not organize it. The Congress of the United States enacted the legislation which established this monstrosity. We knew that it could not operate successfully. We wanted to get the problem off our hands, and we established an agency in the hope that it would operate. It did not. It cannot. It never will. It cannot operate in America unless we change our form of government.

I understand that there is price fixing in Russia. They had it in Germany. It can be made to work under some other form of government; but it cannot be made to work under our American form of Government, under which men are supposed to be free citizens. In order to make price control work we must take another step. When we take the single step of price control, we do not go all the way. We must take the next step and have compulsory production. When we have compulsory price control without compulsory production, we do not go all the way. We do not have the finished product. If prices are set too low, producers will not produce. Consumers must have food, clothing, and materials. How are we going to get them if there is no incentive? Under our American form of government we have built up the profit incentive. Every American knows that to be so. Everyone likes to strive to make a little profit, to try to get ahead and lay aside something for a rainy day. If we remove that incentive we retard or possibly stop production.

Are we going to let our people starve? Are we going to run out of food and clothing? Or are we going to take the next step in totalitarian government and have compulsory production along with compulsory price fixing?

The system can be made to work. It works in America in the penitentiaries. We force the inmates to produce. They produce, but they have lost their freedom. Whenever we force men to do something against their will, they have lost their freedom. We took away the freedom of American citizens when we establishment the OPA. There can be no question about that. These people of the United States have found it out. They were trusting; they were patient. They did not know we were setting up such a monstrosity when we started the OPA. They had no idea it would be as bad as it is. They had confidence in their Congress, and they had further confidence when they were told, "When the war is over we will abolish the OPA. We are merely setting it up as an emergency war measure." They thought, "Very well; we will do everything we can do in this battle." They sent their boys and their girls into the fight. Even the mothers and fathers went into the factories. All our people were doing their part.

But now we are out of the war. We have no more enemies to whip. If we keep on doing foolish things we may have some more to whip, but we do not have any now. Goodness knows, it would be a relief to know that we were at peace and to know that the war has ended. Everybody but the Congress knows that the war is over now. The Congress has not yet found that out; the Congress has not passed a joint resolution declaring the war to be at an end. The fact that the Congress has not done so is a technical excuse for continuing the iniquitous OPA Act, because it is said that technically the country is still at war, although everyone knows that that is merely skulduggery and is not putting all the cards on the table, but is holding some of them up a sleeve. The Congress is attempting to say to the people of the country, "We must keep the OPA, because the war has not ended." Mr. President, the boys won the war, but the Congress will not declare that the war is over. The OPA Act is a bad thing, and I want to get rid of it. I made that statement, and no one challenged it.

In my January 8, 1942, speech, I also said:

Mr. President, should such a dangerous department be set up, the blame would rest entirely upon the Congress of the United States.

Mr. President, I am a Member of the Congress, and I was at the time when the OPA bill was passed, and I voted for that bill. I did so because the President of the United States wanted it passed. He wanted it, so he said, because we were at war. I do not want it now because the war is over and we can get along without the OPA Act. I cannot see any reason for voting for a continuation of the OPA Act. I have had the idea—and I still have—that we do not need the OPA Act now. I thought it would be a grand and glorious feeling to wake up some morning and find there was no OPA—to have the good old sun rise in the East and find that the OPA was no more. I thought that would be a grand and glorious feeling, and I made a statement to that effect, and the newspaper boys printed it in the newspapers which went all over the country. The people of the country read that statement, and they thought, "That is a pretty good idea. Who is this bird in Washington who has that idea? Let's send him a telegram." So they did, and the telegrams started to come in, and I started to read them here. I thought it would be a good idea to read the telegrams to the Senate. I did not see anything wrong in letting the telegrams sent by citizens of the United States be read on the floor of the Senate. We are here. We have a continuous session. No other Member of the Senate appears to wish to talk. So I thought I would put in my time reading these telegrams.

It is an inspiration to me to get these telegrams. I used to like to get telegrams when I was campaigning, and I got some good ones, too. They give a person a great deal of encouragement, and these telegrams have given me a great deal of encouragement. I did not think I would get as many telegrams as I have received. I thought I might get a few. But look how they have poured in, not only from Texas, but from the entire Nation. The telegrams have simply poured in.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question, but that is all.

Mr. REED. Perhaps because I have been out of the Chamber some of the time this evening, I may have missed the information which I now seek. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Texas how many telegrams, if he has counted them or if members of his office force have counted them, he has received today on this subject.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I have not counted them. The majority leader spoke to me about it. I think he said I started reading the telegrams at about 3 o'clock. It was 9 o'clock in the evening when he spoke to me about that, and now this day is about gone, but I have not yet finished reading them.

Incidentally, Mr. President, these telegrams are not an accumulation from my files. All these telegrams have come in today. I shall tell the Senate why they have come in. The people of America had lost hope. They have been so regimented and told what to do and what not to do and have had snoopers coming into their homes and looking into the pantry and under the bed and everywhere else to see if they had been violating the law that they were just about ready to give up. They had no ray of hope, until they heard on the radio that there was a fellow in Washington who was talking about it, who thought that we should keep on talking about the OPA until it is really discussed. [Laughter.] So then the people began to send telegrams. They have had their hope renewed.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. REED. Will the Senator tell us how long he thinks it will take to inform the people of America about the incompetency and inadequacy and indecency of the Office of Price Administration?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am sure I do not know how long it will take to tell that. I am just trying it out now. I am just starting it. I do not know how long it will take to get started on my speech, but I will get through after a while. And when I get through we shall know how long a time it has taken.

As I was saying, I did not expect to receive so many telegrams. I knew the attitude of the people. You can whip a fellow down and put him in chains and bulldoze him until finally he begins to think there is no hope, and he decides to give in. That is the condition in America today. But when these folks heard that report on the radio or read it in the newspapers, they thought, "There is a fellow in Washington who thinks there is a possibility that the OPA may die at midnight on June 30." So they said, "Hip, hip, hooray! Let us send him a telegram." So the telegrams have come, and I have read them.

The reason I have read them has been that I thought the reporters who are sitting in the press gallery would hear them and would send out some reports that the telegrams were rolling in here, and so other people who had not thought anyone would send telegrams would take new hope, or their hopes would be revived, and perhaps they not only would commence to send telegrams to me but would begin to send telegrams to some other Senators, and perhaps there might be a change in the attitude of some Senators. I know that some Senators have told me that their minds are not yet made up as to what they should do in this matter, and so I thought their minds might be made up if they got as many telegrams as I have received today.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a further question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. REED. Would the Senator from Texas be interested in the fact that the Senator from Kansas has received several telegrams today commending the Senator from Texas for attempting to bring the OPA situation out into the open?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, I am tickled to death to be encouraged in that way. I surmised that perhaps some people would feel that way, but this is the first actual testimony I have had that such has happened. Of course, the Senator from Kansas does not need that assurance, but I am glad that some people in Kansas have seen a little ray of hope and have telegraphed to their Senators, and I hope that feeling will sweep the Nation. I hope that everyone who wants to get rid of OPA will send telegrams to his Senators. All of them have one or two Senators, and I hope they do it.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I am glad to yield for a question, Mr. President.

Mr. REED. Will the Senator from Texas be further interested in the fact that the Senator from Kansas has received about 10,000 letters and telegrams and petitions and postal cards on the subject of the OPA, and the Senator from Kansas finds that those from Kansas run about 6 to 1 either in favor of having the OPA abolished or regulated and strictly shorn of its powers?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No; I did not know that, but I am certainly glad to learn that is the case.

Mr. REED. And is the Senator from Texas also interested to know that we made a check, and from it we found that 50 percent of the communications and telegrams have come from housewives who desire that the OPA be curtailed and restricted or abolished because they cannot buy hose or meat or groceries or anything else, and they are tired of the irritating regulations of the OPA?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I did not know that, but I am receiving telegrams from housewives. They are American citizens, and I think they are smart, and I think before we got the OPA they had more to do with holding down prices than did anyone else in the Nation. They know how to shop. They drive around from one store to another, and they get full value for their money. They are the price fixers of this Nation. I think they did a swell job, and I want to turn it back to them.

These telegrams are not coming from lobbyists, about whom we hear a great deal in Washington. These telegrams are coming from individuals who possibly never saw Washington. They probably would not want to spend the money required for the fare to Washington if they had it, to come this far away from their homes. They could not get away from the milking long enough. So they sent these telegrams. I started to read them with the hope that the senders would hear about it and send telegrams to other Senators which would result in some converts to their cause. I did not intend to try to persuade any Senators as to what they should do in connection with the conference report. However, they have constituents who might telegraph them. I believe that Senators really like to hear from their constituents. I have stated that I should like to receive some help from other Senators. I do not believe that one Senator should try to talk the conference report to death. I thought that if other Senators would tell all they know about the OPA, it would take them quite a while to do so. I thought that if we had enough converts to our cause at the mourners' bench, they would consume so much time that the OPA would die before they got through talking. But, as yet I have not received any promises of assistance, and I am taking my time in reading these telegrams. Perhaps in the morning something will show up in the way of assistance.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, I hope that the Senator was not referring to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER] when he said that he hoped that something would show up in the morning.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I hope that he will arrive and talk. A motion for cloture was filed a while ago. It may be that the Senator will not be able to talk as long as he would wish. I hope that we shall not have to wait until the airplanes come in, because there are some Senators who are already present. If the telegrams which their constituents are sending them have any effect upon them, we will have an opportunity yet to kill the OPA.

Mr. President, I have already said that the blame will still be on Congress. I am a Member of the Congress. I am trying to get out from under the blame. I am not sorry that I voted for the OPA. I am proud of my vote for the OPA, and I am proud of every other vote which I cast to support the President of the United States during the time of war. He was the manager of the war, and I would not care who the President might be at such a time; for the important thing was that he was the Commander in Chief.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas was intrigued a moment ago by a remark of the Senator from Texas to the effect that wisdom was supposed to lie in this Chamber. Surely, the Senator from Texas would want to purge the RECORD of that statement, and say that wisdom does lie in this Chamber.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, there may be some wisdom here, but it is not all here.

Mr. REED. I thought the Senator might wish to correct his statement that wisdom is supposed to lie in this Chamber.

Mr. O'DANIEL. It is supposed to lie here.

Mr. REED. Does it not go any further?

Mr. O'DANIEL. No, I think it stops there.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I yield for a question.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the Senator believe that any wisdom is being exhibited now?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I believe so. If my belief were put to a vote I am sure that it would receive at least one vote. Perhaps there would be more. I do not know. Anyway, it is a sincere effort which I am making, whether there is any wisdom which may be detected in connection with it or not. I am not trying to brag about myself, but if any wisdom is shown here, it lies in the telegrams which I have before me and those which I have read. They were sent by citizens of this Nation, and I would not wish to say that those citizens are entirely devoid of wisdom. I believe that they possess a great deal of wisdom.

Mr. President, I was about to complete the reading of the speech which I made about 4 years ago. In speaking of wisdom, I said that the people look to this body because there is supposed to be more wisdom here than anywhere else. The President of the United States picked from this Chamber one of its Members, but with all his wisdom he could not operate the OPA. He did not operate it very long. I believe that the President could come to the Senate and find many other Senators who have wisdom, but I do not believe that any Senator possesses sufficient wisdom to make the OPA operate satisfactorily under an American form of government.

I continue reading from the speech which I made on January 8, 1942:

My remarks have come sincerely and from my heart. I ask that this price-fixing bill be replaced with something safe, sound, and practical, which will help carry out our great wartime program, and help retain our democracy after the war is over.

Mr. President, I intend to vote for every piece of legislation that I consider essential to the successful prosecution of this war, but I do not regard this proposed price-fixing legislation as a war-necessity measure in any sense of the word. This war will be fought and won by men and machines, and I will support to the limit any appropriations or taxes or laws to provide those essentials. But in my opinion the passage of this price-fixing bill will only give unfair advantage to some, and will unfairly penalize others. It has already been proven by the arguments presented in this Senate that price-fixing legislation is for class advantage. This bill in its present form will penalize every farmer and rancher in my State, while the political contractors, speculators, money changers, and others will profit by it. It will penalize every small manufacturer in my State, and will put many of them entirely out of business, by setting the price of their products on the basis of cost of production in gigantic factories in which the cost of operation is naturally lower on account of larger volume. The same thing will happen to small industries in other States. The bill will centralize industry instead of decentralizing it, and such centralization will adversely affect every laboring person in the rural area of our large State of Texas. The bill will not benefit the consumers of our State, because many of our consumers produce what they consume. It will hold out to some of our citizens false hope that prices will be held down, when in fact they will be held down principally on articles which will not be obtainable at any price because they will not be manufactured. Mr. President, my people in Texas are anxious and willing to do their part forcefully to prosecute this war. Nowhere on earth will you find people more patriotic and loyal than the citizens of Texas. They are willing to work night and day, and to sacrifice to the extent of giving the last shirt off their back, but they believe the responsibility should be equally and fairly divided, and that each should do his part. Fairness to all and favor to none is all we ask. That is what my excess-profits-and-earnings-tax plan will bring about—fair play to all. At the same time it will accomplish what we now seek to accomplish. I believe it is very important that we should have an opportunity to consider an excess-profits-and-earnings-tax plan before we take final action on the price-fixing plan now under consideration.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. MORSE. The Senator from Oregon wishes to inquire of the Chair if the Senator from Texas has spoken more than once?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The speech which the Senator from Texas is now making is his second speech.

Mr. MORSE. Therefore, if the Senator from Texas should suggest the absence of a quorum, he would lose the floor and could not proceed again on this calendar day and address the Senate on the subject of this bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He could not proceed again. The calendar day is not the determining day. It is the legislative day which is the determining day. The rule is that no Senator may speak more than twice on the same day on the same subject.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, before starting to review the speech which I made in the Senate on the subject of the OPA bill more than 4 years ago, I was reading from telegrams which I had received from persons throughout the country. I interrupted the reading of the telegrams in order to read from the speech which I had made for the purpose of showing that I was at that time opposed, for fundamental reasons, to price fixing. That was before we had had any experience whatever with the OPA. For the same reasons, I am still opposed to price fixing. I expect to continue to be opposed to price fixing, just as will the persons who have sent me these telegrams.

Here is a telegram which I have received from Springfield, Mass.——

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. MORSE. I wish to make it clear to the Presiding Officer that I do not approve of the technique which the Senator from Texas is using, and I believe the Chair knows that I do not approve of filibustering. At the same time, I believe that Members of the Senate are entitled at all times to know of their parliamentary rights. The parliamentary inquiry which the Senator from Oregon wishes to make is with regard to the effect of what the majority leader did toward vacating, shall I say, the objections which were made to the Senator from Texas proceeding some hours ago when the point of order was raised that he had lost the floor. The question which I ask now is whether or not the so-called vacating agreement, which I thought was reached by the majority leader, did not have the effect of putting the Senator from Texas in the position of making his first speech on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There was a quorum call; at least, the record discloses that the Senator had already made one speech prior to that time, and that this is his second speech. The Chair had the Parliamentarian look up the record about 2 hours ago, and it discloses that the Senator is now on the second speech.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, that was prior to the announcement of the majority leader that from that time forward it was the intention of the majority leader, as I understood him, to enforce strictly the rules of the Senate, and he put the Senator from Texas on notice. I thought that was a courteous and fine thing for the Senator from Kentucky to do. The Senator from Texas should have been placed on notice. But having been placed on notice, it seems to me that from that point on the Senator from Texas was in the position of making his first speech on the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the point of order made at the time I interposed was that the Senator from Texas had already made his second speech, his first speech having been made prior to a quorum call. When the question arose as to whether under another circumstance he had concluded what might be technically called his second speech, the point was made that he had concluded his second speech, and the Chair so ruled. An appeal was taken from that ruling and was pending when I sought to adjust the matter by asking that the point of order be the appeal from the ruling of the Chair be withdrawn.

The Chair did rule that the Senator from Texas had made his second speech, at the time I interposed and made the arrangement which was consummated. The Senator from Texas has made his first speech and is now on his second speech.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Oregon that the action of the Senate and the Senator from Utah [Mr. MURDOCK] in withdrawing the point, and the appeal being withdrawn, would have wiped out all the proceedings, so that what the Senator from Texas said before then would have been just one speech, but up to that time the record shows he had already made one speech.

Mr. MORSE. I thank the Chair, and I wish to make very clear that the only purpose of my raising this question is to satisfy myself of the rights of the Senator from Texas. I want it very clear that I do not share in his judgment in exercising the technique he is following. I do say that I find it rather painful to sit here and see a Senator, although he is doing, what I think is a great injustice to this body, after he has been occupying the floor for a good many hours, compelled to continue, and if there is any rule by which the courtesy could be extended to him of a slight rest while the Senator from Oklahoma spoke, during which time he might converse with the majority leader, I should like to see that courtesy extended.

I suppose it would be useless to ask unanimous consent to give the Senator 10 minutes from the floor, but I want to say that even in hours such as this, as fellow Senators, we should be exceedingly lenient with each other, even though we do not agree with the exercise of other Senators' judgment. I think we should in some way, if there is any way under the rules, to give the Senator 10 minutes to leave the floor, and let the Senator from Oklahoma proceed with his speech. But I do not know how it can be arranged.

The PRESIDING OFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Oregon that the Chair had the matter investigated a while ago to see the exact status. what he suggests can be done only by unanimous consent.

Mr. O'DANIEL. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Has it been the ruling of the Chair that I have spoken twice?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The RECORD discloses that at the time the first point of order was made the Senator had spoken one time, and the Chair so held at that time. When the point of order was made that when the Senator yielded he lost the floor, the Chair sustained it, because that was already his second speech. That was eliminated on the request of the Senator from Kentucky, and the appeal was withdrawn. But the last incident had nothing to do with affecting what the Chair had already held at that time, that the Senator was in his second speech, and the Chair is merely following that ruling.

Mr. O'DANIEL. The second speech in what period of time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The legislative day.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Which continues for more than 1 calendar day?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes; it lasts until the Senate adjourns.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, I am very sorry that the reading of these telegrams from people throughout the Nation is obnoxious to some Senators. I have no desire whatever to be obnoxious in that respect. I thought I had seen it done here before, and that Senators had the right to read articles or telegrams or letters on the Senate floor. I thought I was entirely within my rights.

I realize, however, that there has been no great rush in my direction by Senators who want to speak on this subject, and I understood that we were going to continue in continuous session until the matter was disposed of, or at least until the majority leader wanted the Senate to recess.

I think that I have demonstrated fully my desire to try to abolish OPA. I have never harbored the idea that I could do it all alone, and without any assistance forthcoming. I have listened for hours and hours to the speeches of other Senators without making any criticism of them, because I really enjoyed them. I am a peculiar person; I like to hear such speeches, but I do not like to burden anyone with listening to what I have to say.

I have made my point clear, and I should like to know, if I discontinue speaking now, as I have been hoping to give the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS] the floor, if I would have any other opportunity to speak; whether, if I should want to say anything about the bill before the Senate voted on it, I would be precluded from making any further observations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator could speak only by leave of the Senate.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Probably Senators want to stay here and listen to me the rest of the night, then, unless they want to give unanimous consent that I may speak at some other time if something comes up about which I might want to say a few words. I do not suppose I could get unanimous consent to do that.

Mr. HAYDEN. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'DANIEL. I can yield only for a question.

Mr. HAYDEN. Would the Senator object to my asking unanimous consent that on the next calendar day he may speak for 30 minutes on the bill?

Mr. O'DANIEL. We are already in the next day now. I have not spoken since before midnight.

Mr. HAYDEN. That upon the recess of the Senate he may be permitted to speak?

Mr. O'DANIEL. On this day we are in now?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I might want to speak for an hour.

Mr. HAYDEN. The Senator said for a few moments.

Mr. O'DANIEL. A few moments?

Mr. HAYDEN. That is what the Senator said. I think we might arrange that.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Make it for an hour, which is only 60 moments.

Mr. BARKLEY. Would the Senator from Texas enter into an agreement, or agree that the Senate might enter into an agreement, that during the remaining consideration of the bill no Senator should speak more than once or longer than 1 hour on the conference report?

Mr. O'DANIEL. Yes; I would agree to that. That would include me?

Mr. BARKLEY. That would include the Senator. I ask unanimous consent that from now on during the remainder of the consideration of the conference report no Senator shall speak more than once or longer than 1 hour.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, may I ask the majority leader if he proposes to recess now if the unanimous consent is given?

Mr. BARKLEY. I would ask the Senate to recess.

Mr. BRIDGES. Then I offer no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky? The chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session,

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOEY in the chair) laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

As in executive session,

The following favorable reports of nominations were submitted:

By Mr. OVERTON, from the Committee on Commerce:

Granville Mellen, of Mississippi, to be a member of the United States Maritime Commission, for the unexpired term of 6 years from September 26, 1944; and Commodore Ellis Reed-Hill, United States Coast Guard, for appointment as Engineer in Chief of the United States Coast Guard, with the rank of rear admiral, effective from August 1, 1946, for a term of 4 years.

By Mr. HOEY, from the Committee on the District of Columbia:

James H. Flanagan, of the District of Columbia, to be a member of the Public Utilities Commission of the District of Columbia for a term of 3 years from July 1, 1946 (reappointment).

RECESS

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock a. m. today.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 10 minutes a. m., Friday, June 28, 1946) the Senate took a recess until 11 o'clock a. m. the same day.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, JUNE 27, 1946

The House met at 10 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father, high above all, wrapped in tranquil infinity, yet in mercy dost Thou look upon this world with its tragedies, its storms and defeats. We praise Thee for the care and the love which have gone into Thy children. Wherefore may we not glory in wealth, or in man, or in station, but in the everlasting gift with which we have been endowed. Look into our hearts, and mayest Thou hear the music of charity and justice to all men. Make it gloriously possible for us to do the utmost things for those whose lives are dark and flat and sorely distressed. Thou great Shepherd of the sheep, lend us strength and courage to smite temptation and guard Thy fold from polluting taint of any kind. Forgive our sins and bridge our weakness; increase our sense of the divine until Thy excellence, purity, and love appear in everything. Through Jesus our Saviour. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6335) entitled "An act making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, 5, 6, 18, 19, 20, 85, 87, 115, 141, 166, 239, 272, 276, and 277 to the foregoing bill.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4512) entitled "An act to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide for research relating to psychiatric disorders and to aid in the development of more effective methods of prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of such disorders, and for other purposes."

The SPEAKER. On this roll call, 303 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

CHARLES MARVIN SMITH

Mr. HARE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill (H. R. 4492) for the relief of Charles Marvin Smith, be restored to the Private Calendar.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

LEGISLATIVE BRANCH APPROPRIATION BILL, 1947

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 6429) making appropriations for the legislative branch, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi, and I ask unanimous consent that he may be permitted to speak out of order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

SMEAR ATTACKS AND FAKE LAWSUITS

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, first I want to thank the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. O'NEAL] for giving me this time. I would not ask it, but I am compelled to leave for home today.

A vicious smear campaign against me has been carried to its ultimatum in the filing of a couple of fake lawsuits here in the District of Columbia, one by a man who calls himself Holdridge and the other by what he calls the Veterans' League of America, of which he claims to be the head.

He attributes to me a statement over the telephone that I never made, and is doing this in order that it may go into the press and affect my primary, which takes place next Tuesday.

I do not believe in all the history of Congress I have ever known a man to be the victim of so much vilification and abuse as I have had to take, and as the other members of the Committee on Un-American Activities have had to take, coming from those elements that are largely dedicated to the overthrow of this Government.

I want to show you who this man Holdridge is. He entered the Military Academy in 1913, on June 14, under the name of Herbert Charles Heitke. I am reading now from the record of the Biographical Register of the Officers and Graduates of the United States Military Academy. Later his name was changed by the War Department. This is the first time I ever knew that the War Department had the right to change anybody's name. It was changed to Herbert Charles Holdridge. He served under that name until he was recently discharged from the United States Army; that is, he was retired, and I am going to quote from a secret document from the War Department showing you what he was retired for. He was retired for incapacity, and that incapacity was psychoneurosis. So he sues me because he says that I said he was crazy.

The gentleman from Nebraska, sitting before me, Dr. MILLER, who in civil life is a practicing physician, and a very able one, told me that this man Holdridge came to his office for an interview, and that he was thoroughly convinced that the fellow was demented.

He claims to be the head of this American Veterans' League. I am reading now from a letter that is being sent out by the American Veterans' League attempting to raise money to be sent into my district with which to fight me. They are either violating the laws of the State of Mississippi and the laws of the United States against corrupt practices or else they are using the mails to defraud, to raise money under false pretenses. That is the reason these suits are filed.

This letter reads:

Veterans' League of America, national headquarters, 45 Astor Place, New York 3, N. Y., Gramercy 5-0085, Brig. Gen. H. C. Holdridge, chairman, legislative committee.

On May 9 this confidential letter they are sending out—and it is marked "Confidential"—went to people all over the State of New York, I presume, because several of them were sent to me by the ones who received them.

It says:

JOHN E. RANKIN, of Mississippi, is up for reelection this year. There is an excellent possibility that he may be defeated in the primary by a progressive veteran.

It goes on to say:

Five thousand dollars, beyond the funds already available, are needed immediately.

It goes on to say that the Veterans' League down there, of which nobody ever heard, has called on them, and I quote him again:

We urge you to make a generous contribution. You will thus be doing your share to strengthen the democratic forces in Congress. Your check should be made payable to the Veterans' League of America and sent in the enclosed stamped envelope as quickly as possible.

That letter is signed by several men. The first man who signed it is A. Philip Randolph, the Negro who is the head of the Pullman porters' union.

The next one who signed it is a man named Davidson, Ben Davidson, then Charles Davis, George S. Counts, Albert Sprague Coolidge, and Horace M. Kallen.

There is also enclosed a little blank for them to fill in and send in for the amount of money they are contributing to my opposition.

In addition, they enclose a stamped, addressed envelope with a special delivery stamp on it, which I hold in my hand. It is addressed as follows:

To: Messrs. Coolidge, Counts, Davidson, Davis, Kallen & Randolph, c/o Veterans' League of America, 45 Astor Place, New York 3, N. Y.

Now let us see who those people are—but first, before we go that far, let us see about this man Holdridge. I have in my hand some speeches he has made, one of them is headed, "Why I shall vote for the Socialist Party."

It is useless for me to read that speech to you, because you can understand what kind of quirk any man has who will vote the Socialist ticket. He proceeds here to malign both the Democrats and Republicans. Another one of his speeches is headed, "Why I shall vote for Norman Thomas." I suppose that cinches it, and leaves no doubt as to where he stands.

Then I have another one which is headed "The Enemy—Capitalism." And he goes on to argue that capitalism must be destroyed. What does he mean by capitalism? He simply means the system of free enterprise that enables you and me or anyone else to own our homes; to own our farms; to own our factories; to own our business establishments. In his argument here for the destruction of capitalism he announces the policy of communism as completely as Lenin or Stalin or anyone else could have expressed it. If that isn't communism, I do not know what to call it.

Mr. Speaker, let us see about these others who signed this letter. Suppose we just take a look at the records of this outfit. This Negro, A. Philip Randolph, as I said, is head of the sleeping car porters and has been connected with other Communist fronts.

This man Counts who signs his name "Dr. George S. Counts" has a long record of communistic affiliations. In 1930 he took a trip through Soviet Russia, undoubtedly as a guest of the Communists, and has been spreading his vicious communistic poison throughout this country ever since. He has been an officer, in or sponsor of, or active in, 15 of the leading communist front organizations in America, many of which have been branded by the Department of Justice as subversive. He signed this letter along with this Negro, A. Philip Randolph, who as I said also has a communist front record with about 10 or 15 different organizations that I may refer to later. They signed this letter to raise money in flagrant violation of the corrupt practices act to send down into the First Congressional District of Mississippi to try to corrupt the electorate in the coming primaries.

Another signer is a man named Albert Sprague Coolidge, also a member of the provisional committee for the Union May Day meeting in Boston 1938, which was sponsored by the World Communist Movement. He has been mixed up with communist front organizations from that day to this. In 1936 this Albert Sprague Coolidge was found to be a Communist by one of the great police bureaus of the United States. He signs his name to these letters that are going out to raise money to fight me with.

Another signer of this letter is Horace M. Kallen, who has held high positions in leading communist front organizations for many years and, with the help of the Soviet agents, has distributed communistic propaganda over the United States through the motion pictures.

Another of these signers is Charles Davis, who the record shows became a member of the Communist Party in 1931 and who was known at that time to carry a Communist card. The Communists then were plotting, and are still plotting the overthrow of this Government.

This Negro, A. Philip Randolph, who, as I said, is head of the Pullman Operators' Union, has associated himself with numerous Communist front organizations, many of which have been branded subversive by the Department of Justice as well as by the Dies Committee and the FBI.

The other signers of these letters—and I say these letters because there are many of them—are just as bad as these men are. You will note at the top of this letterhead that the executive director of this outfit is one E. Muravchick. The chairman of the policy committee is Leo Johnson, and the chairman of the legislative committee is H. C. Holdridge, alias H. C. Heitke. All of these men have records with the Dies Committee and the FBI and the Department of Justice, of Communist front affiliations throughout the country.

There is one other matter I would like to mention. I have before me a letter that this man Holdridge, alias Heitke, sent out attacking the people of Arkansas in a most vicious manner. One of my friends in Washington sent me this letter. It is signed by this H. C. Holdridge. It says:

"How would you feel if you were colored and lived in Arkansas?"

Then it proceeds to denounce the authorities of Arkansas for sending to the penitentiary a Negro criminal who shot an officer who was trying to arrest him.

If you will investigate you will find they were behind this trouble in Tennessee. He says:

Send in a hundred dollars, fifty dollars, twenty-five dollars, or whatever you can spare to help free Tee Davis and to continue the vital work of the Workers' Defense League in the fight against injustice, hate, and intolerance.

Mr. Speaker, I did not want to leave here with all this smear going on through the press without saying a few words. As I said, this is nothing in the world but a fake lawsuit. It is trumped up for the purpose of sending a report of it into the district I have the honor to represent, in order to try to injure me in the campaign which closes on next Tuesday.

I have nothing to hide. I have stood by my convictions. I have put the welfare of my country first and I shall continue to do so. I will meet this bunch in the Federal court, or in any other court whenever they get ready, but if the United States Government and the legal authorities of Mississippi do their duty, they may not get out of jail in time to try this case.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California such time as he may desire.

NAVAL ESTABLISHMENT APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations for naval appropriations may have until midnight tonight to file a conference report and statement on the bill H. R. 6496.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Speaker, this is the legislative branch appropriation conference report. There is absolute unanimity on the part of the conferees as to what is contained in the report. Unless the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JOHNSON] desires recognition, I will move the previous question.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, there is nothing in dispute in the bill. I have nothing further to say.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 54: Page 57, strike out all of section 107 and insert a new section, to read as follows:

"SEC. 107. No part of any appropriation contained in this act shall be used to pay the salary or wages of any person who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States, or who advocates, or is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided, That for the purposes hereof an affidavit shall be considered prima facie evidence that the person making the affidavit is not a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States, or that such person does not advocate, and is not a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided further, That any person who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States, or who advocates, or who is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence and accepts employment the salary or wages for which are paid from any appropriation contained in this act shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or both: Provided further, That the above penalty clause shall be in addition to, and not in substitution for, any other provisions of existing law.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATION BILL, 1947—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 5990) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5990), making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to each of such amendments, namely:

No. 2, relating to the general fund: Includes the words "Veterans' Services" authorized in Public Laws No. 376 and 385, Seventy-ninth Congress, approved since this appropriation bill passed the House, the funds for which is carried in a proposal of the Senate which is agreed to by the House conferees.

No. 3, relating to the office of the corporation counsel: Appropriates $174,200, instead of $182,530 as proposed by the Senate and $165,870 as proposed by the House. It provides for the salaries of 1 assistant corporation counsel, P–6 and 1 clerk-stenographer, CAF–4.

No. 4, relating to the Auditor's office: Appropriates $308,544 as proposed by the Senate, instead of $271,920 as proposed by the House.

No. 5, relating to the Department of Weights, Measures, and Markets: Appropriates $124,500 as proposed by the Senate, instead of $121,391 as proposed by the House.

No. 6, relating to the Office of Recorder of Deeds: Eliminates language proposed by the Senate.

No. 7, relating to the Office of Recorder of Deeds: Appropriates $190,850 instead of $199,036 as proposed by the Senate and $185,672 as proposed by the House. The amount added to the amount proposed by the House will provide the salaries of 1 guard, CPC–4, and 2 clerks, CAF–2.

No. 8, relating to the Public Utilities Commission: Language amendment proposed by Senate to authorize Public Utilities Commission to hold hearings upon any application made for the installation of meters in taxicabs if such Commission cares to do so.

No. 9, relating to the general administration expenses of the public schools: Includes language authorizing the purchase and maintenance of one passenger automobile for $1,290 for the Franklin School, which is the administration building.

No. 10, relating to the general administration expenses of the public schools: Appropriates $425,972 instead of $430,372 as proposed by the Senate and $421,572 as proposed by the House.

No. 11, relating to general supervision and instruction, public schools: Appropriates $10,710,300 instead of $10,881,200 as proposed by the Senate and $10,539,900 as proposed by the House. The amount added to the amount proposed by the House will provide the salaries for 19 class 1-A elementary-school teachers, 2 class 2-A junior-high-school teachers, 3 class 2-C junior-high-school teachers, 2 class 3-A senior-high-school teachers, 2 class 5-A vocational-high-school teachers, 2 class 5-C vocational-high-school teachers, and provide $106,000 for instruction for veterans.

No. 12, relating to operation of buildings and grounds and maintenance of equipment, public schools: Appropriates $2,248,500 instead of $2,264,500 as proposed by the Senate and $2,218,520 as proposed by the House.

Nos. 13 and 16, relating to furniture, equipment, continuing construction and contract authorization for the Alexander Graham Bell (Abbott) Vocational School: Senate proposes elimination of all items for this school and House concurs in same.

No. 14, relating to furnishing and equipping Anacostia Senior High School, Logan Elementary School, Tyler Elementary School. Includes these schools along with others to receive funds for such purposes.

No. 15, relating to furnishing and equipping schools: Appropriates $189,500 as proposed by the Senate instead of $275,080 as proposed by the House.

No. 17, relating to Taft Junior High School: Eliminates the proposed additional construction to this school.

No. 18, relating to Logan School: Authorizes construction of an eight-room elementary-school addition to this school at cost of $200,000.

No. 19, relating to Walker and Jones Schools: Eliminates construction of new twenty-four-room elementary-school building to replace present school building.

No. 20, relating to Richardson School: Authorizes construction of a sixteen-room extensible elementary-school building at a cost of $100,000.

No. 21, relating to the Anacostia Senior High School: Authorizes remodeling of present building at a cost of $93,320.

No. 22, relating to the Cranch and Tyler Schools: Eliminates construction of new elementary-school building to replace present school.

No. 23, relating to Slowe School: Authorizes an amount of $50,000 for construction of an eight-room extensible elementary-school building in the vicinity of Fifteenth and Hamlin Streets Northeast.

No. 24, relating to the Western Senior High School: Authorizes expenditure of $147,900 for alterations at this school.

No. 25, relating to Terrell Junior High School: Authorizes not to exceed $1,350,000 for plans and specifications and construction of new junior high school building to replace present school building.

No. 26, relating to Armstrong Senior High School: Authorizes not to exceed $1,560,000 for plans and specifications for an addition, necessary remodeling of present building and treatment of grounds.

No. 27, relating to the Eliott Junior High School: Authorizes not to exceed $350,000 for preparation of plans and specifications for an addition of ten classrooms, a gymnasium, necessary remodeling of the present building, and treatment of grounds.

No. 28, relating to construction of school buildings: Appropriates $2,297,680, instead of $3,348,200 as proposed by the Senate and $2,008,000 as proposed by the House. This is in conformity with the action taken in amendments No. 17 to No. 27, inclusive.

No. 29, relating to free tuition of pupils who dwell outside the District of Columbia: Eliminates language proposed by the House to require pupils who dwell outside the District of Columbia to pay tuition for attending District schools.

No. 30, relating to operating expenses for the Public Library: Appropriates $859,500 instead of $906,210 as proposed by the Senate and $848,900 as proposed by the House. It provides for the salaries of 2 librarians, P–2, and 2 junior librarians, P–1.

No. 31, relating to operating expenses, Recreation Department: Appropriates $767,309 instead of $782,719 as proposed by the Senate and $751,900 as proposed in the House.

No. 32, relating to the acquisition of a parcel of land for the Recreation Department: Appropriates $204,000 as proposed by the Senate for the purchase of parcel 101/25, known as the Emery estate on Georgia Avenue near Concord Avenue, for recreational, library, and other community purposes. It is understood that the amount herein stated is the full purchase price of the parcel of land.

No. 33, relating to Metropolitan Police: Appropriates $5,225,000, instead of $5,344,275 as proposed by the Senate and $5,000,000 as proposed by the House.

No. 34, relating to the Fire Department: Appropriates $3,106,000 instead of $3,211,138 as proposed by the Senate and $3,000,000 as proposed by the House.

No. 35, relating to Veterans' Services: Authorizes title of "Veterans' Services" for the new items that follow.

No. 36, relating to Veterans' Services: Appropriates $75,000 instead of the $100,000 as proposed by the Senate. This is a new item of appropriation authorized by the enactment of Public Law 376, 79th Congress.

No. 37, relating to Veterans Housing: Authorizes an appropriation of $250,000 for providing necessary utilities for veterans' housing furnished and erected by the National Housing Administrator.

No. 38, relating to operating expenses, Health Department: Appropriates $1,630,657 instead of the $1,654,623 as proposed by the Senate and $1,605,423 as proposed by the House.

No. 39, relating to operating expenses, Glenn Dale Tuberculosis Sanatorium: Appropriates $1,389,308 as proposed by the Senate instead of $1,319,592 as proposed by the House.

No. 40, relating to operating expenses, Gallinger Municipal Hospital: Authorizes $8,750 as proposed by the Senate instead of the $8,000 as proposed by the House. The increase is to provide for the salary increase authorized under Public Law 106.

No. 41, relating to operating expenses, Gallinger Municipal Hospital: Authorizes $1,500 as proposed by the Senate for a residence for the superintendent. This is now authorized by legislation.

No. 42, relating to operating expenses, Gallinger Municipal Hospital: Appropriates $3,150,000 instead of $3,841,148 as proposed by the Senate and $2,341,148 as proposed by the House. A tremendous increase in personnel was requested, bringing the number of employees per patient to more than two employees for each patient, or in excess of any other comparable hospital concerning which the committee had any information. It is the thought of the committee that better administration rather than an overstaffing is the answer to the problem at this hospital, and the committee demands more efficient administration and better utilization of the services of employees.

Nos. 43, 44, 45 and 46, relating to care and treatment of indigent persons under contracts by medical charities: Appropriates $225,000 as proposed by the Senate instead of $185,000 as proposed by the House. The increases are found necessary because of higher costs of operation and inability to secure contracts at the former prices.

No. 47, relating to operating expenses, child care, Family Welfare Service: Appropriates $723,260 instead of $758,380 as proposed by the Senate and $688,140 as proposed by the House.

No. 48, relating to Capital outlay, child care, Family Welfare Service: Appropriates $50,000 as proposed by the Senate for an additional amount for the construction of a receiving home and classification center. An appropriation of $285,000 is available but has been found insufficient to meet requirements.

No. 49, relating to public assistance and children's services: Authorizes language as proposed by the Senate for vocational rehabilitation of disabled residents of the District of Columbia in accordance with Public Law 113, approved July 6, 1943.

No. 50, relating to public assistance and children's services: Appropriates $55,500 as proposed by the House instead of $63,500 as proposed by the Senate.

No. 51, relating to public assistance and children's services: Eliminates language for the "supervision of" Victory gardens and permits the change in name to "Victory" gardens.

No. 52, relating to public assistance and children's services: Eliminates the words "of home gardens" in conformity with the change in name in the preceding amendment.

No. 53, relating to public assistance and children's services: Appropriates $2,033,500 instead of $2,041,500 as proposed by the Senate and $2,008,500 as proposed by the House.

No. 54, relating to public assistance and children's services: Eliminates the word "home" and inserts in lieu thereof the word "Victory" relative to gardens, and in conformity with earlier amendments.

No. 55, relating to operating expenses, Juvenile Correctional Service: Appropriates $499,908 as proposed by the Senate instead of the $475,748 as proposed by the House.

No. 56, relating to operating expenses, Adult Correctional Service: Appropriates $2,200,000 instead of $2,238,407 as proposed by the Senate and $1,873,407 as proposed by the House. The reduction from the amount as proposed by the Senate is to be made in personnel.

No. 57, relating to capital outl.y, Adult Correctional Service: Appropriates $116,600 as proposed by the Senate for improvements at the jail.

No. 58, relating to operating expenses, District Training School: Appropriates $581,600 instead of $587,120 as proposed by the Senate and $542,580 as proposed by the House. The amount authorized provides for 1 P–2 physician, 22.5 CPC–2 attendants and 2 P–1 parole officers, and $5,000 for provisions.

No. 59, capital outlay, District Training School: Appropriates $140,000 instead of $420,000 as proposed by the Senate for construction and equipment of laundry building and employees' housing by eliminating all employees' housing; and $35,000 instead of $50,000 as proposed by the Senate for improvement of roads.

No. 60, relating to operating expenses, Office of Superintendent of District Buildings: Authorizes language for "uniforms and caps for guards" as proposed by the Senate.

No. 61, relating to operating expenses, Office of Superintendent of District Buildings: Appropriates $548,200 as proposed by the Senate instead of $545,700 as proposed by the House. Provides funds for uniforms and caps for guards authorized in amendment No. 60.

No. 62, relating to Department of Inspections: Authorizes three members of board of special appeal and two members of electrical examining board at $300 per annum each as proposed by the Senate to provide fire inspection of hotels, etc.

No. 63, relating to Department of Inspections: Appropriates $421,100 as proposed by the Senate instead of $408,500 as proposed by the House.

No. 64, relating to Department of Vehicles and Traffic: Reinstates language proposed by House.

No. 65, relating to Department of Vehicles and Traffic: Appropriates $586,152 instead of $603,852 as proposed by the Senate and $547,600 as proposed by the House. Eliminates $11,500 for traffic lights and $6,200 for payment of director of Motor Vehicle Parking Facility as the activity is to be directed by the Director of Traffic.

No. 66, relating to operating expenses, Water Department: Appropriates $1,450,000 instead of $1,476,600 as proposed by the Senate and $1,420,000 as proposed by the House.

No. 68, relating to capital outlay, Washington Aqueduct: Authorizes funds for construction of new mixing and sedimentation basins for the Dalecarlia filter plant and completion of clear water basin at the same plant.

No. 69, relating to capital outlay, Washington Aqueduct: Appropriates $1,980,000 as proposed by the Senate instead of $989,000 as proposed by House. Increased amount to take care of items mentioned in amendment No. 68.

No. 70, relating to National Capital Parks: Appropriates $1,211,923 instead of $1,223,846 as proposed by the Senate and $1,200,000 as proposed by the House.

No. 72, relating to purchase of passenger-carrying vehicles: Eliminated language as to ceiling price for automobile as it is necessary to purchase heavier cars for the Fire Department.

AMENDMENTS REPORTED IN DISAGREEMENT

Following is a statement of the amendments reported in disagreement and of the motion that has been authorized by the managers on the part of the House to be made in regards to each:

Amendment No. 1, relating to the contribution that the Federal Government will make towards the expenses of the District of Columbia. The House has approved $6,000,000 and the Senate proposes an amount of $10,000,000. A motion to further insist on the amount approved by the House will be made.

Amendment No. 67, relating to the sale by the Secretary of the Treasury of securities held for and on account of the water fund of the District of Columbia. A motion to concur in the Senate amendment will be offered.

Amendment No. 71, relating to employees that assert the right to strike against the Government of the United States or who advocates, or is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States. A motion to recede and concur in the Senate amendment will be offered with an amendment reading as follows:

"Sec. 3. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be used to pay the salary or wages of any person who engages in a strike against the Government of the United States or the Government of the District of Columbia or who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States or the Government of the District of Columbia, or who advocates, or is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided, That for the purposes hereof an affidavit shall be considered prima facie evidence that the person making the affidavit has not contrary to the provisions of this section engaged in a strike against the Government of the United States or the Government of the District of Columbia, is not a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States or the Government of the District of Columbia, or that such person does not advocate, and is not a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided further, That any person who engages in a strike against the Government of the United States or the Government of the District of Columbia or who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States or the Government of the District of Columbia, or who advocates, or who is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence and accepts employment the salary or wages for which are paid from any appropriation contained in this Act shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both: Provided further, That the above penalty clause shall be in addition to, and not in substitution for, any other provisions of existing law."

Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. GARY (interrupting the reading of the statement). Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as there is nothing controversial in the conference report or the statement which the Clerk is reading until the amendments in disagreement are reached, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the statement may be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the first amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 1: Page 1, line 8, strike out "$6,000,000" and insert "$10,000,000."

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House insist on its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1.

May I say, however, in making this motion that the House did not include this amount in its bill because they felt it was a legislative matter. The amendment was added by the Senate. The House managers felt that they were under instructions from the full committee.

The motion is made, however, for the sole purpose of bringing the matter before the House. Some members of the subcommittee feel that an increase in the amount is justified and the motion is made without prejudice to their right to take any position they wish.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. FLOOD moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 1 and concur in the same.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN].

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, when the Subcommittee on Appropriations for the District of Columbia had this bill under consideration the matter of the Federal contribution was discussed. It was generally believed by the majority of the membership of the subcommittee that while the sum of $6,000,000 which represents the Federal contribution to the District of Columbia was out of date the committee itself was powerless to include that it in its bill for presentation to the House because it would be subject to a point of order.

Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that Public Law No. 225 of the Seventy-sixth Congress specified that Federal lump sum should be $6,000,000, the committee felt that the legislative committee on the District of Columbia should go into this matter, study it and bring in some authorization legislation. When the bill reached the Senate, that body increased the Federal contribution from the authorized amount of $6,000,000 to $10,000,000. Your committee reached an agreement with the leadership to bring the report here and give the House an opportunity for a separate vote on the problem of Federal contribution to the District of Columbia.

For the information of the House, may I say that in 1923 the Federal contribution was on a 60–40 basis. Before that it was on a 50–50 basis. Public Law 225 of the Seventy-sixth Congress authorized the Federal contribution, as I said before, of $6,000,000. In 1924 the contribution of the Federal Government to the District was over $9,000,000; in 1925, $9,000,000; in 1931 it was nine and a half million dollars; and then it started dropping down in 1933, at which time it was $7,775,000; in 1934 and 1936 it was $5,700,000; and in 1937, 1938, and 1939 it was $5,000,000 even. Therefore, the Federal Government was paying more back in 1923, when the budget for the District of Columbia was around $19,000,000, than it is at the present time, when the budget is around $76,000,000. It is generally thought that the real-estate tax here is very low, and I agree that it is. Many people in Washington feel the same way. The nontaxable land, such as the Federal Government property, runs over $708,000,000. The nontaxable District land is over $91,000,000, and the land belonging to foreign governments and foreign people, which is not taxable, runs over $122,000,000. Therefore, this cuts the taxable land down to around 49 percent. However, that is not the entire picture, and the taxpayers of the District of Columbia really have a case in point here. For this reason, your committee thought we should bring this question out in the open and see how the Members felt about it.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEFAN. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. At what rate is real estate taxed in the District of Columbia?

Mr. STEFAN. At $1.75 a hundred, or $17.50 per $1,000.

Mr. DONDERO. On what basis is real estate assessed in the District of Columbia?

Mr. STEFAN. I will tell the gentleman from Michigan that it is supposed to be assessed at actual valuation, but my information is that it is not entirely on complete full assessed valuation. I agree that the taxes of real estate are low in the District of Columbia, and no one is arguing that point. Certainly it is lower than in my State of Nebraska.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEFAN. I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. RANDOLPH. The members of the legislative committee for the District of Columbia, and the Members of the Subcommittee on Appropriations for the District of Columbia, have had this problem and challenge before them for many, many years. The gentleman from Nebraska, now speaking, has given most careful attention to the considerations involved. I think that I should say for the record that I made a special study of this matter and I am of the considered opinion that the Federal contribution is not commensurate with that which the District of Columbia deserves. I trust that the contention made by the gentleman now speaking and others who join him will be given favorable consideration by this House of the proposal offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Representative FLOOD.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that contrary to a popular opinion that our constituents do not desire adequate Federal contribution that the opposite is true. I believe that the men and women throughout America take justifiable pride in their National Capital, and they desire the Congress always to be fair about a problem of this type, and I do commend the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FLOOD] and I join him heartily in his movement.

Mr. STEFAN. We want to do what is fair.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield in order that I may propound a question to the distinguished gentleman from West Virginia?

Mr. STEFAN. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. TARVER. If the gentleman and his committee, who are charged with the legislative duty and responsibility of reporting legislation affecting the interests of the District of Columbia feel that the Federal contribution to the District of Columbia should be increased, why does not the gentleman's committee bring legislation before the House to increase it rather than to urge the Committee on Appropriations to legislate on the subject?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I think the inquiry made by the gentleman from Georgia is certainly pertinent to this discussion. I do not have the responsibility now of the chairmanship of the District of Columbia Committee, and I cannot speak for our able chairman except to say that as a member of that committee, and in the past its chairman, we did bring from time to time such legislation before the House of Representatives.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN], a member of the District of Columbia Legislative Committee and also the Committee on Appropriations, and interested in the appropriations for the District of Columbia, will remember that not once but many times the legislative committee has acted for an increased Federal contribution. I have always supported such efforts.

Mr. STEFAN. Your subcommittee is bringing this matter before you, following the gentleman's suggestion in the committee that there should be some legislation, but we are in a different position now. The Senate has written an increase into this bill and we bring that to you for the consideration of the House, to vote it up or vote it down.

Mr. TARVER. Will the gentleman continue to yield to me in order that I may address a further inquiry to the gentleman from West Virginia?

Mr. STEFAN. I yield.

Mr. TARVER. If I understood the gentleman correctly a few moments ago, he undertook to speak for the Committee on the District of Columbia and to voice its views.

Mr. RANDOLPH. No, I spoke individually and so stated at the very outset of my remarks.

Mr. TARVER. Very well. The gentleman's committee has not reported the legislation up to this time, during the present Congress.

Mr. RANDOLPH. That is correct.

Mr. TARVER. When they did report it during previous Congresses, it was overwhelmingly rejected by this House.

Mr. RANDOLPH. It was rejected by the House. I once again say to the gentleman from Nebraska and Georgia that I speak individually. I am in favor of the proposal which is made and will support it just as vigorously as I can, with my voice and vote.

Mr. STEFAN. We bring it again before the House for rejection or adoption. I feel, however, that there should be some real consideration given to the taxpayers of the District of Columbia, especially in view of the rising prices of everything, the shrinkage in the amount of land, and many other circumstances which work to the disadvantage of the taxpayers of the District. I am told we have several thousand Nebraska people here. Many have purchased property. They want representation.

Mr. HORAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEFAN. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. HORAN. As a member of the subcommittee, may I say that it was natural that this matter should come before the subcommittee. We reviewed past appropriation totals; inquired as to taxing rates, and discussed all forms of revenue-raising. We were convinced that the Federal participation in the expenses of the District of Columbia should be increased if the expansion program of the Commission is to prevail. At the same time we feel that every taxing method should be reviewed by the Legislative Committee and appropriate suggestions made by them. I am sure that if the Legislative Committee holds hearings it will arrive at the same conclusion. I do hope the House acts wisely on this preferential motion.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, I include a statement from local civic associations on this subject:

STATEMENT ADOPTED BY CIVIC ASSOCIATIONS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA ON JUNE 25, 1946

The undersigned organizations, representing in the aggregate a majority of the residents of the District of Columbia, urge the Congress to adopt the provisions for an increase of $4,000,000 in the Federal payment contained in the District of Columbia appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1947 as passed by the Senate, as a temporary expedient pending the adoption of legislation providing a method of measuring the Federal payment.

There are innumerable compelling reasons testifying to the equity of an increased Federal payment which have convinced those who have studied District of Columbia fiscal conditions—members of the Senate and House Subcommittees on Appropriations for the District of Columbia—that now is the time to recognize the obligation of the National Government to its National Capital.

For example, between 1934 and 1945 Federal Government land holdings increased 17.7 percent and now approximate 42 percent of the total area of the District, exclusive of streets and alleys.

During the fiscal year 1945 the "free taxes" of the Federal Government, the value of water delivered, and the cost of improving, operating, maintaining, and policing parks owned by the Federal Government amounted to $14,638,800. Substantial additional costs are charged to local taxpayers such as the care of Federal prisoners and hospital patients and the education of nonresidents—all of which contribute toward requiring of District of Columbia residents more revenue per capital annually than is the case in the great majority of comparable major American cities.

During the past 25 years general fund costs of operation alone have increased 50 percent per capita, not including the recent 14-percent pay raise to District of Columbia employees adopted by the Congress. During the same period the per capital Federal payment to the District of Columbia has been cut from $23.04 to $6.38, or 75 percent.

We urge the Congress to recognize now that Washington is the Nation's Capital which was created for the benefit of all the people of the United States. It is governed by those people through you, their elected representatives in the Congress. Moral reasons as well as those involving fiscal equity support our belief that the United States should render full justice to the Nation's Capital City through bearing its fair share of its costs.

NOTE.—Original signed by representatives of the above organizations.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FLOOD].

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Speaker, I am glad to see that all the members of the subcommittee on appropriations for the District of Columbia, on both sides of the aisle, apparently feel that my motion to recede and concur in the Senate amendment should be supported, and I have the impression that the chairman of the subcommittee, the distinguished gentleman from Washington [Mr. COFFEE], is of the same opinion. I think the gentleman from Georgia is supported in his suggestions by the distinguished gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH], and I agree.

Yes, there should be some yardstick, there should be some formula, and I suppose that should come from the Legislative Committee of the District of Columbia, but until that time arises there is no reason why we should not now raise this Federal contribution. If and when the legislative yardstick and formula is presented we can make any readjustments that may be necessary.

The subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations for the District of Columbia, began hearings on the District of Columbia appropriation bill for 1947 on February 25, 1946. Those hearings continued through March 8 and comprised some 1,100 pages. In that period of time, there appeared before the committee, not only the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, but every department head, so that a careful examination of the hearings before the subcommittee will give anyone interested a good picture of the municipal set-up, its progress and its problems. In the very beginning of the hearings, the Committee realized that they had a problem confronting them vastly different from that of the preceding years. The amount of increases provided for was somewhat staggering, and forcibly called our attention to the fact that we were no longer dealing with a small town but with a great city that had suddenly almost reach full maturity. We realized that the time had come when the inequitable relationship existing between the District and the Federal Government should be finally and definitely adjusted. We had hoped that our subcommittee and the full committee might take the lead in bringing this to pass and, with that in mind, we made certain representations to the full committee which we were unable to bring to fruition. I am glad that another body has seized the opportunity to attempt to adjust what is undoubtedly a very unjust financial relationship, and I am firmly convinced that every member of the subcommittee feels exactly the same way I do because they have studied the matter and are acquainted with the Federal-District fiscal relationship.

This subject matter may be new to some of the Members of the House, but it is an age-old argument which some of us here have taken a considerable amount of time to analyze. There are a few highlights and points which I would like to get across to you for your consideration.

Point 1: In the second session of the Seventy-seventh Congress, the bill defining the real property exempt from taxation in the District of Columbia was passed. With the bill's approval, the Committee on the District of Columbia submitted a unanimously adopted report, from which I quote the following:

There is another class of property which is accorded exemption under this bill from taxation, and that is federally owned property. The inclusion of this property raises the age-old question of what part the Federal Government should play in the operating expenses of the District government. For many years the Federal Government contributed to such expenses a sum equal to 60 percent thereof. And this at a time when the land holdings of the Government were less than one-third of the present holdings, and the value of the buildings erected thereon was pitifully small as compared to the colossal figure which now represents their valuation. While the growth of the Federal holdings was taking place, and the value increased to a staggering figure the Congress, periodically and consistently, lowered the Federal contribution annually until today it is less than 10 percent or $6,000,000. This creates a situation which ought to receive the early, if not the immediate consideration, of the Congress of the United States.

In these days of adjustment, it is important that the capital city should know what to expect in the way of funds for its maintenance and operation. There is no reason to pass legislation of a piecemeal character, and it should not be difficult to arrive at a fair and equitable figure which will render it unnecessary, year after year, for the officials of the District of Columbia to resort to haphazard and makeshift measures to collect a sufficient amount of revenue to run the affairs of the city. This committee feels that proper adjustment in the fiscal relationship between the two governments should be brought about without delay and recommends immediate steps be taken by the Congress.

This was 1942. Let us assume our responsibility, now.

Point 2: The total land area of the District of Columbia, exclusive of streets and alleys, is 31,068 acres. The taxable land is steadily decreasing and, as territorial limitations are definitely defined, there is no way to expand. Hardly more than 15,000 acres of land is now taxable in the entire District of Columbia. During the period of July 1, 1934, to July 1, 1945, the Federal Government acquired 1,946 acres of land in the District valued at $28,607,544. During the period July 1, 1934, to July 1, 1945, total tax-exempt land increased by 2,031 acres. This is a very serious problem. We are told by those who should know that, because of this reduction in taxable land area and certain other changes, many families who were substantial taxpayers are moving beyond the District line. This is a Federal city; we will continue to exempt embassy property, charitable and national organization property; and we will continue to fill the city with a shifting population. Therefore, let us assume our responsibility now.

Point 3: A shifting, unstable, changeable population may be satisfactory from a political viewpoint, but from the local financial "love of city and civic pride" viewpoint, such a population is not ideal. In 1930 the population was 486,869. That population has been increased over 90 percent. In 1930 the United States was paying $9,000,000 toward the expense of the District, and in 1931 $9,500,000. It is evident that, as the District revenues increased due to population increase, the Congress felt that the people of the District should assume more and more of the burden. The national characteristics of the city at times were apparently completely forgotten, and the services rendered to the Federal Government by the taxpayers of the District were likewise almost completely forgotten. No matter how great the population or how adequate the revenues, our responsibility should not be evaded. Let us assume our responsibility now.

Point 4: There are over 350,000 persons gainfully employed in the District of Columbia, but because of our insistence on relieving certain taxpayers, only a little more than 85,000 individuals filed income-tax returns last year with the District tax assessor. Think of it.

All District of Columbia real estate is valued at $2,304,000,000.

The United States owns $986,000,000.

The District of Columbia owns $98,454,000.

Private exempt is $122,250,000, which leaves taxable $1,382,000,000. As you think of it, remember that the taxable area is steadily decreasing and that expansion is out of the question.

Notwithstanding this record, the revenues per capita in the District of Columbia are higher than in most cities of comparable size. By a very substantial margin, they exceed Buffalo, Milwaukee, San Francisco, Baltimore, Cleveland, St. Louis, and Pittsburgh. The small group who are compelled to pay the taxes are doing their part. Let us assume our responsibility now.

Point 5: Congress has exclusive legislative control over the District and Congress does not hesitate to exercise that control, regardless of the wishes of the District officials. In most instances, District officials are consulted, but in a great many we proceed regardless of their wishes and even without consultation.

The plain fact is that Congress has authorized, in many instances, appropriations to be paid for by local taxpayers without the slightest idea of where the money was coming from.

The plain fact is that we have relieved ourselves and thousands upon thousands of our constituents from paying taxes in the District of Columbia.

The plain fact is that we have endeavored to satisfy selfish interests and selfish groups without attempting to ascertain all the facts in connection with the items they have advocated.

The plain fact is that by far the great majority of our members know little or nothing of the District Government and have little or no time to bother with it.

The plain fact is that until we can create a joint legislative and appropriation committee, formed into a single city council for District affairs, Congress is going to continue doing a messy job for the District.

Point 6: We have created a municipal corporation, and we have made no provision whatsoever for its protection in this body. When we passed the 40-hour-week law, the pay acts providing for overtime and night differential, was there a single individual in the Congress who gave any thought whatsoever to how this legislation might affect the intricate functions of our municipal structure? Certainly not. And neither did anyone consider the manner in which the municipal corporation was going to find the funds to meet its obligations, imposed upon it by this body without consultation or consideration. In 1943, we added to the District of Columbia expenses through overtime and bonuses $2,043,257. This increased in 1944 to $3,588,093; in 1945 to $3,830,238; in 1946 to $7,720,798; and in 1947 to over $11,000,000.

Point 7: On page 24 of the hearings before the subcommittee, there is shown a summary of the free taxes and value of free water rendered the Federal Government and the cost of improvement, operation, maintenance, and policing all parks owned by the Federal Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1945:

Taxes	$12,407,257
Free water	872,095
Improvements, maintenance, and policing of nationally owned parks	1,009,466
Expenses of National Capital Park and Planning Commission	53,705
Operation, maintenance, and policing National Zoological Park	296,277
Total	14,638,800

This represents just a portion of the items that could be fairly and justifiably allocated as District charges against the Federal Government and has nothing to do with the broader aspects which are hardly susceptible of calculation. Your constituents and mine located in the Nation's Capital, in the vast majority of cases, maintain their voting privileges back in their States, and pay little or nothing toward the maintenance, operation, and upkeep of the municipal structure. And those others, the smaller group—natives or lifetime residents—who pay the principal portion of the bill are also subjected to disenfranchisement. Let us assume our responsibility, now.

Point 8: Many say that the real explanation of congressional contempt for the fiscal rights and civic needs of Washington is that the District of Columbia is voteless. They suggest that, if the District had capable representation here and in the Senate, we would not quibble for a moment on whether the Federal lump-sum payment to the District budget should be six million or twelve million. Let us kill this idea that Congress has no respect for anything but votes. Let us assume our responsibility now.

Point 9: When you question the tax paid on real estate of $1.75 per hundred valuation, you should know that this valuation represents, full, fair-market value. You should also bear in mind that there are only 149,372 pieces and parcels of land taxable in the entire District, and, as many individuals own more than 1 piece of property, the number of people paying real-estate taxes is considerably less than this figure. This small number of individuals paid into the District treasury last year $24,225,718. It looks to me like the real-estate owners are paying their share. Let us assume our responsibility now.

Point 10: The officials of the District are awake to the seriousness of the problems confronting the municipality and are engaged in a study of the entire tax structure. They know that many additional millions in revenue will be necessary to maintain Washington as a progressive, modern, and wholesome city, worthy of being the Nation's Capital. The 6-year plan as proposed by the very energetic and capable Engineer Commissioner shows foresight and broad vision. This appears to be a comprehensive program to develop the city in accordance with modern needs and in keeping with service standards for the increased population.

Point 11: The District of Columbia is called upon to pay the expenses of many other activities which are not common to other municipalities. Some of the items that fall within this category are: Maintaining schools for nonresidents, use of Metropolitan Police in national functions, 60 percent of such purely Federal functions as the sedition trial, maintenance of Federal prisoners in District jails, and maintenance of a Soldiers' and Sailors' Home. Protests are made against these charges, but the taxpayers continue to pay. Let us assume our responsibility now.

Point 12: The time has come to assert the fact that we are interested in the local welfare and that we would maintain that interest, even though we lived in far-distant places. We are the custodians of the hopes of the residents of Washington and, as Representatives of the American people charged with shaping the policies of the District, we feel a special interest in the proper development of the seat of government. That proper development cannot proceed in an orderly manner if we are going to be niggardly in our financial relationship. Let us assume our responsibility now.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLOOD. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. Why is it not possible for us to turn back a lot of this property to the private individuals, property that has been rented and made tax-free by the Government during the last 3 or 4 years? If we did that we would give the District a great deal of revenue which they are not now getting, and we would save this country a great deal of money that should be retained in the Treasury.

Mr. FLOOD. From time to time the gentleman's fiscal observations have had merit. I think that this is one.

Mr. RICH. That is one time. Now, let us get another time. Everybody has got his hand out now to take care of the people all over the land. It does not make any difference whether it is in the District of Columbia or your State or any other State. It is about time that the people of this country realized that the Federal Government is about bankrupt. It is about time for Congressmen to recognize that fact.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FLOOD] has expired.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman five additional minutes.

Mr. SHERIDAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLOOD. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SHERIDAN. Why cannot the District revalue the assessable property today, and then we could determine what the Federal contribution should be?

Mr. FLOOD. I can say to the distinguished gentleman that I think that is the problem that was introduced by the gentleman from Georgia for the legislative committee. There has been a tremendous increase in property valuation, from 300 to 500 percent in residential property and more than that in commercial property. But rent ceilings have not been imposed on commercial properties. However, the assessor tells us he has not even caught up with the current problem. I can say to the gentleman that a committee for the District of Columbia Commissioners is doing exactly what the gentleman just requested.

Mr. SHERIDAN. When will that committee report?

Mr. FLOOD. I believe within the next 2 or 3 weeks.

The third point I had in mind was this probable shifting and unstable and ever-changeable population. From a political viewpoint that might be very satisfactory. From the local financial point of view, where you have love of city or civic pride, such population is anything but ideal. In 1930 the population of this town was over 486,000. That population since 1930 has increased around 90 percent.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLOOD. Do you mind if I take 3 or 4 minutes and then I will be glad to yield.

Mr. RICH. Well, just right at that point.

Mr. FLOOD. Very well.

Mr. RICH. The reason why the population has increased in this District is because the Federal Government has increased the number of employees from 500,000 to over 3,000,000. That is the trouble. It is the fault of the administration.

Mr. FLOOD. I presume the gentleman from Pennsylvania is reiterating for an emphatic purpose. I have heard that from him many times.

Mr. Speaker, it is evident that the District revenues have increased as the population increased.

The Congress felt the people of the District should assume more and more of the burden. The national characteristics of this city, as has been mentioned by some of my colleagues so far, have been completely forgotten from time to time. The services rendered to the Federal Government by the taxpayers of the District were likewise almost completely forgotten. No matter how great its population or how adequate the revenue from that population, our responsibility should under no circumstances be avoided or evaded, as seems to be the instance. I should like to use the phrase, and I repeat it for purposes of emphasis: Let us assume our responsibility now.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague the gentleman from New York [Mr. ELSAESSER] may revise and extend his remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection?

(Mr. STEFAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a statement by civic organizations.)

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. KOPPLEMANN].

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. TARVER].

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, this is nothing in the world but an attempt to have the House, in connection with the passage of an appropriation bill, enact legislation which it has refused to enact when the proposal was submitted in prior years from the legislative committee having jurisdiction. Upon those occasions the proposition was overwhelmingly rejected by the House. The Subcommittee on Appropriations for the District of Columbia included in its original report a statement indicating that it favored an increase in the Federal contribution to the governmental expenses of the District of Columbia. On motion submitted by myself in full committee I recall that language was stricken and that there was no objection to striking it out except upon the part of the members of this subcommittee. For some reason it seems that when Members serve on committees or subcommittees dealing with fiscal or legislative problems of the District of Columbia they find it difficult to maintain a national viewpoint on those problems.

I cannot undertake to review in the 5 minutes which have been allotted to me the arguments for and against the proposal to increase the Federal contribution to the District, and I would not undertake to do so even if I had the time because I do not think that subject matter ought to be considered and determined by the House in connection with the passage of an appropriation bill.

It is admitted here that the legislative committee during this Congress, which has lasted now for 18 months, has not reported to the House any legislation on the subject, despite the statement of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH] to the effect that he personally favors the enactment of such legislation. However, it is not improper to say that a great many people regard the District of Columbia as a taxpayers' paradise, and the committee doubtless realizes that no such legislation could be enacted.

The tax rates in the District are lower than in your district and mine, and I say that to every Member of the House. If any Member differs with that conclusion I will be glad for him to indicate that he does so differ.

Mr. KUNKEL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TARVER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. KUNKEL. I want to make an observation, not to differ with the gentleman's conclusion. The other day it was reported in the Washington papers that some property on Dupont Circle had sold for three times its assessed value. It was stated on the floor this morning that property in the District here is assessed at its full value.

Mr. TARVER. Yes. But I think all of us recognize the fact it is not assessed at full value.

The real-estate tax here, as I understand it, is $17.50 per thousand, which takes the place of our county, State, municipal, school district, and all other types of taxes, and there is not a city of comparable size in the United States where higher taxes, including State and other taxes, than obtain in the District of Columbia are not paid. The gas tax here is 2 cents per gallon, whereas in most of the States it is 5, 6, and 7 cents.

The District of Columbia is very fortunately situated. The city of Washington would not be a city except for the Government of the United States and it does not have the burdens to bear in the way of taxes that your cities and mine have to bear. So the proposal to come in here at this time of troubled national financial conditions, when the Government owes $270,000,000,000, and increase the Federal contribution at the expense of your constituents and mine to the government of the District of Columbia, when that government is already so much more fortunately situated than are the city governments in your districts and my district, is to my mind, absolutely ridiculous.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman two additional minutes.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I sincerely hope that the House will maintain the position which it has maintained in former years and decide at this time that it ought not to legislate in connection with an appropriation bill in contradiction of the actions which it has heretofore taken. I trust that the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FLOOD] will be overwhelmingly defeated so that we may not again be troubled with this proposal in connection with an appropriation bill.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, we are facing a responsibility which we owe at the present time to the people of the United States. That is, to be fair with the District of Columbia, to be fair and honest with our own constituents.

I have been looking over this bill a little bit and I find that the expenditures for public parks are $1,200,000 a year. In my community with a population of about 3 percent of what the District has, our expenditure is more than 3 percent of that figure. We have the most beautiful set parks in central New York, and hundreds of thousands of people come there every summer to take advantage of the facilities which those parks offer. We pay for them out of our own tax money that we levy upon the real estate of the community. Our real-estate tax is $32 a thousand or $3.20 a hundred. The District of Columbia tax is $17.50 a a thousand, or $1.75 a hundred. We have in our community as much exempt property in proportion as there is here in the District of Columbia. Our assessments are on 125 percent of value basis. The assessment in the District of Columbia are on a 65 percent of value basis, and have been for years.

Why would it hurt the District of Columbia to increase its tax rate so that it came more near in line with the communities elsewhere in the United States? The trouble with this situation is that it has not been given a thorough analysis by those who have urged that the tax rate be kept down here in the District and the money levied upon the people out in our home districts. Let us take this into consideration. Let us meet our responsibility. The gas tax here is 2 cents a gallon. The gas tax at home is 5 cents a gallon. Everything else is in the same proportion.

Are we to create a group which lives by special privileges here in the District of Columbia or should we treat them like human beings and treat them the way the folks back home are treated? That is the question. Should we give them $4,000,000 beyond what they have or should we represent the people of the United States and meet our responsibilities to the people of the United States?

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. WILSON. Who determines the valuation placed on the property in the District for taxation purposes?

Mr. TABER. The assessor.

Mr. WILSON. Who determines the tax rate?

Mr. TABER. The Commissioners.

Mr. SASSCER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. SASSCER. In treating them like human beings, as the gentleman suggested, would he be willing to extend them the right of suffrage in the District?

Mr. TABER. Why, on some things; yes.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. What is the bonded indebtedness of the District of Columbia, if any?

Mr. TABER. Nothing, and I do not believe there is another community represented here that can tell that story. Because we have been so liberal with our gratuities to the District of Columbia they have no bonded indebtedness. Why should we do more?

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, Washington is to a greater extent than any other city on the globe the Capital of the world. It is one of the great cities of the world and ought to be supported in proportion.

Champ Clark, one of the greatest Speakers who ever presided over the House, once said that no man is educated until he had had three experiences: Until he had taught school, until he had run for office and been defeated, and until he had visited Washington. He said he proposed to someday introduce a bill which would provide expenses for every citizen in the United States to make one trip to Washington to see his own Capital. I grew up under his tutelage, inheriting his political philosophy and with it his interest in the adaquate support of the Nation's Capital. I have spent a larger part of my life in Washington than in any other city. It is to that extent more my home town than any other town in which I have lived. I am deeply interested in it. I am under obligations to it and its institutions. But, Mr. Speaker, we should temper pride and appreciation with prudent business consideration of its obligation to the Nation as well as the Nation's obligation to it. We must face the fact that the average income per capita in Washington is greater than that of any other city in the Nation, that its average per capita wealth is greater and that taxes in proportion to benefits received are less than in any other American city—and under present conditions that means any other city of the world.

But, Mr. Chairman, this is neither the time nor the place to discuss the merits of the proposal. This is not a legislative bill and the committee reporting it is not a legislative committee. The questions involved are too intricate and too important to be decided offhand in a casual discussion here on the floor of the House.

I suggest that for the present you insist upon the disagreement of the House to the Senate amendment and send the bill to conference.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. O'NEAL].

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Speaker, this motion to recede and concur presents to my mind a somewhat anomalous condition on the part of the members of the subcommittee who are supporting this motion. When the Budget estimates came before us, they provided that the District of Columbia should have $6,000,000 for a contribution and $81,500,000 by way of appropriations. This committee, of which some of the members are making and supporting this motion to provide $10,000,000 instead of $6,000,000, said, "We are willing to give you $6,000,000 and $72,000,000 plus by way of appropriations." The Senate took the bill passed by the House and said, "We are willing to give you $6,000,000 and $79,000,000, but we want to increase that $6,000,000 by another $4,000,000." So the House conferees agreed to $76,700,000 by way of appropriation and declined to increase the $6,000,000 contribution. Certain House committee members and conferees are supporting the motion to recede and concur and to give the District of Columbia an additional $4,000,000. This amount is almost equal to the total amount that the House District of Columbia Appropriations Subcommittee was able to save out of the request for appropriations. So some members of this good committee, composed of fine and intelligent public servants, who have worked hard for years to save money and have found the total appropriation request saved by a little over $5,000,000, are seeking to restore almost all the savings, by increasing the contribution by another $4,000,000. Now a motion is made to increase the contribution by a sum almost equal to the result of their labors in paring the appropriations. Why trim appropriations at all, gentlemen? Why not give the sum the Budget asked for rather than to come here and ask to recede and concur by this amendment and give them a lump contribution which puts back practically all that this committee saved? It strikes me as a most amazing thing. It would have been better not to have any hearings if that was the feeling of some of the gentlemen on the committee. They should have said, "Since they ought to have $10,000,000 and they only got $6,000,000, let us not have any hearings and give them the full $81,000,000." But, no, they took off some four or five million dollars and now they want to put most of it back again.

I concur fully, gentlemen, in the idea that an appropriations committee, except on smaller matters involving legislation should keep out of the legislative field. This matter has been before the Congress for a long time. It has been voted against by the Congress. This is increasing the amount more than it has been for many, many years. Certainly some legislative committee should go into that proposition and consider it thoroughly. Perhaps it is the right thing to do—I do not know. I am not speaking with any prejudice, but it is a matter for a legislative committee and not for an appropriations committee particularly when the legislative committee has already been overruled on the proposition submitted today in this motion to recede and concur. The motion should be voted down.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I hope, in all fairness to the District of Columbia, in which we all take great pride as the Nation's Capital, that the House will adopt the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania to recede and concur in the action of the Senate. I think we ought to look back a little bit on the history of this whole relationship between the Federal Government and the District of Columbia. It is not comparable to any other city. The gentleman talks about what other cities do and what they can do. But this is not a comparable situation. All of the land in the District of Columbia originally belonged to the Government, I believe, with some exceptions. That land was gradually sold off to private individuals and Congress adopted then a policy that, in view of the services which the Federal Government received, the Federal Government would pay 50 percent of operating the District of Columbia, as the Federal City—the Federal project, if you please. That situation went on from time to time and then the Congress began to do a little cheese paring and parsimonious operations on the District of Columbia and gradually cut that down by the appropriations, although the law calls for a 50-percent contribution. Subsequently, that law was changed. I want to recall to you what the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN] told you awhile ago. He was giving you cold facts—that is, that in the District of Columbia there are properties exempt, by reason of the action of this body and by the fact that it is Government-owned property, to the extent of 50 percent of the property in the District of Columbia. It is exempt from taxation. The District government has to service all those properties. Now, that is not fair or right. We complain about conditions in the District of Columbia, yet when the District people come here and need something for a righteous cause we sit around and talk about saving a few dollars when we all want to see this city what it should be—the most beautiful city in the world. Still we are cheese paring and parsimonious with them all the time. It is not right. Let us be right and give them the $10,000,000 that they ask. Let us remember that in the last few years the Government has taken over an enormous amount of taxable property and removed it from taxation, in order to build Government buildings and housing projects. Outside the District of Columbia the Government pays communities certain lump sums in lieu of taxation. Why are you not willing to do it in the United States Capital, that belongs to every man, woman, and child in this National Government, in which we all take pride?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH] has expired.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I believe there is a happy solution to this dilemma that confronts us. I shall vote against the preferential motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FLOOD], to concur in the Senate amendment so that the bill can go back to conference. I then very respectfully suggest to the conferees that you reexamine the matter and see whether a compromise cannot be effected. After all, the only reason you brought it back was because you wanted some indication from the House, as I understand it. That can be worked out. Perhaps make it $8,000,000. I concur in your views on this matter.

Since I came here in 1933 the Federal holdings have increased 17 percent. Forty-two out of every hundred acres in Washington today belong to the Federal Government. You cannot tax it. March out Massachusetts Avenue sometime and see all the beautiful embassies. They are not taxed. Every time a national organization appears before the Judiciary Committee to secure a Federal charter, it sets up a fine headquarters and by virtue of the Federal charter you cannot tax them. Therefore the District is broke today. Do not kid yourselves about it. The District is broke. The District Commissioners have been in my office from time to time imploring me and other members of the legislative committee to go along with a sales tax.

I was the one, and I say it modestly, who helped kill off the sales tax before. I am not so sure that I will take that attitude again. You cannot run a town on wind and water. When you talk about benefits to your constituents, how many of your boys in uniform came here to the Nation's Capital and enjoyed the benefits of this great city, the parks, and everything that go with it? I have some pride in the Nation's Capital. Let us not be so niggardly about it. I can challenge almost every tax figure that has been recited on the floor today. Of the 30 cities of comparable size in the United States, there are about 15 which have a tax rate higher than Washington. There are fifteen that have a tax rate lower than Washington. So there is a case for the conferees. I suggest you take it back and come back with a compromise. I am for you on this.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. SASSCER].

Mr. SASSCER. Mr. Speaker, I hope this additional appropriation passed by the Senate will be agreed to by the House. As was stated a moment ago by my colleague the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH], we should make the Capital of the United States the greatest, the most beautiful city in our country.

In the District of Columbia practically all taxes have to come from homes because there are no great industries or factories here to assess, and a great proportion of the land has gone to governmental use on which no tax can be assessed.

I wish in particular to point out one instance that very definitely shows the need for more money here in the District, and that is the situation prevailing at the District Training School at Laurel, Md., to which unfortunates of insufficient mental capacity, non compos mentis, are sent. Due to lack of safety facilities and to lack of sufficient funds to properly care for these unfortunates a disgraceful situation prevails there. A short time ago this was brought into the public press. Some investigation has been made, and I hope it will be carried through. I thought first this condition was probably due to improper management, but upon investigation I find that the management is doing the best it can with grossly inadequate funds. I have not time to go fully into the letter which was sent to me by the District Commissioners as to this institution. I asked for a report on the more or less frequent escapes and crimes being committed by some of those who have escaped from the District Training School. In 1943 there were 340 absconders from this mental institution, 300 of whom are still at large. In 1944 there were 399 absconders, 391 of whom are still at large. In 1945 there were 331 absconders, with 306 still at large. In 1946 there were 286 absconders, with 275 of them still at large.

At this institution there are little children hopelessly insane, definitely of the idiot class. The inmates range from children to aged adults.

Due to lack of appropriation, due to a gross lack of security facilities, there over 300 escapes a year occur and over 300 inmates a year stay at large.

In this article that broke in the papers some months ago a sex crime was alleged to have been committed by one of those who escaped. I am told that some of the absconders are young feeble-minded girls without homes who go back onto the streets as prostitutes, and in some instances I understand they are still on the streets. I merely call that to the attention of the House to demonstrate the fact that the budget of the District of Columbia is grossly inadequate. The safety, health, and morals of the Capital City are being imperiled through loss of assessable basis and inadequate Federal contribution to offset this loss of revenue through Federal acquisition of land. If we are to maintain Washington as it should be, the most beautiful, most progressive, and greatest city in the Nation, then the Congress of the United States charged with legislating for a voteless people should see that adequate funds to augment their budget are voted to them.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Maryland has expired.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BUCK].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Virginia asked for some facts and I propose to give him some.

The District of Columbia has no bonded debt. The City of New York is bonded to the hilt. The District of Columbia has no sales tax. The City of New York has a sales tax of 2 percent. The tax rate in the District of Columbia is $1.75 a hundred. The tax rate in the city of New York is $2.70. Assessed valuations in the city of New York are in excess of true value. I know of an instance in Washington where a property assessed at $11,000 sold for $35,000.

On the basis of the above figures I cannot see any possible justification for an increased Federal contribution to the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER. All time has expired.

The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FLOOD] to recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. FLOOD) there were—ayes 32, noes 69.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 112, nays 209, not voting 111, as follows:

The doors were opened.

The SPEAKER. The question recurs on the motion of the gentleman from Virginia that the House further insist on its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read, as follows:

Senate amendment No. 67: Page 54, line 6, insert the following:

Water fund, investment, District of Columbia: The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to sell United States securities now held for and on account of the water fund of the District of Columbia in such amounts as may be certified by the Commissioners as necessary and credit the proceeds of such sale to said water fund.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 71: Page 60, strike out all of lines to 22 inclusive, and insert the following:

"SEC. 3. No part of any appropriation contained in this act shall be used to pay the salary or wages of any person who engages in a strike against the Government of the United States or who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States, or who advocates, or is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided, That for the purposes hereof an affidavit shall be considered prima facie evidence that the person making the affidavit has not contrary to the provisions of this section engaged in a strike against the Government of the United States, is not a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States, or that such person does not advocate, and is not a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided further, That any person who engages in a strike against the Government of the United States or who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States, or who advocates, or who is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence and accepts employment the salary or wages for which are paid from any appropriation contained in this act shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or both: Provided further, That the above penalty clause shall be in addition to, and not in substitution for, any other provisions of existing law."

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. GARY moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 71, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out and inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 3. No part of any appropriation contained in this act shall be used to pay the salary or wages of any person who engages in a strike against the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia or who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States or the government of he District of Columbia, or who advocates, or is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided, That for the purposes hereof an affidavit shall be considered prima facie evidence that the person making the affidavit has not contrary to the provisions of this section engaged in a strike against the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia, is not a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia, or that such person does not advocate, and is not a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided further, That any person who engages in a strike against the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia or who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia, or who advocates, or who is a member of an organization, that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence and accepts employment the salary or wages for which are paid from any appropriation contained in this act shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or both: Provided further, That the above penalty clause shall be in addition to, and not in substitution for, any other provisions of existing law."

The motion was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider the votes by which action was taken on the several motions was laid on the table.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 680 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That during the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6885) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, to provide appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, all points of order against the bill or any provisions contained therein are hereby waived.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a newspaper article.

Mr. MCCORMACK asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances.

Mr. JUDD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances and include certain excerpts.

Mr. HAGEN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD on the subject of housing and include a newspaper article.

Mr. CANFIELD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a newspaper editorial and a newspaper article.

Mr. WILSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial appearing in Monday morning's Indianapolis Times.

Mr. ARNOLD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include some editorial material.

Mr. WEAVER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an article appearing in the Washington Star.

Mr. BLOOM asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an address made by John C. Payne, president of the Society of Authors, Composers, and Publishers.

Mr. PRICE of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and to include therewith an address delivered by Maj. Paul H. Douglas entitled "A House Undivided."

The Public Printer advises me that the address will make two and two-thirds pages in the RECORD and will cost $160. I ask unanimous consent that it be printed notwithstanding.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, notwithstanding the cost, the extension may be made.

There was no objection.

THIRD DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL, 1946

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6885) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, to provide appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes; and pending that motion, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that general debate continue for 3 hours, the time to be equally divided and controlled by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] and myself.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 6885, with Mr. COOLEY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, in every State in the Union the leading businessmen, the men who do things, who set the machinery in motion and keep the business of the country going, the men upon whom we must depend to initiate and maintain production and employment are beginning to say, "What is the use of opening up a new enterprise and making more money if it all goes out on taxes? We are merely working for the Government. They take all we make away from us in income taxes."

The great demand today, and the great need of business in the reconversion period, the great requisite to encourage production and employment, is to reduce taxation sufficiently to reward and compensate the entrepreneur, the man who can start business and keep it going and thereby increase the national income. We cannot reduce taxes unless we reduce expenditures, and there will be no reduction in taxes and there will be no permanent prosperity until we have reduced national expenditures and national obligations, to a point where we can balance the Budget, provide tax reduction, prevent inflation, and reach the standard of living which this Nation has every right to expect.

Not only in this bill, Mr. Chairman, but in every bill which the Committee on Appropriations has reported to the House this session we have had this in mind. We have endeavored to follow a program of retrenchment and economy. We have cut the Budget estimates. We have endeavored to get the country back off its spending spree, away from the huge appropriations which have been necessary during the war and to initiate a post-war readjustment in costs of operation of government which will make it possible for us early in the next Congress to reduce taxes. That is the only way it can be done. This bill is a fair sample.

Of the amount carried in this bill, a very large bill, carrying appropriations of over three-quarters of a billion dollars, only $16,300,000 is for purposes other than those incurred by reason of the war. In this bill we cancel outstanding obligations and contractual authorities in excess of $3,000,000,000. In other words, Mr. Chairman, when we pass this bill we will have canceled, rescinded, and saved for the Treasury in excess of $64,000,000,000.

In future years, when we look back upon the accomplishments in the fiscal conduct of this war, that is the one thing which will stand out above all else—the efficient and businesslike fiscal administration of this war and epecially the prompt action, beginning on VE-day, by which we put into operation machinery which has saved for the Federal Treasury the huge sum of more than $64,000,000,000.

If this bill had been brought in before the adoption of the present budgetary system, if this were back in the old days, we would call it the general deficiency bill. In the old days, at the end of a session of Congress we lumped together all the odds and ends. The agencies came in and requested us to furnish funds to wind up their business for the remainder of the fiscal year. This last bill was a general catch-all, and was supposed to make final provision for deficiencies in any Federal activity. It was the final appropriation.

I can emphasize that "final appropriation" as to this bill, because this, as far as we are now aware, this is the last appropriation bill which the committee will report in this Congress. That is an important consideration, because the prospect is that Congress will be in recess until January, the longest period that this Congress has been in adjournment since the beginning of the war in 1941. During the war it was necessary for Congress to remain in session continuously. We barely had a chance to get home before the elections. Congress was ready at any time to meet any emergency which might arise. Now that this necessity is past we are entering upon the longest absence from Washington in the last 5 years. It follows we must make provision for all contingencies which may occur in these coming months. We have endeavored in this bill to provide for every foreseeable emergency. The result is we have a bill which is in some effects contingent. That is true of the war agencies for which the bill provides. It is particularly true of the Selective Service Administration. At this time the bill authorizing appropriations for OPA and Selective Service operations have not yet been enacted. The OPA bill is still pending between the two Houses. It is impossible to foresee what the financial demands of these two bills will be. So we are considerably handicapped in providing for them during the long period in which there will be no recourse to the Congress for further deficiencies.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself an additional 10 minutes.

Now we provide for that situation in this wise. We have reduced such appropriations by one-fourth. In addition, we have provided that the Bureau of the Budget shall within 30 days after the passage of the OPA and selective service laws make a survey of the situation; and taking into consideration the final form of the bills authorizing the OPA and selective service, shall publish its findings and freeze any unnecessary amounts which have been provided in the pending bill. Then, having appropriated only three-quarters of the amount for interim expenses, on our return in January we will be able on a basis of actual computation and factual estimates, to make any further provision for them which may at that time be found necessary.

We make final provision in this bill for UNRRA. The appropriation includes the last $465,000,000 necessary to carry out the obligations which this Government has assumed to dispose of our responsibility for feeding the world and maintaining order abroad.

In the War Assets Administration a very acute situation obtains. There are billions of dollars worth of Government property of every character which the Government has on hand and which it must dispose of at the earliest possible date and at the highest possible price. The men in charge of this administration are faced with an impossible task. No matter what they do—actually irrespective of any decision they may make or any contract they may enter into—they are going to be charged, first, with unwarranted delay in disposing of this property; and second, with selling the property at less than it ought to have brought on the market. And you can add, third, that they will be charged with collusion in selling these goods at prices which enable buyers to make unconscionable profits. So no matter what these men in charge of the War Assets Administration and in charge of surplus property do, they will certainly be condemned. They are damned if they do and they are damned if they do not. But this committee facing that situation has urged upon them an accelerated action in disposing of everything that we have if possible within one year after the close of this fiscal year.

That is done, first, in order to provide needed commodities for which there is a market and for which there is meager supply. It is done, in the second place, in order to avoid demoralization of the market after reconversion starts and legitimate production puts goods upon the market which will be in competition with anything which may remain unsold.

Of course, the third purpose is economy, in order to decrease the custodial care, warehousing, and the extensive personnel necessary to sell billions of dollars' worth of property of every character scattered throughout the world, in the shortest time possible.

We included in the bill a provision which has been carried in all of the general appropriation bills up to this time, with the exception of the first two, a prohibition against the employment of personnel in Government who are members of unions which permit strikes against the Government. I think there is absolutely no necessity for such a provision. It is inconceivable that Federal employees would engage in a strike against the Government. They never have, and in my opinion they never will. But there is a feeling that in order to be certain about the matter, we ought to include this provision. So in response to that sentiment, and in response to frequent amendments inserted by the other body, we have included in this bill an all-embracing blanket provision that the Federal employees shall not belong to any union which permits or encourages strikes against the Government.

Mr. Chairman, I wish I could have at this time presented a general résumé of all the appropriations for this session. It is impossible for the reason that we have not yet reached the final stage of enactment of some of the important appropriation bills. But before the end of the session I will follow the long-established custom of submitting such a report, a summarization of all the appropriations which have been made in this entire session. It is a very encouraging report and a very creditable record.

Mr. Chairman, I want at this time to make acknowledgment of the great service rendered by the minority members of this committee in achieving that record. We have had cooperation from all members of the minority, both on the subcommittees and on the whole committee, all of whom have had their part in a program showing a greater reduction over previous appropriations than ever made before in the history of the Congress.

This remarkable rescission makes possible the saving in appropriations of an amount so large as to be beyond the comprehension of the finite mind of man.

I wish especially to acknowledge at this time the obligation of the committee, of the House, and of the country to the one man who has had more to do with the exceptional record we have made this session than any man connected with the program. That is the clerk of the committee, John Pugh, diplomat and financier par excellence. He has been tireless, exhaustless, indefatigable in the work he has devoted to this huge program. I have called on him at midnight and found him in his office here.

I have come here on Sunday and found him working as assiduously as on any other day of the year. As a matter of fact the burden of handling all these bills—the most extensive hearings, the greatest amount of money involved in the history of the Nation—passed through his capable hands. We could not have made this record, we could not have as efficiently and effectively handled the fiscal program of the Nation through this critical period without John Pugh's cooperation, his admirable management of the many difficult problems involved, and especially without his comprehensive knowledge of every detail of the fiscal operation of the Government.

Mr. Chairman, let me again express appreciation of the cooperation of every member of the Committee on Appropriations, and particularly of the invaluable service rendered by the clerk of this committee, Mr. Pugh.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, this bill provides what we used to call "an enormous amount of money." The cash appropriations involved run into $726,000,000. According to the report of the committee that is $184,000,000 below the Budget estimates. That cut is made up very largely of $120,000,000 that was provided in the Budget for the State Department set-up to be transferred for the handling of surplus property. That we eliminated. The surplus property situation is in a rather difficult situation and frankly it begins to have me disturbed.

I have in front of me the comparative analysis of receipts and disbursements on page 2 of the Treasury report. There the receipts for the month of June from surplus property are $4,573,000. Down below there is an item "Surplus property disposal agencies, disbursements, $32,644,000." We are only paying out $32,600,000 to get back $4,000,000. Maybe that is good business, but it seems to me that whatever we have in the way of collection agencies and business management in that surplus outfit ought to begin to get busy. It is about time that we begin to get in more money than we pay out and it is about time that this picture begin to show on the right side of the ledger.

There has been a reduction made in the proposal sent up here by the Budget to provide funds for the War Assets Administration in connection with its operations on surplus property. There we have made a cut in the amount that was estimated for the corporation from a figure of $545,000,000 to $435,000,000. They have an enormous number of employees—probably they have to have—but I do think that there should be more speed and that there should be more cleaning up of the things that they have to do. Frankly, it does not present a satisfactory picture to me. I question whether that outfit will need any such volume of funds if it were run by a first-class businessman. I have been advised by people who should know that 10 percent would be a fair figure out of the receipts to cover expenses. The results we have been getting the last 2 months show more disbursements than receipts and we certainly are down in the pit when it comes to any efficiency in connection with the operations of the War Assets Administration. I would hope that we might get better results in the future out of this organization. If we do not, it is about time somebody found out what is going on and did something to remedy the situation.

In reference to OPA, that organization had a Budget estimate up here for $142,000,000. The committee allowed $106,650,000. We all know that under the bill that has passed the House and which will probably pass the Senate they are no longer empowered to get out crazy regulations providing for the control of production. They will not be able to keep production down as that bill is drawn in the way they have been able to do it for the last 12 months. They will have only straight pricing regulations, the small amount of rationing that is necessary with reference to sugar and the enforcement problem that will be legitimate.

They have been spending an enormous volume of funds upon propaganda, in violation of the law, and those funds should not be spent in the next year. In my opinion, we should adopt a rider to that language carried here which will prevent the use of these funds for propaganda purposes and we should cut out the crazy schemes for getting out all sorts of press releases that have misrepresented this whole picture and misrepresented the Congress to the entire Nation. It is about time that we began to wake up and realize our responsibilities and to put the brakes on a group of irresponsible bureaucrats.

There are other items involved here that seem to me need attention. The Civilian Production Administration has been allowed $20,000,000.

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. RABAUT. As to this advertising by OPA that the gentleman refers to, the gentleman reads the newspapers, and so does everybody else, and we certainly have seen plenty of ads in the newspapers by organizations that were certainly directly opposed to OPA. Now, should we expect OPA, as an agency of this Government in trying to keep the spiral of inflation from going wide, right out into the sky, to lie down and just take it? Would that satisfy everybody? I do not think so.

Mr. TABER. Let us see what the picture has been. The OPA has been putting out statements to the effect that if this bill that the House has passed is put through, that we would have uncontrolled inflation. We all know that the way in which they have throttled production in the last year that they have produced terrific black markets and uncontrolled inflation as well. It is going a long way for us to expect the Government of the United States to provide funds for a group of irresponsible bureaucrats to present misleading information to the people of the United States and to stir up all sorts of broadcasters and newspaper writers to make statements that we know are absolutely different from the facts that exist. They try to cover up their responsibility for this situation by talking about the things that are proposed without in any way having met their responsibilities or done the things that they should do to keep down the prices in this country and protect the consumers.

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield further, in the first place, whatever they advertised, or whatever notices they broadcast, were not about the bill as it passed the House. If it was anything, it was against the proposed bill which did not pass in the House. Everybody admits that the proposed bill was unsatisfactory and everyone around here feels somewhat relieved that that bill did not pass. That is No. 1.

The other thing is that we constantly hear them referred to as bureaucrats, but the OPA was organized for the protection of the people and, as such, as the people's agency, it has every right in the world to make it known to the people. It is their duty to make it known to the people, and it cannot make it known except by those charged with the enforcement of OPA, or the care of OPA, or whatever you want to call it.

Mr. TABER. I cannot agree with the gentleman that the OPA has been trying to protect the people. I have seen them operate and I am going to give you some illustrations.

Mr. RABAUT. I will agree with the gentleman that there have been some errors.

Mr. TABER. They have not protected the people. They have tried in every possible way, by wildcat regulations declaring the quantity of production of this thing and that that could be made, to throttle production and prevent the people from getting the things they need. They have also brought about large increases in prices by promoting scarcity. Those thing have had a very bad effect upon our price situation. There has not been a normal trend of production that would result in the heading off of increases in prices. We have had enormous increases growing out of these things and we have had tremendous black markets. We have gotten right now to the point where our food situation is nearly all black market. We are not going to get any better if we give the OPA money to do things and continue this agitation that has resulted in their being in the position they are in. They would not be there if they had done their duty and passed on these questions that have been presented to them with reference to prices. They would not have throttled production, they would have increased it, and we would have gotten through with this situation and would not need in any way to have price control.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 additional minutes.

The Civilian Production Administration has been allowed $20,000,000. We have in previous bills provided them with all the funds they need to look after the housing proposal. What kind of a mess they are going to make of that I do not know. I do know that they are not proceeding to handle the things as expeditiously and promptly as I would wish. What else there is for them to do it is difficult to say. I cannot understand how they can use $20,000,000 this coming fiscal year.

The Selective Service has been allowed $27,000,000 out of a Budget estimate of $37,000,000. I am just using rough figures. There is no draft for July and there is no draft for August. If there are enlistments enough resulting from the increased pay and the efforts that are being made to make the men who are enlisting in the Army feel easier, we will have no draft in September or the rest of the year, according to the policy the Army has laid down. I do not believe that organization is going to need any $27,000,000. I do not know what ought to be done, but I do believe there will be no occasion for them to use any such amount of money.

The lend-lease proposition was presented to us. I do not know how many Members of the House know what the situation is with reference to the lend-lease business at this time, but it has been extended and shipments to other countries have been projected down through the 31st of December.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Can the gentleman tell the committee just how much funds are available for lend-lease purposes at this time?

Mr. TABER. I will do the best I can, but I cannot tell exactly. The reason is that we found on checking up, their obligations to the Commodity Credit Corporation were overstated $400,000,000.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Overstated?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Can the gentleman tell us who was responsible for that overstatement?

Mr. TABER. I do not know whether it was the Commodity Credit Corporation or the Lend-Lease Administration, or both, but I assume it was both. I would not figure a thing like that could happen without the——

Mr. WOODRUFF. A bit of conspiring, will we say?

Mr. TABER. Well, I do not know about conspiring—I would not say that. I would say it merely indicated lax bookkeeping or accounting methods. I should say accounting because bookkeeping is a "horse and buggy" phrase.

Mr. WOODRUFF. In other words, the gentleman is in a very charitable state of mind?

Mr. TABER. Yes. But I will try to tell the gentleman about how much there is. As of May 1, there was an unexpended balance of $2,787,000,000. They had obligations outstanding as of that date, according to their books, amounting to $2,118,000,000. I am not mentioning the thousands of dollars, but am just using round figures. That leaves an unobligated balance of $669,000,000. They estimated savings as of that date amounting to perhaps $300,000,000 in those obligations as the result of cancellation of contracts.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Did I understand the gentleman to say they were savings?

Mr. TABER. They estimated savings in the obligations, that is a reduction of the obligations due to the cancellation of contracts.

Mr. WOODRUFF. And they term the reductions savings?

Mr. TABER. They may be savings, but they are only savings from the standpoint of the obligations existing as of the date that they make the cancellation. They do reduce the obligations.

Mr. WOODRUFF. That is the first time, may I say to the gentleman, that we have known of anything that even smells of savings coming out of Lend-Lease.

Mr. TABER. I do not know, of course, but they claim they are going to obligate something like $236,000,000 more. A very large portion of the set-up for Lend-Lease along the line of obligations is owed to the War Shipping Administration. The War Shipping Administration is from 6 months to a year behind in its collections. Part of it is due to the volume of things that are shipped to distant parts of the world which are off the regular lines and are considerably difficult to check up on.

Now they have a program of shipments for the rest of the year which runs into considerable figures. During the period from September 2, 1945, they have shipped to other countries, according to the tables before me, approximately $450,000,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

That is as near as I can tell it from the tables on pages 656 and 657 of our hearings. The proposed shipments through the rest of the year run into considerable figures, as I remember it about $150,000,000 for the balance of the year. Their liquidation expenses are heavy, but the figures have been given as well as I can do it.

As the bill is read for amendment, amendments probably will be offered at different places in the bill. I have not mentioned UNRRA. I will leave that for some of the others to talk about. They have been provided, with the $465,000,000 which is carried here, with funds that would carry them well into 1947. I do not believe they will be able to procure the material and ship the goods to use up all of the funds that have been provided them within the time limits that are set for their operations.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. SPRINGER. I notice by the report that the bill carries the $465,000,000 for UNRRA.

Mr. TABER. It does.

Mr. SPRINGER. There has been a lot of confusion in the administration of these UNRRA funds. What does the gentleman have to say in regard to that particular matter?

Mr. TABER. Well, there has been a great deal of confusion and there has been a great deal of question as to how far it was doing the job it is supposed to do. The relief problem all over the world is exceedingly difficult. The picture is so confused, and their accounting has been on such a basis down to the time that Mr. LaGuardia took charge, that you could tell very little about it. That is about the situation. You can tell a little more now, but it is not satisfactory.

Mr. SPRINGER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. WHITE].

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Chairman, I take the floor at this time in the consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill to put the House on notice that a mistake has been made in dealing with one of the Bureau of Reclamation projects in the regular Interior Department appropriation bill.

In the Snake River Valley in southwestern Idaho we have one of the most productive and one of the most highly developed irrigation districts in the entire United States.

When President Roosevelt made his tour of the country and wanted to see irrigation in its perfection he stopped the Presidential train in the city of Boise, the capital of Idaho. He left his train there and made a tour for a whole day to see what had been accomplished with reclamation. That was in the Boise project supplied with water from the Boise River. Due to the extension of this early day irrigation project it is in an intensely settled area of fine homes, productive farms on small tracts. The system of farming in this country has changed in large measure. We found out there that the dairy business was profitable. The pastures are small and the herds of dairy cattle large. I might say that handling the dairy products of this section of the country we have one of the finest cooperative creameries and dairy industry in the whole State if not in the whole United States. This land which produces possibly two crops of alfalfa a year is used in the fall months for pasture so that we may produce milk and butter. Due to the shortage of water there has been a demand for a long time and an effort to secure supplemental water. The regular supplies from the existing facilities and dams runs low along in the month of August, leaving us short of water and with scant pasture in the fall months. There is another reason why water is urgently needed on this land in the late summer and that is because we have gone into the production of sugar. We are raising sugar beets. We have two of the finest sugar refineries in the Snake River Valley, one near Nyssa, Oreg., and the other at Nampa, Idaho.

The sugar beet is peculiar in that it must receive water at the time the sugar is formed in the root. You may have a fine looking field of sugar beets in the summer, but fall is the time of the year the sugar is formed and that is the time the beets must have water.

The Bureau of Reclamation has been endeavoring to relieve this situation by finding a new source of additional water. The Bureau of Reclamation made a survey and study of the water resources of the Boise River and found a suitable site for a storage dam at a place called Twin Springs some time back and all arrangements were made, the tests were made, the rock was bored, and everything was ready to begin building a big dam and store water for supplemental use in the late fall at Twin Springs. Then the Army engineers went into the field, made their own survey and examination and found a better site. They found a site at a place called Anderson

Ranch. At Anderson Ranch they found they could impound a vast supply of water. The project was estimated to cost $29,000,000. It was finally adopted by the Bureau of Reclamation and the Army engineers and a shift was made from Twin Springs to Anderson Ranch. Work was started and we have appropriated money from year to year to carry on this work. One of the biggest contracting firms in the whole West, the Morrison Knutson Co., these people are now doing the construction work. They have run the tunnels to divert the stream and construction work has been going steadily forward. We kept the work going forward during the war realizing the loss the Government would incur should this work stop.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Idaho has expired.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from Idaho five additional minutes.

Mr. WHITE. So, during the emergency of the war we kept the work going and kept the contractor and the equipment on the job.

Through an error this item was reduced far below the Budget estimate in the regular appropriation bill. We are asking you to give us money to continue this work. The Budget estimate was $2,847,000. When the matter went to the Appropriations Committee of the House the amount was reduced to $1,224,475.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITE. I would like to complete my statement because this is a very important matter and I would like to put the House on notice with reference to this situation.

Mr. SPRINGER. The question I was going to ask is, How much money has already been appropriated for this project?

Mr. WHITE. I was coming to that and I thank the gentleman for his question. We have already appropriated and spent over $18,000,000. The contractors are on the ground, the facilities are there for crushing rock, pouring cement, and so forth and this huge outlay of equipment is now there and in operation.

The difficulty comes through a formula adopted by the House and Senate conferees on the Appropriations Committees. I am told that when the conferees came to reclamation projects they adopted a formula. Where the Senate had raised a number of these appropriation items over the House figure they agreed on the formula that if the job could be completed in 1 year then they would accept the increased amount of the Senate Appropriations Committee so that the job could be completed and sent on its way. If it cannot be completed in 1 year it was agreed that they would drop back to the House figure. So, in connection with this Anderson Ranch matter, the Senate raised the figure of $1,115,660 as passed by the House to the Budget estimate of $2,782,659, but, as stated, in adopting this formula that if the project could not be finished this year they cut the amount back to the House figure, which will have a very disastrous effect. It will result, so I have been told by the Commissioner of Reclamation, in having to close this work down before we reach the month of August. Just imagine the loss that the Government will take on an investment of $18,000,000 by the failure to appropriate the full Budget amount. We will have to shut down. We already have this equipment, we already have the tools, all of the organization. We will have to pull out just for the reason that the formula does not work in this particular case.

I am calling the attention of the House to this matter. I am cautioned that if I offer an amendment on the floor and let the House exercise its prerogative and its judgment and the amendment fails, then we are ruined, and the item will be ruled out by the conferees when the bill comes back to the House; that the thing for me to do is to let the House blunder through, make its mistake, let the bill as it is go to the Senate; they will correct the matter, then it can come back to the conferees and the conferees will accept the item because it was not voted on in the House and the matter will be straightened out. I am sick and tired of this way of correcting mistakes in making appropriations. We should find a better way than by waiting for another body to correct the errors made by the House. I am putting the House on notice that a serious mistake has been and is being made. In deference to the plans of my colleagues, I am going to defer offering this amendment because I do not want the people of Idaho to lose out and I do not want the Government to lose out on a proposition of such magnitude.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. WHITE. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. SPRINGER. May I ask the gentleman if the basic reason for reducing the appropriation from the amount which the Senate has fixed back to the amount the House provided was on account of not being able to use this money during the present year? What was the basic reason for the change?

Mr. WHITE. Answering the gentleman's question, evidently the Appropriations Committee misunderstood the situation. I think the Bureau of the Budget made a very careful estimate and allowed the amount necessary to carry on the work for the coming year. They are disposed to cut the estimates of the Bureau of Reclamation and Irrigation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Idaho has expired.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman two additional minutes.

Mr. WHITE. Under the present rules no matter what the Bureau of the Budget does in cutting down the appropriations estimates asked for by the departments, when it comes out that is just what they want. They accept it and say they like it. The Bureau of Reclamation submitted its estimates to the Bureau of the Budget. The Bureau of the Budget adopted the $2,782,659 figure. They knew the needs of the project. But, an error has been made here in applying the formula adopted by the conferees.

I stand behind this Committee on Appropriations in efforts to reduce expenses by cutting the estimates of these departments and cut these appropriations and save the taxpayers money; I am 100 percent behind it, but if they make an error I think it should be corrected, and my purpose in getting on this floor this afternoon is to help correct a mistake that has been made and save a loss that will be incurred if this money is not forthcoming to keep this work going.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITE. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. PITTENGER. I want to say to the gentleman that he has made a most interesting contribution here this afternoon, and I hope he will keep up the fight. I am going to vote against this bill for a number of reasons, not because I am against some of the appropriations but because I do not like the method and I do not like the procedure. I certainly agree with the gentleman that there is no agency of this Government that is sacred or sacrosanct, and if we are going to yield to some bureau downtown, then Congress has surrendered its rights and its jurisdiction.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, this bill carries appropriations of over $726,000,000, and in addition to that authority to use operating receipts of over $438,000,000, or a total of about $1,165,000,000.

The appropriations show reductions compared to the Budget of over $184,000,000, and the operating receipts show an apparent reduction of over $110,000,000. I call attention, however, to the fact that most of the latter reduction is a paper reduction rather than a real one, representing deferred action to be based on actual expenditure.

The bill covers a wide range of items, some of them in my judgment based on inadequate data and providing for considerable duplication of functions.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. PITTENGER. The gentleman says they are based on inadequate data. They have had week after week and month after month to bring in figures to the gentleman's committee, and they are bringing them in at the last minute, are they not?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. If the gentleman will allow me to proceed, I think he will see what I had in mind in making the statement.

WAR ASSETS ADMINISTRATION

Take, for instance, the War Assets Administration. This agency is the result of Executive order, serving to combine the War Assets Corporation, formerly known as the Petroleum Reserves Corporation, with the Surplus Property Board, which the Congress set up, and the Veterans Certification Functions of the Smaller War Plants Corporation.

The effect of that Executive action, by the way, is to place property outside of the continental limits of this country under the State Department, leaving the property within this country under the War Assets Administration, as contrasted with the provision which the Congress made when both types of property were placed under the Surplus Property Board.

This Administration asked for no less than $545,000,000 of administrative expenditure and a personnel of 50,761 as compared with something under $200,000,000 and a personnel of 22,000 in this fiscal year.

If we add to that $120,000,000 desired by the State Department in respect to property outside of the continental limits of the country, we have a request for over $665,000,000 for the purpose of disposing of surplus property in the fiscal year 1947.

What is the disposal program for the fiscal year 1947, Mr. Chairman?

To boil it all down, the Administration tell us they are going to sell about $15,400,000,000 worth of property in this country and hope with good luck to realize on it about $2,900,000,000, or 18 percent of the original cost of the property to Uncle Sam. In order to realize that $2,900,000,000 they ask for $545,000,000 for administrative expenditure. Deducting this request from $2,900,000,000 means a net return of only 15 cents on the dollar on the original cost of the property. To put it another way, it means that on $15,400,000,000 worth of property we are going to sustain a net loss of about $13,000,000,000.

The request, to my mind, is an enormous one. It embodies among other things, some 17 regional offices and some 1,706 sub-regional offices. It includes $16,000,000 for advertising purposes. It includes payments running all the way from 12½ percent to 40 percent as commissions to approved manufacturers or dealers. I think the amount requested is entirely out of line with the sum it is hoped to collect.

Just to give you a few examples, you will find in the hearings at page 580 a table showing the war plants that have been disposed of. You will find a plant costing $9,573,000 disposed of for $1,500,000; another costing $8,086,000 disposed of for $2,500,000; another costing $200,585,000 disposed of for $47,500,000; and another costing $32,246,000 disposed of for $13,000,000.

If we turn to the shipyards you will find a similar situation. I have here a table from the Maritime Commission that was given to me a few minutes ago, referring to shipyards. It is not wholly completed as yet. Nevertheless it shows the California Shipbuilding Corp., costing the Government $25,266,000, apparently disposed of at an added cost to the Government of $2,500,000. It shows the St. Johns River Shipbuilding Co. at Jacksonville, costing $17,603,000 disposed of to the Tampa Shipbuilding Co. for $1,928,000. It shows the McEvoy Steamboat Co. at Savannah, Ga., costing $1,333,000, disposed of apparently for the large sum of $10.

Mr. PITTENGER. How much? $10?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Apparently for the sum of $10.

If we look at page 575 of the hearings you will see what the Interior Department has been doing in the territories and insular possessions. You will find property costing $11,000,000 disposed of for $1,000,000; property costing $20,000,000 disposed of for $2,000,000; property costing $162,000,000 disposed of for $17,000,000; and property costing $173,000,000 disposed of for $18,000,000.

A similar situation is found in the General Land Office, the testimony in respect to which appears on page 575 of the hearings. Property costing $103,000,000 was disposed of for $1,000,000. Other property costing $111,000,000 was disposed of for $22,000,000.

Under the Federal Works Administration, on the same page of the hearings, you will find property costing $200,000,000 disposed of for $8,000,000, and other property costing $237,000,000 disposed of for $8,000,000.

Mr. PITTENGER. What agency was that?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. The Federal Works Administration.

Mr. PITTENGER. What was the nature of the property?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. I do not have the details here, but the gentleman will find them on page 575 of the hearings.

Mr. PITTENGER. If the gentleman will yield, I would like to say we ought to take that mattter up on December 25. That is Christmas Day and unless they want to advance the date of Christmas, why the gentleman's figures are very illuminating and more properly apply to the Christmas spirit.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. I yield briefly.

Mr. WHITE. The gentleman mentioned the General Land Office incurring such losses in the disposition of property. As a matter of fact, the General Land Office has a policy here where a veteran or citizen of the United States cannot get anything if they want to acquire any of the public domain land and they are holding onto everything while foreigners can step in and get anything they want at half price.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. If the gentleman will study the tables in the RECORD, I think he will be impressed by how little we have been receiving for the property that has been disposed of.

General Gregory testified "that there are 20 objectives in the act and only one of the objectives, the twentieth, is getting the most money."

Mr. DWORSHAK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. I yield.

Mr. DWORSHAK. The gentleman refers to the disposal of various pieces of surplus property. Was this disposal made to governmental subdivisions or private purchasers?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. The items are pretty well set out, I think, in the hearings.

I repeat, Mr. Chairman, I think the WAA is asking for an enormous amount of money and holding out hope of very little return for the money that is spent.

It comes down to putting up anywhere from 20 cents to 25 cents for every dollar we get back from this surplus property. That figure, to my mind, just does not make sense.

If we were to provide as much as 15 cents on the basis of every dollar they hope to recover, the property being disposed of through normal channels, we will say, with those disposing of the property doing their own advertising on a fair commission basis we could cut this appropriation, according to my figures, approximately $108,000,000.

Mr. VURSELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. I yield.

Mr. VURSELL. As I understand from the gentleman's remarks, we are selling this property at about 25 cents on the dollar?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. They hope to realize 18 cents on the dollar for the fiscal year 1947.

Mr. VURSELL. All right, I stand corrected. We are selling the property at 18 cents on the dollar at a time when there is a tremendous market for material of all kinds. Now we are spending 25 percent of that 18 cents for administrative costs, advertising, and so forth. Is that approximately correct?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. That is correct according to the request which the WAA made. The committee has on paper reduced that request by $110,000,000, but that reduction is a paper reduction more than an actual reduction because what the committee said is, "You go out and dispose of the property and then come back to us later for reimbursement on the basis of actual expenditure." But if you take the $545,000,000 that the agency requested, your statement is approximately correct.

Mr. Chairman, I think the Slaughter committee will be interested in the table appearing on page 588 of the hearings dealing with cases of fraud and abuse in connection with the work of this agency. The cases have been rising steadily from 213 in February to 739 in May and they are said to include bribery, fraud against the Government, conspiracy, theft of Government property, and so on.

I think the same committee will also be interested, if they have not already seen in it, in the comment under date of June 19, 1946, by the Comptroller General of the United States condemning the situation with respect to surplus property at the time the work was taken over by the present agency.

Under leave to extend my remarks, I insert at this point in the RECORD extracts from the Comptroller General's report referred to:

At March 25, 1946, when War Assets Administration assumed the surplus property disposal responsibility, and when RFC and War Assets Corporation were relieved of it, the following conditions existed:

1. No program for the internal audit of surplus property disposal transactions had been developed and little, if any, progress had been made toward this end.

2. No system of inventory record-keeping had been successfully installed, and for all practical purposes there were no reliable records reporting the description and quantity of commodities and property available for disposal.

3. No determination had been made of either the quantity or the total cost amount of surplus property declarations received by WAC but not yet recorded in its accounts. In Chicago these papers were said to have existed on March 25, 1946, in a volume approximately equal in cubic content to that of two ordinary-sized office desks.

4. Substantial quantities of surplus goods had been recorded in the inventory as available for sale without any determination having been made of the accuracy of quantities or descriptions reported in the declarations. This condition has been said to be responsible in part for the adverse criticism publicly directed at the disposal program.

5. Substantial numbers of sales had not yet been adequately identified with the entries recording availability of the commodities concerned. The detailed inventory records in these cases continued to report the items as available for disposal. Consequently, the sales organization was confronted with the hazard of selling the same item over again even though delivery could not be effected.

6. War Assets Corporation had made sales of some surplus property, and it had in its warehouses some surplus property with respect to which declarations had not yet been received.

In addition, at March 25, 1946, no important attempt was made to determine the financial status of War Assets Corporation or the results accomplished through its operations. No important progress toward the making of such an accounting has been made or could have been made to this date. The fact of the matter is that RFC has given up (or has been required to give up) the means of making such an accounting, all of its records relative to the disposal activity having been transferred out of its possession.

It is our opinion, in the case of the surplus property disposal activity, that no satisfactory accounting could be made without practically the complete reconstruction of the accounting records. It is our further opinion that such a reconstruction could not be made with any assurance of accuracy, because of the omission on the part of the company to make important determinations at the dates on which the responsibilities changed hands.

OFFICE OF PRICE ADMINISTRATION

The hearings disclose that during the past five fiscal years the cost of price control to the American people has been $6,168,000,000, $626,000,000 of this being appropriations and the balance being price-control subsidy payments.

The Office of Price Administration reports that its rationing function is to be reduced largely to the rationing of sugar. It reports it will be out of the capital goods field in 3 months; that it hopes to get out of other commodities rapidly and be practically out of the picture by June 30, 1947, if not compelled to retire before then.

Nevertheless, it has requested $142,200,000 as compared with $150,171,000 in the present year. It actually shows a substantial increase in its requests, with reference to pricing, a $3,000,000 increase; with reference to rent, a $5,000,000 increase; with reference to enforcement, a $14,000,000 increase; with reference to travel, a $1,000,000 increase; and in other respects.

As the chairman has pointed out, in the absence of knowledge of what legislation there will be in this field, your committee has slashed the request 25 percent and has asked the Budget to freeze whatever may be possible beyond that point within 30 days after the applicable legislation is adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WIGGLESWORTH] has expired.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself ten additional minutes.

I think the committee will be interested in the table on page 80 of the hearings, showing upwards of 100 commodities where price increases have been granted, but granted only after formal intercession by CPA, in many cases the price increases being much less than recommended.

You will also find a complete list of price increases in the last 90 days at page 811 of the hearings.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] has referred to the abuse of the informational work under OPA. I think that has been very apparent. I think OPA has stepped way over the line of proper information, and into the field which can only be characterized as unwarranted propaganda.

The committee has been fully justified in reducing the request for informational purposes from $2,379,000 to $1,750,000.

Some of the propaganda appears to be harmful to OPA itself. A senior consumer-relations officer drawing $5,180 a year under instructions to furnish national officers of various groups, materials which will effectively promote understanding of OPA programs is quoted in the New York Journal-American of May 16, 1946, as making the following statements:

It is going to be necessary to scare the pants off the American people to convince them of the need of permanent price control.

Of course, OPA, set up as a wartime emergency measure, has no legal status now, but if OPA can be propagandized into 2 more years of life, OPA can be sold to the American people as a permanent thing under a constitutional amendment.

We are all familiar with the law on the statute books which, in effect, says you cannot use appropriated funds, directly or indirectly, by advertising or otherwise, to influence Congress on any pending legislation or appropriation.

I want to read you a letter, that came to me from a recipient in Massachusetts, put out by one of the OPA local boards under date of April 22, 1946. It reads as follows:

GENTLEMEN: Countless women's organizations, men's organizations, church groups, and race and nationality groups, have emphatically gone on record as being in favor of the retention of the Price Control Act without change.

In direct defiance of this mandate, the Congress has seen fit to create a new OPA which would be powerless to combat inflationary pressures.

This, of course, would have a devastating effect on the people of New England. Since we are already suffering the effects of being an isolated area during a period of scarcity of essential commodities, such an action can only lead to disaster. Even groups which had been highly critical of OPA actions in the past have expressed their dismay and consternation at the action of the Congress.

Movements have already been started in a frenzied attempt to correct this terrible error. The Massachusetts League of Women Voters began immediately to campaign against this action. Women's groups in Boston have opened up offices on Boston Common to obtain signatures to be forwarded to Congress asking that this ridiculous mistake be immediately corrected.

You are urged to write or telegraph to your Congressman immediately if you are interested in saving price control for New England.

PRICE CONTROL BOARD NUMBER —.

Mr. Chairman, that letter was written on official stationery. It was signed by a local OPA board. It was undoubtedly prepared on Government time. It was sent out under Government frank. In my opinion it was a clear violation of the criminal statute to which I have referred.

It seems to be impossible to correct abuse of this character with resulting waste of the people's money under the present OPA administration.

CIVILIAN PRODUCTION ADMINISTRATION

The Civilian Production Administration hoped to be practically out of business by this time. When last before your committee, it expected to be down to a personnel of 600 by this time. Nevertheless, CPA now requests an appropriation of $20,600,000, and a personnel of 4,600.

It is a very large request. It reflects an extremely high salary average, a large increase in its other obligations, and the maintenance of some 71 district construction offices in the field, in spite of other field offices maintained by such agencies as NHA, FHA, FPHA, and others.

For my part it is impossible to escape the conviction, after considering the six specific functions which CPA enumerates in the hearings, that more money is requested than is necessary for fiscal year 1947.

For my part it is also difficult to escape the conviction that there is great duplication in functions reflected as between such agencies as the CPA, OPA, USES, Housing Expediter, OES, and OWMR.

The reason given for the continuance of CPA at this time is the slow reconversion resulting in large part from the disputes in the field of labor and management. The agency says that if production really gets under way it may be possible to wind up its work in 6 months.

I do not want to do anything that will handicap reconversion, but it is my belief that this agency could function with considerably less money.

OFFICES OF WAR MOBILIZATION AND RECONVERSION

Mr. Chairman, I do not want to take too much time. I may mention, however, in passing that OWMR came before your committee with a request for $900,000.

This agency, as you know, is largely an umpire among various other agencies, acting for the President in coordinating over-all policies.

Here again it is very difficult to escape the conviction that there is great duplication of functions; that we have two, three, or four agencies doing what one efficient set-up ought to be able to do. If it is desirable to have an umpire, as

I assume it may very well be, I personally cannot see the necessity for a set-up of 134 persons on top of the staffs of all the other agencies.

The committee has reduced the request from $900,000 to $725,000.

OFFICE OF ECONOMIC STABILIZATION

The OES comes along on top of OWMR.

This is an agency the value of which I personally never have been able to understand. I recommended its abolition and transfer to OWMR, as the Members may recall, last summer; and this, in fact, was done toward the end of the summer, September 30, to be exact. But it was set up again on February 21 of this year, and it now defines its functions as those of formulating policy in regard to control of civilian purchasing power, price, rents, wages, salaries, profits, rationing, subsidies, and related matters.

If anybody in there can draw a proper dividing line between its functions and the functions of the other agencies to which I have already referred, he can do a better job than I can.

One of its principal functions, judging by its request for publicity activities, would seem to be the distribution of publicity or propaganda.

In fact, the justifications of the agency contain the following specific statement:

Increasing demands upon the Director for speeches, radio talks, and magazine articles, explaining the stabilization program, make it necessary that staff personnel be available to provide this material.

A list of specific decisions and actions during this fiscal year which was requested from this agency with a view to throwing light on just what the agency has been doing was not furnished in time for the hearings or for this debate.

The request for $266,000 that was made was cut down by the committee to $200,000. Nevertheless, this agency will receive an actual increase of 12½ percent over the present fiscal year.

Mr. Chairman, there are other agencies I could speak of, but I just want to mention one more matter, then I will conclude.

RESCISSIONS

The bill carries with it a rescission of something over $3,239,000,000 and brings the total for rescissions in terms of both appropriations and contract authorizations up to over $64,342,000,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself five additional minutes.

MARITIME COMMISSION AND WSA

Mr. Chairman, included in the rescissions, which cover a wide field, as the Members will observe, are substantial reductions in appropriations and contract authorizations for the Maritime Commission and the War Shipping Administration.

I hold in my hand a cartoon appearing in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of June 9, 1946. It pictures a giant pirate standing about 7½ inches high, with "Eight Billion Dollar Shipping Scandal" written across his chest, and a diminutive individual entitled "Congress," about 1¼ inches high, looking at the pirate and saying, "Well?"

In the editorial accompanying the cartoon is the statement:

Either there will be an investigation of the Shipping Administration now, as Senator AIKEN and Representative WIGGLESWORTH demand, or the merchant marine may flounder in misspent public funds.

As the Members will recall, I introduced under date of January 23, 1946, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a copy of the Comptroller General's audit for these two agencies up to and including the fiscal year 1943 showing among other things the expenditure of over $8,000,000,000 not properly accounted for.

Almost 5 months later, on June 4, 1946, no action having been taken, as far as I could learn, by the President, by the Attorney General, or by the standing committees of the Congress, I introduced a resolution calling for the appointment of a select committee to conduct a thorough investigation of the financial operations of these two agencies.

Two days later, on June 6, 1946, to my amazement a resolution was offered and adopted in the House, without notice and while I personally was busy with committee matters, which provided—

That the further expenses of conducting the study, inquiry, and investigation authorized by House Resolution 281 of the Seventy-seventh Congress, continued by House Resolution 52 of the Seventy-eighth Congress, and continued by House Resolution 38 of the Seventy-ninth Congress, incurred by the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, not to exceed $40,000 in addition to funds heretofore made available, including expenditures for the employment of clerical, stenographic, and other assistants, shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House on vouchers authorized by the committee, signed by the chairman, and approved by the Committee on Accounts.

What were the resolutions referred to Mr. Chairman, and how much money has been made available?

Under leave to extend my remarks I insert at this point in the RECORD the text of all three resolutions:

House Resolution 281

Resolved, That the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, acting as a whole or by subcommittee or subcommittees appointed by the chairman of said committee, is authorized and directed (a) to conduct thorough studies and investigation of the progress of the national defense program, insofar as it relates to matters coming within the jurisdiction of said committee, or administered by the United States Maritime Commission, or any other agency under the jurisdiction of said committee, with a view to determining whether such program is being carried forward efficiently, expeditiously, and economically; (b) to make such inquiry as said Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries may consider important or pertinent to the merchant marine or fisheries of the United States or any of the Territories thereof, or to any matter coming within the jurisdiction of said committee.

For the purposes of this resolution, the said committee or any subcommittee thereof is hereby authorized to sit and act during the present Congress at such times and places within the United States, whether the House is in session, has recessed, or has adjourned; to hold such hearings; to require the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books or papers or documents or vouchers, by subpena or otherwise; and to take such testimony and records as it deems necessary. Subpenas may be issued over the signature of the chairman of the committee or subcommittee, or by any person designated by him, and shall be served by such person or persons as the chairman of the committee or subcommittee may designate. The chairman of the committee or subcommittee, or any member thereof, may administer oaths to witnesses.

That the said committee shall report to the House of Representatives during the present Congress the results of their studies, inquiries, and investigations with such recommendations for legislation or otherwise as the committee deems desirable.

House Joint Resolution 52

Resolved, That effective from January 3, 1943, the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, acting as a whole or by subcommittee or subcommittees appointed by the chairman of said committee, is authorized and directed to continue the study, inquiry, and investigation begun under the authority of House Resolution 281 of the Seventy-seventh Congress, and for such purpose shall have the same powers and duties as those conferred upon it by House Resolution 281 of the Seventy-seventh Congress. The committee shall report to the House during the present Congress the results of its studies, inquiries, and investigations with such recommendations of legislation or otherwise as the committee deems desirable.

House Resolution 38

Resolved, That effective from January 3, 1945, the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, acting as a whole or by subcommittee or subcommittees appointed by the chairman of said committee, is authorized and directed to continue the study, inquiry, and investigation begun under the authority of House Resolution 281 of the Seventy-seventh Congress, and for such purpose shall have the same powers and duties as those conferred upon it by House Resolution 281 of the Seventy-seventh Congress. The committee shall report to the House during the present Congress the results of its studies, inquiries, and investigations with such recommendations for legislation or otherwise as the committee deems desirable.

The Members will note that the first resolution adopted back in the summer of 1941 provided that the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries was directed to conduct an investigation into the national defense program as administered by the Maritime Commission and any other agency under the jurisdiction of that committee, with a view to determining, among other things, whether such program was being carried out economically, and to make such inquiry as the committee might consider important or pertinent to the merchant marine or to any other matter coming within the jurisdiction of the committee.

The Members will also note that all three resolutions—that for 1941, that for 1943, and that for 1945, provided that the committee should report to the House of Representatives during the present Congress, that is, the Seventy-seventh, Seventy-eighth, and Seventy-ninth Congresses, the results of their studies, inquiries, and investigations, with such recommendations for legislation as the committee should deem desirable.

Mr. Chairman, 5 years have elapsed since the adoption of the first resolution.

The Committee on Accounts advises me that no less than $139,000 has been authorized in this connection which, if added to the $40,000 authorized a few days ago, brings the total up to $179,000.

As far as I know, there has been no general report to the House of the results of the investigation by the committee at any time. As far as I know, there have been no recommendations for legislation submitted to the Congress. As far as I know, aside from a few reports on special topics, the House has little or nothing to show for the $139,000 that has been authorized.

A thoroughgoing investigation, Mr. Chairman, in my opinion, is imperative. It should include operations under the so-called ship sales or ship gift bill. This is too big a job for any standing committee busy with other matters. It is the people's money that is involved. The people are entitled to the facts. I hope that it will not be long before a select committee is created, composed of able and independent-minded Members of this House, directed to make a complete investigation, letting the "ships" fall where they may.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FLOOD].

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, I propose to address myself to a few observations with reference to the UNRRA section of the appropriations. I want to begin by saying that there is no Member in this House who is more wholeheartedly in support of UNRRA than am I. Before I came to the Committee on Appropriations I had the honor of serving upon the great Committee on Foreign Affairs of this House. In that committee and on the floor, on every occasion, I have done everything humanly possible in debate and in discussion on and off the floor to win support for the magnificent program of UNRRA, and I am still dedicated entirely to the purpose and to the object of UNRRA. I extend to this House again my heartiest compliments for the manner in which, speaking for the people of America, this House and this Congress has supported UNRRA time and time again and will, as this committee is doing, today again.

However, I want to direct the attention of the powers that be in UNRRA to a situation existing especially and for the purpose of my remarks at this time, entirely in the Industrial Rehabilitation Division of UNRRA, and particularly here in the Washington office though the associates of the division abroad must not be forgotten. I also want to say at this time that I in no way refer or reflect upon the personnel director, Mr. Howell, who is an estimable gentleman, doing a good job, in my opinion. I think he is honest, loyal and sincere, and I compliment him at this time highly.

I want it understood that I am entirely aware of the fact that UNRRA is not an entirely American organization. It is an international organization. Before anybody here or before anybody in UNRRA later on takes the time or the effort to remind me of that fact, may I reiterate, for an emphatic purpose, that I know that. However, there is no reason why we should not give attention to the political philosophy of employees of UNRRA who are American citizens.

Communism is a political belief; it is a way of life. I am not sure just what it is, and I do not care, if only they keep it out of here. But in an international organization people from nations who embrace communism as a political belief have that right, and in UNRRA they are entitled to employment and to membership in UNRRA. Of that I am entirely aware. But I see no reason why those employees who are citizens of the United States should add to that number. Our employees should embrace the democratic way of life, in a political and scientific sense, of the country of which they are citizens.

I believe that in the Industrial Rehabilitation Division there are some American citizens who, if they are not Communists—I do not know whether they are or not—but there is reasonable cause to believe they are being influenced, maybe not in their personal convictions, but certainly they are being influenced, I feel, by the strong, shall I say, personalities of some of their associates in that division who are Communists but are citizens of other countries, Russia and Yugoslavia. They have a perfect right to be Communists. But I think my good friend, the Director General, Mr. LaGuardia, is not aware of these things. I am an admirer of Mr. LaGuardia. I have admired him and many of the great things he has done, and I do not think there is a greater public servant, citizen of the United States, than the gentleman from New York, who is a former Member of this body, a great American, soldier, patriot, and administrator. But I do not think he is aware of these things. I think he should look with great care and great pains into this Industrial Rehabilitation Division of UNRRA here and abroad. He is a student of Shakespeare, and I quote to him, "Something is rotten in the Kingdom of Denmark."

I want to add this. The opinion is curent that UNRRA is folding up. There is a time limit set on UNRRA by this Congress, as it should be. A lot of the employees there are looking for greener pastures. I am for that; more power to them. But may I take this opportunity to direct the attention of the American section of the United Nations organization to this. I know the United Nations organization is an international organization. I know it is not entirely an American organization. But I repeat that certainly the employees of the United Nations organization, or the United Nations, if you want to be technically exact, I suppose, need not be fellow travelers of those who are flirting with communism, and as to any employees of UNRRA who are on the way to New York to seek employment in the United Nations, I think the American members of the personnel section of the United Nations should be given to understand by our State Department that they should be very thoroughly examined, not for the purpose of casting a reflection upon Russia or anybody else within the United Nations, because I would oppose that vehemently, but I do say that we should screen here any Americans who seek employment in the United Nations organization and for whose employment the United States quota is credited. That is all I ask.

Mr. Chairman, I propose to send a letter to Mr. LaGuardia dealing with this problem so far as he is concerned at this time with reference to the Industrial Rehabilitation Division of UNRRA. I might point out the set-up of that division. The Director of that division is an American. His name is Gold. I am not aware of Mr. Gold's political philosophy, but I feel he is dominated by the other members who are under him, a Russian and a Yugoslav. This is a very important division. This is the division of UNRRA that sends heavy industrial equipment to the nations entitled to UNRRA relief. I oppose, and I want it looked into further by somebody, this purchasing of entire plants—cement plants, paper-wallboard plants, sugar plants, machine-tool plants—lots of machine-tool plants—asphalt plants, the entire lay-out being purchased and shipped to Byelorussia, the Ukraine, and Yugoslavia. I see no reason for that. The purpose of UNRRA is not to reestablish or to establish, as in Albania or Yugoslavia, which are not industrial nations, industrial set-ups for the future. We are to try to rehabilitate those countries and not set them up in industrial business.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 additional minutes to the gentleman.

Mr. FLOOD. The Industrial Rehabilitation Division of UNRRA, then, is as follows: Norman Leon Gold is the Director. He is an American. Ernest Weissman, the Deputy Director, is a Yugoslav. The Program and Control Branch is headed by Ernest Weissman. The Industries and Materials Branch is headed by Victor Rodnov, a Russian. The Inland Transport and Tele-Communications Branch is headed by an American, Grey Leslie. But the influence exerted there because of the work to be done and the source ultimately of the goods to be acquired is being exerted by Weissman, the Yugoslav, and Rodnov, the Russian, to the exclusion of the Americans, by or with the consent of Gold, I do not know, but at least they are being bypassed.

Now, my friends, I would like to say to the Director General that I am concerned over the accumulation of reports in the press and from other sources to the effect that the UNRRA industrial equipment and facilities are being misused. It is understood they are being used as a means of furthering political movements in foreign countries which are contrary to the aims of relief and rehabilitation operations. I am aware of the newspaper controversies. I am aware of the report that was issued by UNRRA saying that these things are not so in Yugoslavia. By the way, I wonder about Tito as a name. I think the original Broscz Tito is no longer there. Tito stands for Third International Terrorist Organization—that is Tito. That is a Russian-dominated state as most states in the Balkan group are. I know of the apologia issued by UNRRA with reference to the Yugoslav charges that Tito is using UNRRA trucks and equipment in his army and that that has been disposed of. Now I do not think so. I think that the report explaining the position of UNRRA in Yugoslavia was prepared by a gentleman by the name of Tomasovitch, a Russian of the country's program division who has charge of the Yugoslav debt.

I am not sure whether Tomasovitch is a Russian or Yugoslav, but for my purposes what difference does it make? So these are things in which I ask the directors of the authorities of UNRRA to reexamine—I am simply asking for reexamination of personnel, administration, and function, as well as the budgetary set-up, of the Industrial Rehabilitation Division here and abroad, and out of an abundance of caution let me reaffirm my love for UNRRA.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLOOD. I yield.

Mr. PITTENGER. Did I understand the gentleman to say that Tito was using UNRRA funds for the purpose of carrying on his army rather than for relief purposes?

Mr. FLOOD. I think so. UNRRA has denied that, and they have issued a well-prepared statement to that effect, but I think the statement was prepared by Tomasovitch of the country's program bureau, who is chief of the Yugoslav desk.

Mr. PITTENGER. Does not the gentleman think that is a horrible charge to be made when the American people, through the American Congress, are appropriating the funds to help these famine-stricken people, to have it misused in that way?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman five additional minutes.

Mr. FLOOD. The gentleman can select his own adjectives. I just want to see if the charge has merit; if the statements that I make, upon reexamination and investigation, will indicate that condition. I am not satisfied with the statement that has been made and I am raising these additional things, asking just to have that bureau only looked into. If the gentleman wishes to go further, of course he can, but I am concerned about the Industrial Rehabilitation Division, which I think is sending to Yugoslavia and to the Ukraine heavy industrial equipment which I do not think they need and which should not be sent there. I think it should be sent to China if it has to be sent some place.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLOOD. I yield.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. Since the gentleman is a student of this situation, I would like to know whether there is any truth to the rumor, the statement in the press that Yugoslavia and Tito have been using UNNRA sugar and selling it for a dollar a pound or a dollar and a quarter a pound.

Mr. FLOOD. Of course, I do not know exactly about that case but I am sure the gentleman recalls that during the general debate on UNRRA, we who are friends of UNRRA, including myself, admitted freely and frankly that there were flagrant instances of black marketing of UNRRA products, not alone sugar, in the early days. I think a great deal of that has been eliminated. At least I feel that now. But in the early days I would agree that it was so. We had indisputable evidence that it was so. As to Tito and sugar at a dollar a pound, I do not know. I had not heard that.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. I thank the gentleman. I did not take the position that the gentleman had heard of it. I just wondered if it was true.

Mr. FLOOD. I did not even hear the statement made. Of course, I hasten to add that I always felt, and still do, that 90 percent of the criticism directed against UNRRA by the enemies of UNRRA were false, sheer rumor, and that we destroyed point after point in the debate.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin. My point is that I do not like to vote the public's money for one purpose and have it used for a different purpose. It is for that reason I asked the gentleman the question.

Mr. FLOOD. I agree with that. I want the gentleman to know I am supporting this bill as is. As a matter of fact, it would not take much to convince me that they should have more. I would vote for a further extension of UNRRA under certain circumstances. I am a great believer in it. I just want this one division of this one bureau looked into.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLOOD. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BENDER. Is it not a fact that at least 75 percent of the money that is being used by UNRRA is American money and that most of the people who are getting this money are not aware of the fact that the United States is helping them?

Mr. FLOOD. I say to the gentleman from Ohio that I do not agree that most of the people who are getting the money do not know where it comes from. I think that today—this is my opinion and I feel I know something about it—I am convinced that the vast, vast majority, all you could expect under the circumstances, of the people in the nations who are recipients of UNRRA aid know that good Uncle Sam is giving it to them; and they are grateful and thankful. I am sure of that.

Mr. BENDER. Does the gentleman think that the people of Russia who obtain benefit under UNRRA know that the United States is giving it?

Mr. FLOOD. There is a practical situation there that the gentleman must understand in relation to certain people who are getting the benefit of UNRRA. It is due to a technical situation. The gentleman is aware that Byelorussia and the Ukraine are separate independent states. There is some dispute over the matter of censorship. There has been no censorship of the press in the Byelorussia-Ukraine area with reference to UNRRA. The censorship is with respect to other news and the press representatives there are treated by the censors just the same as the Russian writers are; but so far as I know there is no difficulty in the newspapers writing about UNRRA and American press reports are coming out uncensored.

Mr. BENDER. Does not Russia control the facts that are available to the people of the country?

Mr. FLOOD. I believe the facts are available and are honestly being given to the public.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from Pennsylvania one additional minute.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, I do feel that the administrative officials—and I feel that they will once it is brought to the attention of UNRRA—will take a look at this industrial rehabilitation section applying to these people there. Understand, I hope I am wrong; I would be delighted to find out that any suspicion that exists in my brain with reference to this personnel or its efficiency or the way it is operating is entirely wrong. Nobody would be better pleased than I; but out of an abundance of caution if for no other reason I appeal to them as being the best friend, or one of the best friends of UNRRA in the House, that some attention be given to that problem at once.

UNRRA

The industrial rehabilitation of those countries within the orbit of UNRRA's operation has deteriorated. It has assisted materially in supporting the continued war effort of the countries under the Russian sphere of influence, as evidenced by articles recently published in many newspapers. A few outstanding examples are as follows:

New York Times, May 9, title "Yugoslavia Parades Armed Might in Celebrating Victory Over the Axis." This stresses that not only the gasoline which was sent by UNRRA for use in distribution of relief supplies is being used for military purposes, but also the trucks.

Washington Post, Vienna, April 26, title "Yugoslav Guards Stop Removal of American Goods at Gunpoint." This is another shining example of their appreciation for assistance rendered them in time of need.

Washington Post, Trieste, May 6, title "Tito Diverts UNRRA Goods." The trucks labeled "from Tito" transport UNRRA food into the Allied military areas.

New York Times, Spalato, Dalmatia, May 6, title "The Yugoslavs as Indicated Are as the Russians Completely in the Dark as to the Source of Relief Supplies Provided Them. There Is No Likelihood That Any Yugoslav Is Going to Forget His Country's Debt of Gratitude to the Russians." In such an instance as this there must be some reason why the same feeling for the hand that is helping this country cannot be returned to the country that has helped them even greater than the Russians. There has been much change with reference to this—America's position has improved.

That is just a few of the numerous articles that happen along this direction which do not confine themselves to the Yugoslav Government, but also Poland and Czechoslovakia.

The reason for this is that the headquarters set up for the screening, procurement, and allocation of industrial supplies and equipment is such that it will permit these irregularities to occur. As in most countries today there is no basis for requirements as to the extent of actual damage and need. This is due to the fact that UNRRA representatives are not permitted to travel freely to observe. The set-up of the Industrial Rehabilitation Division is as follows:

Gold, Chief of Division, Canadian.

American: Machinery and Equipment Branch, Rodnov, Chief, Russian; Program Control Branch, Weissman, Chief, Yugoslav; Transportation Branch, Leslie, Chief, United States.

This set-up permits the screening, allocations of requirements to be made by the Program Control Branch.

A check of the key employees in this branch reveals that a majority of them are Communists or so inclined. All machinery and equipment procurement is under the direction of Mr. Victor Rodnov, Russian. Distribution of industrial supplies and equipment are distributed to the liking of the two branch chiefs listed above and are under their complete control. This also meets the approval and support of N. L. Gold, Director of the Division, and is influenced greatly by the Yugoslav and Russian lobby here.

The Transportation Branch is headed up by an American, but is actually under the control of the Program Control Section for the obtaining of approved requirements and the procurement authorization budget and the allocation of materials. The situation of Mr. Grey Leslie, who heads up this branch, is such that it results in a continuous battle with support going to the Reds, and it is time that someone should put a stop to this.

The present incumbent is influenced by an intercircle of aliens who are motivated by their own national self-interest and furtherance of their political beliefs which is contrary to most of ours. Suggestions to correct such operations are scorned and labeled nationalistic or partial. In fact, most important meetings where such matters are discussed and determined, officers and personnel who are American are deliberately excluded. Further, the Director of the Division is without any industrial or manufacturing experience and has permeated his position by surrounding himself with others whose knowledge and experience in industry and economics are as limited as his own. He has consistently ignored the constructive and qualified advice of trained technicians and has made decisions in ordering purchases which have resulted in sheer waste of relief money, as example:

1. Airplanes, Lockheed: Purchased from United States last March or April for Yugoslavia, $25,000 each, now completely reconditioned. Total cost, $225,000. Check with United States Treasury, Procurement Division. Purchased three C–47 for Yugoslavia from New Delhi, India. Question as to cost and use in Yugoslavia check Foreign Liquidation Commission.

2. Purchase railroad cars.

3. Purchase of depots containing foreign surplus: Complete records available Foreign Liquidation Commission.

These are not incidents but typical examples which will give you some idea as to the condition under which a program of approximately $700,000,000 of industrial supplies are being purchased of which $500,000,000 have been purchased or committed to date with the largest portions going to countries under Russian domination.

This same concentrated effort to procure and ship industrial supplies and equipment to China is very definitely lacking simply because we have no lobbyists in the organization who are concerned particularly with the urgent needs of the Chinese. This is believed to be against the resolutions of UNRRA, having nationals from reciprocant countries in such positions.

The article, This Changing World, of the 16th of May, by Constantine Brown, in the Washington Evening Star, well illustrates what is meant and will give a basis for starting some detail follow-up work:

The expenditures for Yugoslavia during 1945 and 1946 amount to $450,000,000, a sum representing nearly the entire income of that country in 1938, the last normal peacetime year. Yugoslavia's import trade in the same year represented only one-sixth the amount which UNRRA is shipping over a 2-year period. * * * The Yugoslav budget provides no less than 54 percent of the revenue for national defense. * * * In order to replenish the empty treasury much of the "salable" UNRRA supplies are being sold and sums realized are accredited to the account of the Government. UNRRA's American and British officials are powerless.

It is suggested that changes be made as follows:

First. Reorganization and replacing officials and other personnel of the Industrial Rehabilitation Division with people more capable of performing this kind of work more efficiently and satisfactorily.

Second. All industrial supplies now being procured be diverted to China.

Third. Suggest that the Director General install an organization to streamline the operations throughout UNRRA.

Fourth. Steps should be taken immediately to prevent undesirables being appointed to UN. Steps have been initiated for some appointments.

Fifth. Eliminate the shipping backlog which exists.

Sixth. Suggest that the director and the deputy directors of the Industrial Rehabilitation Division be investigated as to qualifications and other background.

Seventh. Also summon persons recently returned from Yugoslavia.

It should not be overlooked that the United States has the least to say as to the workings and control of this organization. This is partially due to the fact that United States representatives are placed in such a position that they may be overruled.

A check as to the control should be made by an inspection of the organization chart.

Another point for investigation is the basis for procurement which has been initiated of complete glass plants for Czechoslovakia and Poland. As you know, these countries are in a position, as Yugoslavia, to provide the minimum industrial rehabilitation if the industries are utilized properly. As a matter of fact, they are in a position to export. It is also understood that complete manufacturing plants are also being procured for Russia.

In view of this activity, it is suggested that all procurement for heavy industrial machinery be investigated thoroughly and specific justification for use be checked.

The food situation, as evidenced by the New York Times, May 22, is an operation to which the Industrial Division is accustomed. That is, having industrial policy of, and operation for, all countries dictated by the Russians and Yugoslavia. It is time someone woke up to this "smooth" operation and asked for a complete investigation of the Industrial Rehabilitation Division.

Here is a table of the procurement up to May 31, 1946, of industrial and agricultural equipment in the areas of Byelorussia, Ukraine, and Yugoslavia:

Domestic procurement of United States owned surpluses through May 31, 1946

Division	Byelorussia	Ukraine	Yugoslavia	Total
Industrial	$1,245,107	$1,204,494	$1,747,423	$4,197,024
Agricultural	36,809	43,435	978,718	1,058,962
Total	1,281,916	1,247,929	2,726,141	5,255,986

Mr. Chairman, I now insert a copy of a letter I am sending to Mr. LaGuardia with reference to information I desire on the Industrial Division operations:

Hon. F. H. LAGUARDIA,
Director General, United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Being previously connected with the Foreign Affairs Committee, and in my present capacity with the Appropriations Committee of the United States Congress, I am greatly concerned over the accumulation of reports in the press and from other sources, to the effect that UNRRA industrial equipment and supplies are being misused. It is understood these are being used as a means of furthering political movements, which are contrary to the aims of relief and rehabilitation operations, and consist of types and quantities which have no part in a relief program. This is far beyond what was intended in the approval of Relief and Rehabilitation Administration by the Congress.

It is requested that information be provided me for the following questions concerning the Industrial Division's operations:

1. List of staff, detail of qualifications, responsibilities and salaries, present responsibilities, and national affiliations.

2. Who finally approves industrial programs and what is the criteria in detail.

3. What checks are there to supervise proper use of equipment upon receipt at destination, and proper use as to application of relief and rehabilitation, exclusively.

4. Composition of staffs in various countries, their qualifications and salaries.

5. What is the personnel turn-over in the Division? From whom, and why, have resignations been submitted?

6. What statistics are being produced, and for what purpose are they used? How many persons are employed, and salaries involved?

7. Detailed break-down, giving brief description, quantity, and cost of all industrial equipment, and materials for each country of destination in the following categories, from United States contributions, as:

(1) Requested by recipient countries.
(2) Approved by UNRRA.
(3) Procured to date.
(4) Shipped.
(5) Balance to be procured.

8. Also same data for industrial equipment being supplied from the United Kingdom, Canada, and other sources.

Where complete manufacturing or fabricating plants and other large equipment and machinery such as construction, equipment, mobile and stationary machine shop; transportation and stores; land, water, and air have been or will be supplied, provide substantiating data in detail.

Mr. Chairman, I now wish to submit a series of newspaper articles having to do with this subject:

[From the Washington Post of April 21, 1946]

EXPORT PERMIT DEMANDED—YUGOSLAV GUARD STOPS REMOVAL OF AMERICAN GOODS AT GUNPOINT

VIENNA, April 20.—Authoritative informants said today an American officer had been stopped at gunpoint from removing American equipment from the Belgrade Airport on grounds Yugoslavia was demanding that export permits be obtained.

The United States Army Air Transport Command installed some facilities at the Belgrade Airport, much of it to help supply Marshal Tito's forces in the final days of the war.

Recently, these sources said, Maj. Joseph B. Gurley, of Oregon City, Oreg., the only ATC officer still left at the airport, tried to put some United States radio gear aboard an ATC plane for shipment out, but was halted by a Yugoslav guard who threatened to use his gun.

Although the ATC still is making daily flights to Belgrade, Yugoslav restrictions have made it impossible to replace seven ATC officers and enlisted men who were redeployed, they said.

Officials said the UNRRA has presented Yugoslavia with eight C-47 transport planes. Two have been delivered to Belgrade, but the ATC there has declined to turn them over, pending settlement of the present difficulties. The Yugoslavs also have 15 American-made Dakotas parked on the field, but only five are in service.

The Belgrade field was built up by both the ATC and RAF when practically the only supplies reaching Tito's Partisans were being flown from Italy by United States and British planes. The Yugoslavs also have begun charging a transit fee of $4 for passengers on American planes, officials here said.

TITO DIVERTS UNRRA GOODS, OFFICER SAYS

TRIESTE, May 6.—An administrative officer of UNRRA here said today he had submitted his resignation in protest to what he termed "mishandling" by Yugoslavs of UNRRA goods.

There have been frequent reports here that UNRRA goods earmarked for rehabilitation in Yugoslavia recrossed the Morgan line into the Allied military zone and were distributed among elements who support the claims of Marshal Tito's regime to Trieste and Venezia Giulia.

The officer, a former United States Fifteenth Air Force major, who asked that his name be withheld pending a complete report to Washington, is an inspector who frequently crossed the temporary Morgan line dividing Yugoslavia-controlled territory in Venezia Giulia from the Allied military area. He said that three times he saw a truck labeled "from Tito," bringing UNRRA food into the Allied military area, where roads are plastered with signs calling for Yugoslav annexation.

Berry K. White, UNRRA chief in Trieste, said tight civil police patrol control had kept such use of the supplies to a trickle.

White praised the head of the UNRRA mission in Yugoslavia, Michael Sergeichic, a Russian, and said no obstacles had been placed in the way of distribution of UNRRA supplies there.

An authoritative source said Allied military authorities have impounded 120 reels of Canadian newsprint labeled "UNRRA supplies for Yugoslavia," which were brought back to Trieste for use by three Trieste newspapers favorable to Tito.

YUGOSLAVS IN DARK ON FREE UNRRA AID—UNAWARE THAT FOOD BELGRADE SELLS IS UNITED STATES-BRITISH GIFT—NEEDS FOUND SLACKENING

(By Albion Ross)

SPALATO, DALMATIA, May 6.—Some 3,000,000 persons in the desolate devastated regions of western Yugoslavia behind this Dalmation coastal port owe their escape from starvation to the free contributions of the American and the British through the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, but they are ignorant of that fact. A group of correspondents and public-relations representatives of the UNRRA touring the region discovered that in general the populace seems to have no idea to whom their salvation this last winter is due.

Five hundred thousand tons of grain, 115,000 tons of quartermaster food, and thousands of tons of other foodstuffs have been poured into the western Yugoslav area as a whole. This is sold by the Government emergency board. The Government gives money or grants credit to those who cannot pay.

Conversations in the villages and towns proved that the people themselves do not know that the food is provided free by the nations overseas.

PRESIDENT CITES MEASURES

The President of the Government of Croatia, Dr. Vladimir Bakaritch, who also is an important figure in the Communist Party, was asked if measures had been taken to inform the people that the UNRRA supplies were a gift and that their own Government received the money from their sale. He assured the correspondents that such measures had been taken, but an investigation on the spot indicated that these measures had been completely ineffective—if they were taken.

Dr. Bakaritch in his address to the correspondents made reference to facts in the matter that had been published in the logical press of Croatia, but the head of the UNRRA for Croatia said that to his knowledge this was the first time they had been pointed out by Croatian authorities. On the other hand, Communists have written all over the walls throughout the area slogans thanking Premier Joseph Stalin and the Red Army for the deliverance of their country. In stores, schools, offices, houses and in every nook and corner, pictures of Premier Stalin and Marshal Tito are seen side by side. There is no likelihood that any Yugoslav is going to forget his country's debt of gratitude to the Russians.

The UNRRA public-relations officers intend to bring the matter to the attention of the Government again, their request that the Yugoslav public receive a little better picture as to the reason why the devastated regions came through the winter safely.

The period when heavy supplies of foodstuffs, clothing, and household essentials will be needed is seen as drawing to an end here. The most urgent needs now seem to be medical and hospital equipment and certain necessities for improving the transportation system.

The UNRRA will put into the country during the summer an increasing volume of medical and hospital equipment.

THIS CHANGING WORLD

(By Constantine Brown)

The expenditures of UNRRA for Yugoslavia during 1945 and 1946 amount to $450,000,000, a sum representing nearly the entire national income of that country in 1938, the last normal peacetime year. Yugoslavia's import trade in the same year represented only one-sixth the amount which UNRRA is shipping in over a 2-year period.

There would be no criticism of this lavish expenditure if the supplies were distributed fairly and would answer the purpose for which Congress has appropriated large sums for the relief of the suffering people, and the rehabilitation of the country's economic life.

But from all accounts, many of which exist in the files of the State Department and are cataloged as "confidential," the Yugoslavian people themselves are deriving little benefit from the Good Samaritan actions of the American people. The vast quantities of food and raw materials are being used by the Government, which exercises a complete though indirect control over them. Maj. Gen. M. A. Sergeichik, the former quartermaster general of the Red Army in Iran, is now director of UNRRA in Yugoslavia and as such supervises the sale and distribution of the supplies.

As an example of how it works, 54,000 long tons of sugar have been transported to Yugoslavia. The sugar is being sold on the so-called black market—which is authorized by the Government—at a price equivalent to $1.25 a pound. This figure has been fixed by the Ministry of Supplies, which controls prices in that country.

In the last few weeks six American and three British high-ranking UNRRA officials in Yugoslavia have resigned, despite the alluring pay and other advantages, as a protest against the manner in which supplies are being used.

When it was decided that Yugoslavia would receive assistance from UNRRA its former director, Herbert Lehman, nominated a Britisher as regional director. This nomination was vetoed by Marshal Tito. Mr. Lehman then proposed an American, C. B. Brock, who before the war had large interests in Yugoslavia. He also was rejected. Finally Mr. Lehman agreed to appoint General Sergeichik.

As soon as Marshal Tito gave his unrestricted approval to the appointment of the Red Army officer, a staff of about 550 British and American officials gathered at Bari, Italy, to cross the Adriatic and start their supervisory and control work. The Yugoslav Government decided that the number was too large and refused to grant the necessary visas. Eventually a compromise was reached, whereby the total was reduced to 150.

The Americans and the British soon discovered that their job was more difficult than they had anticipated. At first they had difficulty obtaining travel permits within the country. The Yugoslav authorities were courteous whenever an UNRRA official asked for "internal passports," but the OZNA (the secret police patterned after the Soviet NKVD) was always slow in granting them.

For instance, the British official in charge of the rehabilitation of the mining industry received requests for the tools and dynamite needed for the mines. He demanded that he be permitted to go and see for himself the quantity required, but he was never allowed to do so. Finally, he resigned in disgust and General Sergeichik immediately named a loyal Soviet citizen to the position.

The sale of UNRRA supplies by the recipient government is not against the provisions of the laws which govern that organization. But they were not supposed to serve as sources of revenue, which according to the reports received by the American Government has been the case in Yugoslavia.

The Yugoslav Government, which had an empty treasury after the collapse of the Nazis, is now trying to refill it in any way possible. Harsh methods have been taken, such as arbitrary taxation and change of the currency whereby all citizens have had to turn in their old money for the new and have received $98 regardless of their wealth in the past. The balance is deposited in state banks and the citizens are permitted to withdraw only the equivalent of $20 a month.

These devices are not sufficient because the Yugoslav budget provides no less than 54 percent of the revenue for national defense. In order to replenish the empty treasury much of the salable UNRRA supplies are being sold and the sums realized are credited to the account of the Government. Regional Director Sergeichik, who is regarded by all as an able administrator, is cooperating with the Tito government and allows such transactions.

UNRRA's American and British officials are powerless. Some who are sympathetic with the Communist doctrines and Tito's totalitarian regime are not opposed to departing from the spirit of the laws governing UNRRA. Others who take their jobs seriously have already resigned, refusing to be a party to irregularities which have begun to come out in the open.

YUGOSLAVS PARADE ARMED MIGHT IN CELEBRATING VICTORY OVER AXIS—STAGE LARGE DEMONSTRATIONS IN BELGRADE AND ZAGREB—SIGN PACT WITH CZECHS—UNRRA DISTURBED BY MILITARY EXPENDITURES

(By Albion Ross)

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, May 9.—The signature late this afternoon of a Czechoslovak-Yugoslav pact of friendship and alliance was the central point in a celebration today of the first anniversary of the victory over the Axis Powers. An elaborate reception has been given to the Czechoslovak delegation headed by Prime Minister Zdenek Fierlinger and Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk and great stress has been placed on the brotherhood of the two Slav peoples.

A display of Yugoslavia's new motorized military equipment in a 3-hour-long review this morning by Marshal Tito, the visiting Czechoslovak statesmen and officers representing the various Allied armies was calculated to emphasize the importance of Yugoslavia in the system of alliances that now bind Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Yugoslavia to the Soviet Union.

The most impressive portion of this morning's review of the Yugoslav Army was the large display of heavy types of Russian tanks and a considerable volume of motorized artillery. The equipment as a whole was a mixture of the armaments of many nations, with guns and other material captured from the Germans occupying an important place.

DISPLAY DISTURBS UNRRA

A similar demonstration of military power was held in the new Yugoslav State of Zagreb, where a youth congress has opened.

This bringing together of mechanized forces, constant drills, and trial runs of tanks, half tracks, and other mechanized equipment in the vicinity of both Belgrade and Zagreb has been a headache to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. A United States official said that the lines of mechanized equipment he observed in nearby districts literally stretched for miles.

The affair served to revive a difficult question for the UNRRA as to what petroleum supplies Yugoslavia really has and what use is really being made of the petroleum imported by the UNRRA. Relief officials here say that they would have preferred to have the Yugoslav Government refrain from using up so much gasoline and Diesel oil at this time for the movement of a large number of military vehicles.

The shortage of petroleum in February forced the UNRRA to shut down sharply on the operation of the truck fleet that provides citizens with food and other necessities and the situation barely has been reestablished so there is now some surplus to meet essential demands. Although the UNRRA now has been operating in this country for more than a year the petroleum control office of the UNRRA here said that it never had an adequate accounting on the distribution of gasoline.

The same office said that it never had received any full accounting on the petroleum products brought in from Rumania. These are matters on which the UNRRA, under contract, expects to receive full information so that it can distribute its total supplies according to the real needs of the various peoples receiving aid.

MILITARY EXPENDITURES HEAVY

The problem fits into the larger question of heavy expenditures on an army in a state that is heavily dependent on outside aid. The Government's budget report has shown that 50 percent of all the central government's budgeted expenditures and one-third of the total expenditures of the central government plus all federal states of Yugoslavia is being devoted to national defense.

Since the Government receives considerable income from the sale of UNRRA goods to the public the relief organization is concerned with the expenditures of this money, which ostensibly should go for relief and rehabilitation. So far Government reports on these sales have been coming in slowly, and UNRRA has received complaints on unusually high prices.

Some trouble has been encountered in the matter of the use of UNRRA trucks for the transport of guns and munitions, particularly in Croatia. Some resentment was felt in UNRRA offices over a recent incident in which an UNRRA employee was arrested for having taken the numbers of UNRRA trucks moving strictly military equipment in Zagreb.

Meanwhile, responsible foreign observers here say that many industries and businesses taken over by the Government often represent a heavy loss that must be met in some fashion. In part this loss is laid to some rather remarkable transition period conditions.

Attention was drawn to one example in which a peasant without business experience who had been a partisan became a commissar and was managing a considerable industrial establishment in the Zagreb area, and it was asserted that such conditions were anything but uncommon.

UNRRA EXPLOITED BY COMMUNISTS—AUSTRIAN PARTY CREDITS ITS YUGOSLAV PROTOTYPE FOR AGENCY'S RELIEF WORK

VIENNA, June 2.—The Communist Party is beginning to make concrete propagandist use of its advantage accruing from the circumstance that the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration's heavy relief and reconstruction program in this part of Europe has been concentrated by chance in countries with Communist governments or regimes friendly to the Communists.

The country in this region that has benefited the most from the UNRRA is Yugoslavia. The Austrian Communist Party's official organ, the Voice of the People, presented a lengthy article today telling the hungry Austrian worker about the food that the Yugoslav has and that he cannot get, and about the articles of clothing that can be bought in Yugoslavia and are unavailable here.

Virtually everything to which the article refers either has been delivered by the UNRRA or results directly from the UNRRA's program. However, the article does not say even once that the UNRRA's goods are entering Yugoslavia or that the UNRRA has anything to do with Yugoslavia. The credit for the better conditions in Belgrade is given to the Communist-controlled government there. The article concludes with the moral:

"There is so much that our people could learn from the Yugoslavs. For the moment we can say only: 'Yugoslavia, you have it better.'"

Although the western portion of Yugoslavia was saved from starvation by the UNRRA's delivery of more than 10,000 trucks and of the food supplies that they distributed, the Communist paper presented the situation in these terms: "Half the nation was near death from hunger. The people gritted their teeth and went to work collectively. They put together means of transport and machines out of old wrecks and junk. Thus production began slowly. Agriculture was helped by the delivery of industrial goods and tools. The peasants brought food on long and difficult roads with the most primitive means of transport."

Such strict attention to party advantage and not much else is not limited to the Communist press. The Vienna press carries so little news and the morning papers have become so completely political organs that the Upper Austrian News from Linz, in the American zone, is now being sold here with a special section of Vienna news. This is a good deal as if readers in New York had to seek their news in a special Manhattan edition of a Trenton paper. The Upper Austrian News now has approximately double the circulation of any other strictly Austrian newspaper and is surpassed only by the American forces' Vienna afternoon paper, the Vienna Courier. The Linz paper was founded by the United States Army as strictly a news organ and was later turned over to Austrian management, but it has continued its policy of presenting news.

LAGUARDIA'S ATTACK ANSWERED BY WRITER

In reply to charges attacking the accuracy of dispatches written by him for the New York Times from Yugoslavia, Albion Ross said in a message yesterday that he felt his stories were "much too hesitant and cautious and failed to give an adequate picture of the outrageous situation existing in Yugoslavia."

F. H. LaGuardia, Director General of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, had taken issue last Saturday with an editorial in which the Times cited its own dispatches and those of other papers showing that UNRRA's administration in Yugoslavia permitted relief supplies to be used for Marshal Tito's military machine. Mr. Ross asserted in his message that he believed Mr. LaGuardia's report had been based on material received from "a strongly left-wing UNRRA mission headed by a skilful former Red Army colonel."

The correspondent said that Tom Healy, a New York Post writer, also had obtained a "very different impression" from that of Peter Furst of Newsweek and Edward Clark of the United Press, both of whom had criticized his dispatches.

Mr. Ross quoted Nathaniel Farbman, a Life magazine photographer, as differing with Mr. Furst and Mr. Clark and as saying that "tires were taken off UNRRA trucks under repair and rolled next door into the gate of a military depot."

SOVIET OVERLORDS RULE PUPPET TITO'S YUGOSLAVIA—FOOD DONATED BY UNITED STATES USED TO AID SOVIET

(By Eric L. Pridonoff, former special economic attaché in the United States Embassy at Belgrade)

Marshal Tito is not the real dictator of Yugoslavia.

He is a puppet.

His own political commissars rate him no higher than sixth in the civil government of Yugoslavia.

Over that civil government is a supercrust of Soviet Russian domination that wields the power of life and death of judicial, legislative, and executive prerogatives rolled into one—and ruthlessly exercised.

The most powerful single individual in Yugoslavia today is Major General Kisilev, head of the Russian military mission to Yugoslavia, a shrewd politician and clever diplomat of the Soviet brand.

He alone, directly or through members of his staff, can—and does—give orders to Yugoslavia's civil government heads.

The voice may be that of Tito, but the hand at the helm of the Yugoslav state is the hand of Moscow, manipulated through the person of Major General Kisilev.

RANKOVITCH TOP MAN

In Yugoslavia's own official family, the real No. 1 man is Gen. Alexander Rankovitch, Minister of Interior, general secretary of the Yugoslav Communist Party.

Under his direct control is the dreaded OZNA, secret police organization, all-Communist in membership and as brutally powerful as Hitler's Gestapo or Soviet Russia's NKVD.

Controlled by the OZNA and, to some extent, officered by its members is the KNOJ, Yugoslav counterpart of Hitler's SS storm troopers. There are 14 divisions of the KNOJ corps, a total of 150,000 men.

Though Tito holds the title of Premier, Rankovitch is actually the keyman in the civil government.

Next in actual power behind the camouflaged facade of Yugoslavia's Government come four other Communist master minds who compose the tunes that Tito plays:

Moisha Piada, member of Parliament and Russian-trained Communist, who has authored many of the brutal "people's laws" of Yugoslavia.

Gen. Milovan Djilas, Minister Without Portfolio, a ruthless Montenegrin Communist.

Edvard Kardelj, another Russian-trained Communist, who serves jointly as First Vice Premier and president of the "Control Commission" of Yugoslavia.

Sretan Zujovic, Minister of Finance and veteran Communist.

Then comes Tito himself, Premier, Minister of National Defense, the bemedaled puppet of Moscow and his own Yugoslav Communist peers.

NO PERSONAL LIBERTY

There is no personal liberty in Yugoslavia today, although an agreement signed by Tito and Dr. Ivan Subashich, setting up a provisional government, was supposed to guarantee personal freedom—freedom of speech, freedom of the press, and freedom of assembly; freedom of religion and respect for private property.

Today those pledges are a hollow mockery in Yugoslavia.

Yet misled Americans are pouring over half a billion dollars in UNRRA supplies into Yugoslavia.

They should know that Tito has been using these supplies in whatever way the Communists dictate.

Americans should know that, while thousands were starving, Tito held up entrance of UNRRA supplies until two demands were met:

1. Appointment of Maj. Gen. M. A. Sergeichik, of the Soviet Russian Army, as UNRRA director in Yugoslavia. This general was former quartermaster of the Red Army in Iran.

2. Delivery of all supplies to Tito-controlled ports, to be handled from there exclusively by Yugoslav authorities, under Major General Sergeichik, as they saw fit.

Americans should know that after Sergeichik took over American and British UNRRA officials were unable to get permits to travel to areas for which vast quantities of machinery, foodstuffs, and other goods had been requisitioned.

Thus they were not permitted to make check-ups on the uses to which the UNRRA supplies were put.

Several technical experts, including a British mining expert, Mr. Jeffers, resigned from UNRRA because they would not blindly rubber-stamp approval of requests from Tito's Ministry of Supply.

Americans, who furnished 80 percent of UNRRA funds, should know that only requests for shipments first approved by the Russian major general, Sergeichik, went forward to London, Washington, or the other Allied Powers.

Tito used UNRRA goods for barter in Albania and other neighboring countries to further Yugoslavian-Communist political aims.

Yugoslav recipients of UNRRA goods—outside of a few large cities—never knew that American, rather than Tito, generously fed, clothed, and housed them and gave them machinery to rehabilitate their war-torn country.

REPORT IN RED JARGON

The first 1946 UNRRA report from Yugoslavia, submitted to UNRRA's former director, Herbert Lehman, was edited by a British woman, known to be pro-Communist, in language easily recognized as the jargon of Reds the world over.

Clothing, so generously donated in America and intended for free distribution to the needy in war-ridden countries, was sold at high prices to needy Yugoslavs by the Tito authorities.

There was a daily delegation at our American Embassy in Belgrade of Yugoslav purchasers of such clothing, who came to protest about the high prices charged for such goods.

Drugs, such as penicillin, sulfa, and insulin, sent by UNRRA to relieve human suffering, were brazenly sold by Tito's army doctors at black-market prices.

When people began to come to the Embassy seeking these drugs, I found many instances where 10,000 dinars, equal to 3 months' pay of the average Yugoslav wage earner, had been charged by Tito's doctors to treat a single venereal case.

Often these applicants were plain soldiers, who didn't rate treatment reserved for the Communist elite or for those wealthy enough to pay the black-market prices.

Every ranking Allied officer who resigned from Yugoslavia's UNRRA in disgust has been replaced by an "expert" from the Soviet Union.

I know these things are true. I have documented many of these cases, and these statements are made from a background of many investigations in each category.

Reports of abuses in the UNRRA distribution in Yugoslavia were forwarded to the State Department in Washington, but up to the time I left Belgrade the misuse of UNRRA supplies was continuing.

EX-UNITED STATES ATTACHÉ SAYS ALL "YUGOS" FEAR RED POLICE

(By Eric L. Pridonoff, former special economic attaché in the United States Embassy at Belgrade)

Every city in Communist-ruled Yugoslavia is divided into wards by the Tito regime.

Every ward is headed by a committee whose members are tested Communists.

The wards, in turn, are divided into streets with Communist street committees. And each street is divided into blocks under Communist block secretaries.

These ward, street, and block officials report daily to the OZNA, all-powerful secret police, controlled by Gen. Alexander Rankovich, Minister of the Interior, who is general secretary of the Communist Party of Yugoslavia.

No man, woman, or child may move in or out of his block, street, or ward without it being included in the daily reports to the OZNA.

Each individual must have in his possession at all times a "karakteriska" signed by his block secretary.

Without this document he cannot buy food, obtain lodgings, clothe himself, or travel.

FILES KEPT ON ALL RESIDENTS

The OZNA maintains files on each individual, and in those files is written the most confidential and secret opinion of the block secretary about the holder of every "karakteriska."

The file gives the Communist Party stamp of approval or disapproval of the individual.

People not of the Communist front are classified as unreliable, lawless, even as killers. They are game with ever-open season for the OZNA, for the reliable or the authorized or those labeled "ours" in the favorable dossiers.

In Yugoslavia the "karakteriska" is a document of life—or death.

Based on reports of the block secretaries, OZNA men may enter any home, check food supplies, wood, clothes for each family.

Smoke is checked as it comes from the chimneys, to indicate whether fuel is burned too often, and also to check the source of the fuel supply if more than the meager ration seems to be consumed.

Visitors, for even a few minutes, are reported. Casual street contacts are noted, with special emphasis on contacts with British or American persons.

In order to buy a pair of shoes, a yard of cloth, or any consumer goods, except food, the individual must get a coupon from the ward headquarters—impossible unless the "karakteriska" is in order and the official file at headquarters places the applicant on the approved list.

Prices, with a coupon, are reasonable. Getting the coupon is the trick.

TITO OFFICIALS WELL DRESSED

Yet Tito's military officers and Government officials have shoes in multiple pairs.

They live in the best housing. They have ample food. Their wives wear silk and furs and diamonds. They have automobiles and ample American gasoline. Their stoves have ample fuel.

On the farms, in the forests, in the mines, each group has a production quota, carefully estimated, watched, and checked by the never-ending chain of OZNA espionage.

The farmer must sell to the Government, at fixed prices, such quantities of foodstuffs as the Government in that district estimates it needs to furnish 600 grams of flour per day to heavy laborers, 450 grams for other laborers, and 300 grams for all others—in American measure 600 grams is about a

The farmer with more than five head of sheep must sell all wool in excess of five head to the Government at fixed prices.

Those with less than five head can keep two fleeces for each member of his family, the rest being sold to the Government.

The Government fixes prices on all items.

Any semblance of thrift is called hoarding and carries penalties up to death. Raw materials, semifinished materials—all must be sold to the only authorized buyer—the Government.

Owners of agricultural land may not sell it.

Owner of factories, or production plants of any kind, frequently find themselves accused of having made profits during the German occupation, if they were in occupied territory.

Charges of war profiteering bring commissars to take over their plants.

Fines and taxes put the plants into Government hands in short order after that.

Under the Tito-Subashich agreement private property was guaranteed. Under the Tito-OZNA regime more than three-quarters of all property in Yugoslavia has been liquidated.

Any denunciation of an individual in the people's courts—any charge by a Communist that the individual collaborated with the Nazis—is equivalent to guilt.

Milosh Minich, public prosecutor of Serbia, appearing before the legislative committee, made the following comment on justice as it is meted out in present-day Yugoslavia:

"If we had judges—jurists as permanent judges—we would give preponderance to formal justice. But material justice should be rendered by men, regardless of whether they are jurists."

DEATH SENTENCES IN 10 MINUTES

"Justice should be pronounced by men who know how to guard the achievements of the national liberation struggle.

"Men of the national liberation struggle appreciate better the significance and importance of the new laws than would jurists who interpret the letter of the law."

Just how this works may be shown by some examples.

In Sandjak a court composed of a Communist, a gypsy, and a Turk sits in judgment at night, sentences people to death by shooting without a proper hearing and without a lawyer present—the whole proceeding lasting less than 10 minutes in some cases.

GROUP OF WOMEN FORM A COURT

A group of women of the Anti-Fascist Front of Women, suddenly decided to form a court in Belgrade last July.

They tried a Yugoslav woman and sentenced her to 5 years' imprisonment.

The authorities recognized the sentence, set it up as an example.

The urge in Yugoslavia is to judge somebody and to sentence somebody.

Every member of the Communist Party seeks to have some public part in sitting in judgment on some unfortunate victim.

The new Communist judiciary, literate or illiterate, ignorant of law as law is understood throughout the world judges quickly and efficiently on the basis of Communist directives.

The Tito-Subashich agreement guarantees freedom of religion.

Records in the Government-controlled press itself show literally hundreds of priests and others of the clergy have been "liquidated," usually on charges of "disloyalty."

Records show hundreds of "suicides in jail, awaiting trial."

OZNA VISIT FEARED BY ALL

There are no men or women in Yugoslavia, other than the small percentage of Communists, who are not afraid of a visit from the OZNA or the militia to their homes; of torture, jail, plunder, persecution, and death.

Many thousands of Yugoslav refugees are now in Italy and Austria, ready to kill themselves rather than be sent back to the homeland they knew before the arrival of Tito and the locusts of communism.

(By Charles T. Lucey)

United States officials returning here from Yugoslavia have reported military use of equipment supplied by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration and intended for use in bringing aid to needy civilians.

These officials also have reported efforts by the Yugoslav press to identify Russia as the source of UNRRA aid going into the country.

Still another report of returning United States officials is that while Yugoslavia has made requests for extensive UNRRA aid in industrial rehabilitation, obstacles have been put in the way of UNRRA officials seeking to inspect industrial facilities to justify such aid.

A controversy has arisen between UNRRA Director Fiorella LaGuardia and certain United States newspaper correspondents in Yugoslavia over reported use of UNRRA supplies for Tito's military machine. Mr. LaGuardia says that investigation of such charges showed they were unfounded.

EYEWITNESS STORIES

But American officials returning to Washington verify the reports and say they have seen UNRRA vehicles being used to haul men and supplies of the Yugoslav Army. In at least one instance, it was reported that huge UNRRA trailers were used to transport army tanks. In another, use of UNRRA trucks to haul Yugoslav soldiers and guns in Slovenia and Croatia was reported.

Even nonmilitary supplies given Yugoslavia may have the result of bolstering the armed strength of the country, returning officials say, because this kind of help—industrial and highway rehabilitation, for example—allows the Tito government to concentrate efforts on military development that otherwise would have to go to rebuilding a war-torn country.

Officials returning from both Poland and Yugoslavia have reported that political favoritism has had an important part in distribution of relief goods in some cases.

SUPPLIES CAN BE SOLD

Where people have money to pay for foodstuffs, supplies are sold. The proceeds go first to pay UNRRA administrative expenses in the country concerned, and then to the government to be used for rehabilitation. But in some cases it is contended that use of UNRRA-derived funds for rehabilitation indirectly benefit the building of a military machine. More than 70 percent of UNRRA funds are supplied by the United States.

United States officials also have brought back reports that at the same time UNRRA is providing relief and rehabilitation aid to Albania, that country's Government is concentrating its efforts on building a military machine. In both Yugoslavia and Albania there have been many reports of UNRRA officials being treated with hostility. Some UNRRA reports, it is known, have mentioned military use of UNRRA goods in Albania as well as in Yugoslavia.

* * * * *

One of the problems which has perplexed even some UNRRA people abroad is how to use certain supplies bought in entire depot lots from the Army. In one case a big supply of searchlights was acquired, and in another rudders and other marine parts. Some officials overseas have called these supplies virtually worthless in the relief job UNRRA is supposed to do.

Misuse of UNRRA equipment by untrained personnel has been reported both from Yugoslavia and Albania. One United States official has described the wrecking of many thousands of dollars worth of huge truck-trailers and road rollers between Zagreb and Trieste, attributed to handling by natives who lacked training.

Returning officials agree that in many areas UNRRA has accomplished vast good, but some UNRRA overseas workers have expressed dismay, nevertheless, at diversion of UNRRA goods into channels never intended.

TAKE IT EASY, SOL

Chairman SOL BLOOM and others of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, have worked up quite a lather over what they describe as the "premature" publication of news about a subcommittee report on UNRRA and America's Russian policy.

What happened is that the enterprising Scripps-Howard reporter, Charles T. Lucey, got the information on what was in the report and wrote a couple of stories which were published in the News before other Capitol Hill correspondents could get their hands on a copy of the report.

Chairman BLOOM may have been embarrassed by having been deprived of the formality of issuing a release simultaneously to the press as a whole, and some of the other reporters may have been embarrassed by Mr. Lucey's "beat." But no harm has been done. The public was entitled to the information. And things like that will happen in a country which has a free press and resourceful reporters like Charlie Lucey.

Incidentally, Mr. BLOOM, you have been unfair in accusing Representative KARL MUNDT of "leaking" the story. Take it from us, SOL—and we know—Charlie got his information elsewhere. Not that it matters. All that matters is that Charlie's stories were accurate—which they were—as well as being the first in print.

BLOOM AND MUNDT IN ROW ON REPORT—LATTER DENIES HANDING PRESS ADVANCE COPY OF DOCUMENT ON RUSSIAN RELATIONS

(By Charles E. Egan)

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The mystery of who handed reporters advance copies of a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee report criticizing appeasement of Russia remained unsolved today, but the row its publication caused continued to furnish Capitol Hill with one of its choicest bits of gossip in years.

On opposite sides of the dispute were Representative SOL BLOOM, Democrat, of New York, who has been chairman of the powerful Foreign Affairs Committee for years, and Representative KARL E. MUNDT, Republican, of South Dakota.

Mr. MUNDT was hotly accused—and as hotly denied the charge—of having been responsible for turning over to the press advance copies of a four-member subcommittee report urging a firmer stand in diplomatic dealings with Russia. The report, which received wide publicity, was described by Mr. BLOOM as "malicious and vicious" and likely to disturb the work of the Big Four Foreign Ministers, now in session in Paris.

The committee clash came at the close of a hearing on a bill authorizing a military mission to China and the turning over of surplus military supplies to that nation. It was started by Representative JOSEPH F. RYTER, Democrat, of Connecticut, and one of the four signers of the report. He asked Chairman BLOOM if the committee could go into executive session and consider the report.

"The committee meeting stands adjourned," Representative BLOOM snapped.

"But I want to know what's going to be done about this report," Mr. RYTER said. "I read in the papers this morning that the committee would consider it. I want to know if the report is going to be published."

"It's already been published," Chairman BLOOM answered with asperity. "Somebody on this committee gave out an advance copy of the report. In all my years here I have never known of a breach of confidence by any member of the committee until now. I was mortified when I saw the stories, indicating that someone had been guilty of giving out a report that hasn't even been considered by the committee."

"That still doesn't answer my question," Mr. RYTER retorted. "I want to know if the committee is going to meet and whether or not the report will be published."

The committee stands adjourned." Mr. BLOOM thundered.

At this juncture other committee members joined in the fray, with Representative JOHN M. VORYS, Republican, of Ohio, demanding to know if there was an intention to suppress the report.

"You can't suppress what's already published," Mr. BLOOM rejoined. "Somebody's already given out the report."

"Are you accusing me?" Representative RYTER asked.

"No; but the Chair knows who did give it out," Mr. BLOOM answered.

"Then I think the Chair should name the person," Mr. RYTER said.

"I think it was Mr. MUNDT," Mr. BLOOM responded.

"It certainly wasn't me," the South Dakota Representative asserted. "I wasn't even in town yesterday. I was up in Buffalo."

"There are ways of giving things out even if you are absent from the city," Chairman BLOOM responded.

"What I want to know——," Representative RYTER chimed in.

"The committee stands adjourned." Mr. BLOOM called for the third time.

Committee members later said that they would insist upon an executive session of the Foreign Affairs Committee and demand consideration of the report. They thought the matter could be brought up before the close of the week.

HOUSE GROUP BARS APPEASING RUSSIA IN REPORT ON TOUR—SUGGESTS MEETING OF TRUMAN AND STALIN TO GET A FRANK EXCHANGE OF SENTIMENT—BORDER STATES CRITICIZED—POLAND AND YUGOSLAVIA FOUND TO REFLECT SOVIET IDEAS—UNRRA UNDER ATTACK

(By John D. Morris)

WASHINGTON, June 18.—House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee, reporting on a tour last year of Europe and the Near East, called today for an end to our unwise appeasement methods in dealing with Russia and recommended a meeting between President Truman and Premier Stalin for a frank, across-the-table exchange of sentiment.

The 41-page report, printed for private distribution among members of the full committee, which will decide tomorrow whether officially to make it public, reflected a considerable degree of alarm of Soviet activities in countries under USSR domination and over growing Russian influence in other nations.

It also criticized activities of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration for creating hopeless confusion and said that the United States recognition of the present Polish and Yugoslav regimes was too hasty.

SIGNATURES DIVIDED

Representatives KARL E. MUNDT, of South Dakota, and FRANCES P. BOLTON, of Ohio, Republicans, signed the entire report while two other members of the subcommittee, Representatives THOMAS S. GORDON, of Illinois, and JOSEPH F. RYTER, of Connecticut, Democrats, limited their sponsorship to the first half because they had been unable to complete the tour, which was made in August, September, and October of last year.

All four members subscribed to the recommendations for "immediate abandonment of any semblance of appeasement" toward Russia and for a Truman-Stalin conference.

A "stiffer attitude" toward Russia, the report asserted, is necessary not only because appeasement harms the United States influence in the world but also because, "when we yield to Russian positions unjustifiably we discredit in Russia the high-ranking leaders of the Kremlin who, in their own party councils, argue that only a policy of complete reciprocity with the United States will bring enduring results for Russia."

The purpose of a Truman-Stalin meeting, it was stated, would be "to determine what policies and problems of each country seem to hold Russia and America apart," and what can be done to bring them closer together.

The subcommittee, in other recommendations dealing with Russia, urged "complete reciprocity" between the two countries; an "unequivocal determination" by the State Department of "the attitude and policy of the Russian Government toward the countries now either absorbed by or under the control of the U. S. S. R.," as a guide for United States policy toward Russia; and improvement of cultural relations between the two countries by exchange of persons and information.

By "complete reciprocity" the committee said it meant that "no greater privileges should be extended to Russians in the United States than are extended to Americans in Russia," and that "since the United States engages in and encourages no type of political activity in Russia that the U. S. S. R. should exercise the same restraints in the United States."

CRITICAL OF POLAND

All four members of the subcommittee were also highly critical of Soviet activities in Czechoslovakia and Poland and of ineffective American effort to counter them. In Poland, their report stated, freedom of speech is unknown; freedom from fear is a mockery as a result of ex-members of the Red Army's plundering, raping, and living off the country as they go and each man, woman, and child lives in daily fear of want.

The report told of large numbers of armed Soviet soldiers in Warsaw streets and of Soviet arrogance toward the population. The subcommittee heard numerous tales of pillage, rape, and torture at the hands of both the NKVD (Soviet police) and the Russian military, it was stated.

"The committee feels," the report stated, "that our Government has acted too hastily in granting even conditional recognition to the present provisional government. It strongly believes that the indulgence of our Government has been greatly abused and the action presented to the Polish people in an utterly false light."

UNRRA in Czechoslovakia, it said, was described as almost entirely a Russian show, with the United States receiving very little credit for its substantial contributions.

UNRRA IN YUGOSLAVIA

UNRRA was further criticized in the portion of the report signed only by Representative MUNDT and BOLTON. Reporting their observations on Yugoslavia, they said:

"From our conference with the Russian director of UNRRA, Dr. Sergeichik, and his staff, we came away reinforced in our conviction that those who are not contributing substantial percentages of supplies to UNRRA should have no position in the directorate of its operations." They said that inefficiencies and maladministration in Czechoslovakia, Poland, and Yugoslavia had caused hopeless confusion.

Marshal Tito and his government are ruling Yugoslavia today as completely as the men of the Kremlin rule Russia, they asserted. The situation there, as in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Rumania, and Bulgaria, reflects the vicious harvest which comes from the appeasement policies which the United States has followed with regard to Russia ever since the days of Yalta and perhaps before.

YUGOSLAVS TO BAR MAJOR IN UNITED STATES ARMY

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA, June 2.—A United States Embassy official said today that United States Army Maj. Richard Coombs had been declared persona non grata by the Yugoslav Government because he had tried to intervene in the arrest of a Yugoslav who was making anti-Government remarks at an American Memorial Day service Thursday. Harold Shantz, embassy chargé d'affaires, announced the Yugoslav Government's action.

Major Coombs, a graves registration officer assigned to Belgrade, left Friday on a honeymoon trip to Italy, and embassy sources said the Yugoslav action was tantamount to forbidding his return to Yugoslavia.

George Nikolic, the arrested Yugoslav, was detained after a United States Memorial Day ceremony at the graves of fallen American soldiers in Belgrade.

A report in the newspaper Borba said that anonymous sources had sought to stage a demonstration against the Yugoslav Government during the American service. M. Nikolic, the paper said, "in a loud voice and in a vulgar way cussed out the present regime of Yugoslavia."

The newspaper added that Major Coombs, "in a very rude and unlawful form, tried to intervene for Nikolic, but the Yugoslav authorities in a polite manner refused the intervention.

"At that moment, Major Coombs, to shock all spectators with his sarcastic tone, shouted, 'This is liberty for you, Tito. Heil Hitler!'" the Borba report added.

The newspaper also said that United States Army Chaplain William R. S. Donaghy, of Lowell, Mass., had misused the hospitality of Yugoslavia by having read to the Memorial Day crowd a letter from an unnamed Yugoslav woman. The newspaper said that the woman's charge that the "people do not have the means of showing their gratefulness to the fallen aviators is without basis."

LONDON, June 2.—British press dispatches from Belgrade reported tonight that the Yugoslav Government had dispatched notes to the United States and British embassies asking that the American and British War Graves Commissions stop work for sanitary reasons.

[From the New York Times of June 3, 1941]

YUGOSLAVIA TODAY

The American and British Governments have sent formal protests to the Government of Yugoslavia against its incitement of obstruction to the Allied military government in Trieste, where any incident might set off an explosion that would be hard to cope with. This diplomatic step is merely one of a number of recent representations made to the Yugoslav Government.

Yugoslavia today is dominated by a small Communist minority headed by Marshal Tito, who not only views both the capitalist and the socialist west with doctrinal suspicion, but who also considers himself to be a Russian proconsul and the leader of the Communist spearhead toward the west. He is now imposing on his country a totalitarian regime which is ruthless in its methods.

Having legalized his rule by a typically totalitarian election boycotted by whatever remained of an opposition, Marshal Tito is putting into effect all that he learned during his long years of training in Communist revolutionary practice. There is neither political nor religious nor any other freedom in Yugoslavia. The press is shackled, the opposition has been crushed, and the OZNA, or secret police, sees to it that all Yugoslavs without exception join the Tito forces and hail the leader, or they do not eat. The least sign of opposition entails the confiscation of ration cards for food and clothing, even the loss of identification papers, which might mean arrest. Private property, from the nation's industries and larger landed estates to stores, hotels, and private homes, is being confiscated without compensation to its owners, who are generally imprisoned as collaborators or profiteers. Even the UNRRA must serve as a weapon of the revolution, for the supplies it sends free to save the starving are not only represented as coming from Russia but are also sold by the government at profiteering prices.

Such practices are sometimes represented as the inevitable concomitants of a revolution. But there is no right of revolution by a minority in a country that is free. And it must be kept in mind that these are not excesses of undisciplined mobs committed in the heat of passion, but integral parts of the policy of a government claiming international recognition. The assurances given to the people of Yugoslavia and other countries of eastern Europe during the war must still be redeemed.

POLES HUNGER DESPITE ALL THEIR EFFORTS

(Post Reporter Michael Frome, who has served as navigator of trans-Atlantic planes carrying UNRRA supplies to Europe, spent much of the last fortnight in Warsaw. There he interviewed nearly all government and opposition leaders. This is the third of five uncensored articles.)

(By Michael Frome)

The Polish people need food desperately, and the need will continue into 1947.

Brig. C. M. Drury, head of the UNRRA mission to Poland, and Jerzy Sztachelski, Minister of Supply, were blunt in stressing that—regardless of gains already made—Poland must continue to receive outside help before it can begin to feed its entire population.

Warsaw is a paradox, a picture of plenty in the midst of famine. Within a few blocks of the Polonia Hotel, the center of foreign life, the shops are shockingly full. Meats, eggs, fresh fruit, and vegetables—anything can be bought.

This is the free market, which feeds about one-half of 1 percent of the Polish population. It came into being last year when the Government found itself unable to requisition sufficient farm produce to feed everyone.

At that time the Government was forced to adopt the callous position: "Since it is impossible to give the entire population enough to eat we must cut off the nonproducers."

Ration cards were issued only to persons directly concerned with the job of rebuilding the nation and its industry. The others were forced to get food where they could find it.

And, although strict penalties are placed against farmers who do not meet their quotas, there are too many small farmers for the system to function well. The free market is designed to encourage farmers, through the opportunity for larger profits, to bring their food before the public.

Another source of free market supply is UNRRA indirectly. To the peasant receiving an UNRRA package, the cigarettes it contains are of far less value than the money it will bring; money with which to purchase a far more basic commodity. This practice is frowned on by the Government and UNRRA officials in Poland but they both recognize that, in the final analysis, it serves the paramount purpose of getting more food to the people.

The free market, however, does not yet reach a very large buying public. Under the weak and staggering postwar Polish economy an average worker earns about 1,200 zlotys a week ($12 at the nominal rate of exchange) and a professional about four times that much. In the cafes of Warsaw, a small cup of coffee costs 30 zlotys and a piece of cake about the same.

A full meal in a Warsaw restaurant would cost a workingman at least 1 day's wages.

PRICES REMAIN HIGH

The demand for food and merchandise is so far in excess of the supply that prices remain high and the shops generally empty of customers other than foreigners. The Government is lenient with and encourages the free market, both to bring more food to the public and to provoke a drop in prices.

For the great majority of the people, then, this picture of plenty is merely a facade to intrigue foreigners. To Brigadier Drury the problem of feeding the Polish Nation is on a large scale and far distant from solution.

Drury, one of the few foreigners in Warsaw who enjoy the confidence of the Polish Government, is a 34-year-old Canadian with an already distinguished career. A graduate of the Royal Military College, McGill University, and the University of Paris, he was a Montreal lawyer before entering the Army in 1939.

SERVED IN WASHINGTON

He served as military attaché of the Canadian Embassy in Washington in 1942 and 1943 and commanded the Fourth Canadian Division in Europe when the war ended. In Poland he is responsible for the largest UNRRA allocation to any single nation.

"In spite of Mr. Hoover the food crisis will not be over by the middle of this summer." Drury told me at UNRRA headquarters. "The situation has been so bad that the Poles have had to remove seed for planting from the stores in order to meet the need for food. That means that the productivity of the land is not being increased. This year's harvest will be only slightly larger than last fall's and there is no reason to think the shortages will be overcome by next year.

"In addition, even in normal times the Polish peasant produces first for his own use and secondarily for market consumption. Unlike American wheat markets, the Polish market is supplied by a tremendous number of small producers—so that a 10-percent drop in farm production would cause a 100 percent market drop. And this is a country in which nearly half the diet consists of grain or grain products."

THRESH ONLY AS NEEDED

"Also, because the peasant lacks machinery he is threshing his crops only as they are needed. In other words, a great deal of grain will be harvested in the winter instead of being stored as seed in the fall."

Drury pointed to Poland being the only nonenemy country with large territorial changes. "Other nations have suffered losses of population and physical damage," he said, "but the Poles, in addition, are moving millions of people in different directions. The moving, feeding, and resettling of barren, unseeded farm lands makes it impossible for these people to be self-supporting this year, let alone able to produce for the market."

Admitting that the UNRRA program in Poland is far behind schedule "because of factors beyond our control," Drury urged that shipments be increased manifold. "The Poles are not trying to rely on outside aid indefinitely. They have already made remarkable progress in getting the land back to work."

SPEAK OF AMERICAN UNRRA

Americans, he said, have the "curious sensibility" that their Nation is not getting credit for relief activities, leading to demands that the United States withdraw from UNRRA and establish its own agency. "Actually, however, the people here speak of us as the American UNRRA, causing considerable dissatisfaction to the British and other nationals in our work."

He illustrated the need for increased aid by pointing out that, while in the United States the average consumption of soap is 24 pounds per capita annually, UNRRA has been able to purchase only half a pound per capita for Poland. "Soap is extremely important here. Disease, stemming from a combination of lack of cleanliness and the destruction all around us, is one of the country's biggest enemies.

"Malnutrition is another cause of the high rate of disease. Because the German plan was to exterminate the Polish Nation (and they did kill off nearly all the Jews and intellectuals) or reduce it to serfdom, those who survived had no reserve to fight disease."

HIGH TUBERCULOSIS RATE

"And today tuberculosis is 10 times as prevalent in Poland as in the United States. In some sections, as high as 17 percent of the children are either in need of treatment or observation for tuberculosis. A balanced diet is one of the principal weapons against tuberculosis and that is impossible."

Just before I left, Drury called me to the window of his office. "Come here and take a look," he said.

The UNRRA Building, one of the best in Warsaw, was undergoing repairs. Drury pointed to the workmen in the courtyard below.

"This is their lunch hour. Yet how many do you see eating?"

A dozen or so were sitting and talking. One of them was eating a sandwich.

"Well, don't the rest of them get any lunch?" I asked.

"No, they don't."

But just what progress have the Poles made to feed themselves? What part has the government played? Has it given any leadership to the food program? To some Warsawans I met, the government has been more of a retarding factor, an agency for diverting UNRRA supplies away from the people.

DETAILS PROBLEMS

Sztachelski (Shtakelskee), the Minister of Supply, detailed the nation's problem and accomplishments.

At the outset, he said, the country faced three main difficulties:

1. A complete lack of food reserves, everything having been taken by the Germans.

2. There was no trade or commercial apparatus through which to distribute supplies. The majority of businessmen and traders had been murdered by the enemy.

3. Transportation was in a state of complete disorganization. Virtually not one automobile remained. Almost all railroad stations, locomotives, and railroad cars had been destroyed.

"So we were really starting from the beginning," the Minister said. "In the first period of our greatest need we received aid from Russia. The USSR sent 60,000 tons of flour in January 1945 as a gift for Warsaw and another 150,000 tons of cereal just before the first crops last year."

LIVING STANDARD VERY LOW

"Our standard of living then was very low, and these gifts helped us to survive. It is important to note that in the first period it was primarily on the basis of Soviet assistance that we pulled through.

"We have striven to solve the distribution problem in a difficult but fundamental manner—through the cooperative system. It is the only method we can find to handle such a large-scale distribution. Along with the cooperatives, the government is encouraging private initiative, always important in the development of commerce.

"To get the full utilization of our shattered transportation system, we had to get the complete use out of every railroad car. We endeavored to speed up the loadings and shorten the stay of trains in the station. In spite of small gains, movement of supplies was made with delays and irregularities."

SUPPORT VITAL NEED

"What we needed most of all for the success of the program was the support of the people. Although we could neither pay nor feed them, the workers responded with enthusiasm and effort in moving supplies.

"Then, last May, when the need was even more than desperate, the first UNRRA transport came to us. With our harbors in ruins, we had great difficulty in receiving the early UNRRA shipments. And, although the shipments were small, they were extremely important and helped save many lives.

"When the first ships came to our rebuilt ports of Gdynia and Danzig last September, we could handle only one ship a day. Since then, Gdynia alone has handled 220 ships. On March 1 we were able to unload 2,400 tons a day; on April 1 we unloaded 4,000 tons, and our capacity is increasing daily.

"Not long ago—January and February—we rebuilt and opened grain elevators for the first time. We are able to receive more and more grain in two ports, not counting all the little harbors, not counting Stettin, where the grain elevators are now being rebuilt."

SAVED FROM DIFFICULT FATE

"And so, the first period, of direst need, when our people worked without skill or technique or transportation facilities, came to an end. The UNRRA shipments of 80,000 tons, first of wheat and then rye, have saved us from a difficult fate. They came at the last moment. Every delay brought us that much closer to catastrophe.

"There are now 20,000 additional tons of grain on the way from America. The best proof of how much we need this grain is that we have had to use 20,000 tons of sowing reserve for food. If the shipments are delayed, the country will have to go still further into its reserve. The 20,000 tons already used decreases next year's crop by 100,000 tons.

"The best UNRRA help was the meat we received—20,000 tons of it. But we have only started to feel this assistance recently when the shipments became much larger."

FAT SITUATION IMPROVING

"The situation in regard to fats is quite difficult for we have only received 10,000 tons of lard, butter or margarine; it is improving, however, for half that amount arrived since the first of the year.

"Our perspective for the future is not immediately bright. The government has introduced many restrictions to diminish consumption. In spite of this, we will need help badly in June, July, and August. Our country needs a million tons of grain.

"The productive capacity of the land has decreased; we have no manure, no fertilizer; the occupation period has not helped the rotation of crops—and now we are feeling it the most.

"Because we have used the sowing reserve for consumption, 30 percent of the land is not being sowed this year. We will have the same shortage of meat and fats next year as this. We are short about 70,000 tons of fats and 120,000 tons of meat—which we must cover not only with meat but fish, as well. Otherwise, it would be impossible.

"We are watching the meetings of the food and agricultural organization with anxiety; we cannot picture the consequences of relief activities coming to an end. America must realize that whether the help comes through UNRRA or any possible new agency, it must continue until we are once again able to feed ourselves."

TITO SCORNS UNITED STATES "YUGO" AID

(By Eric L. Pridonoff, former special economic attaché in the United States Embassy at Belgrade)

British and American military supplies saved Tito's Yugoslav Partisans from extinction during the war.

British and American supplies through UNRRA saved Yugoslavia's economic life after liberation from Hitler's rule.

But today Tito, his Communist secret police, his generals, and his civil government officials openly scorn anything American or British, anything not within the orbit of communism.

YUGOSLAVIA'S FORLORN HOPE

Yugoslavia—below the crust of military and political dictatorship—lives in the forlorn hope that some day, somehow, the Americans, or the United Nations, will save them.

I have been told this, not once but literally hundreds of times, by non-Communists all over the country—in trust, because, through an American, I could speak to them in their own tongue.

Tito and the Communists in Yugoslavia were not always openly scornful of and antagonistic to Americans east of the Adriatic.

Once, we and the British were most welcome there.

That was when our aviators and our supplies were parachuting to earth to aid the Partisan effort against Hitler.

CHURCHILL REPORTS TO PARLIAMENT

That was when Prime Minister Churchill, reporting to his Parliament after the Big Three conference at Teheran, declared:

"Between General Mihailovich and Tito, we are taking sides with Tito and shall give only him our greatest possible assistance."

The good will of Tito and the Communists held as long as we gave them armaments and food for their armies, great numbers of trucks for their transportation system and later vast UNRRA supplies to feed the starving people.

It held until the incident at Trieste when Allied troops stopped Tito's Partisans from flowing westward beyond Fiume into northern Italy, and stopped their plunder and mass murder.

Then came the change.

BANNERS SHOW ALLIED LEADERS

Before the Trieste incident when parades were held in Yugoslavia and Tito's victorious army strutted—often on UNRRA shoes—or rode, often in UNRRA relief trucks, the banners showed pictures of Stalin, Tito, Roosevelt, and Churchill.

To the shouts of "Long live the Soviet" and "Long live Tito" were added shouts of "Long live America" and "Long live England."

After the Trieste episode, however, there were no shouts for the American and British leaders, no placards for America or England.

The American trucks, driven by American gasoline, carried Tito's troops all over Yugoslavia, but there was no mention that America gave them to the Partisans.

OZNA forbade posters of the Allied leaders of the Western Powers.

WILLING TO TAKE, NOT TO GIVE

That Tito and his Communists were willing to take but not to give is evidenced by this statement of Yugoslav Gen. Arsa Jovanovic before he left, dressed in the uniform of a Soviet lieutenant general, for Russia to undergo 2½ years training in Russian military and political tactics:

"You will never buy us with UNRRA supplies.

"You will never buy us.

"Our sympathies are with the East."

The Tito feeling toward Americans showed when the Embassy was ready to move into Belgrade.

Daily complaints began to come in about Tito seizures of American enterprises in Yugoslavia.

Usually a committee of three, headed by a commissar, took over.

Up to April 1946, when I left, no such seized property was returned to American ownership-control.

CITIZENS ACCUSED OF AIDING GERMANS

Some of our citizens were accused of "collaboration with the Germans," others merely of "making profits during the occupancy"—all without evidence.

The J. G. White & Co. property at Novi Sad is one instance.

First the holdings were taken over.

Then a forced sale was put through at 10 percent of the original investment.

Then charges were made for "back wages."

A penalty was assessed for profits during the war—Hungarian occupation forces occupied the plant—so that the final return amounted to less than 1 percent of the original investment.

Another case is that of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. holdings at Belgrade.

KNOW THE FACTS FROM INVESTIGATION

I personally investigated both cases and so I know the facts.

I went with two American representatives to look over the plant owned by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. at Zemun.

We presented our credentials to the commissar in charge.

He said he had nothing to say to us, that he was in charge and that we could not even come into the waiting room.

It was tough for an American to take a slap in the face like that, but every American now in Yugoslavia can testify that Tito and his Communists are slapping all American faces just that way.

Even employees at the American Embassy are subject to persecution and insult.

About a year ago the Embassy electrician, a Yugoslav, was arrested without specific charge and jailed.

We never learned what happened to him.

FIVE MEMBERS ARE JAILED

While I was in Yugoslavia five native members of the United States Embassy staff were arrested without charges and jailed without trial.

On one of them, no reports were ever received.

Two of the others were still in jail when I returned to America.

The other two were released after a time.

A score of Embassy employees were told from time to time by OZNA, secret police agents:

"You will not work for the American reactionaries forever.

"You are either with us or against us.

"If you choose to work for the reactionaries, we will remember."

CONSTANT TERROR AMONG EMPLOYEES

There is constant terror in the Embassy among Yugoslav employees.

They never know when they will be arrested.

Diplomatic immunity is not recognized by Tito or his men.

Americans coming in or going out of Yugoslavia are searched.

Embassy food supplies come in by air from Italy or Austria.

Tito customs men require each box to be opened.

They put their fingers into their mouths, then into sugar, or flour, "to test it."

Any Russian officers in Yugoslavia who demonstrated friendship for the Americans at the Embassy were quickly arrested on trumped up charges of "bribery" or some other alleged offense and whisked away to an unknown fate.

There were several such instances, of which I have first-hand knowledge.

SUDDEN MESSAGE TO MOVE CARS

Last February the Tito Foreign Office sent a sudden message to the United States Embassy that all cars parked in front of it were "blocking traffic" and would have to be moved.

While plans were being made in the Embassy to move the cars, and assurance had been given by Tito's Foreign Office of ample time to complete the removal, the chief of the traffic patrol arrived and presented an ultimatum that if the cars were not moved within 5 minutes he would move them.

At the end of that 5 minutes his men began to break locks on the cars and to move them away.

YUGOSLAVIA UNRRA PRESS CHIEF IS OUSTED BY RUSSIAN SUPERIOR

BELGRADE, June 25.—Leo Hochstetter, public information officer in the UNRRA mission to Yugoslavia, has been ordered back to Washington for reassignment by the mission chief, Col. Mihail Sergeichik, a Russian.

Mr. Hochstetter said his dismissal was a result of "basic differences in concert on the conduct of public information activities in Yugoslavia."

(A spokesman at UNRRA headquarters in Washington had no comment on the announcement from Belgrade, and said he had not heard of the development until informed by newspapermen here.)

Colonel Sergeichik described the dismissal as an interoffice matter and said UNRRA rules forbade a statement by him on the factors involved. He said he had asked Director General Fiorello LaGuardia for permission to make an exception to the rule in this case.

According to newspapermen in a position to know, the crux of the dispute, which may become a full-sized blow-up, seemed to be whether a public-information officer should act as a press agent, glossing over deficiencies if necessary, or use his office to give correspondents and the public a complete picture.

Mr. Hochstetter, a native of Pittsburgh, Pa., and a former Washington newspaperman and wartime OWI officer in Turkey, said his personal relations with his Russian chief were cordial, but that "I have found that the attitude of Colonel Sergeichik and his advisers had made it increasingly difficult for me to carry out my responsibilities as I see them."

"It is my view that a public-information officer of UNRRA is an international public servant charged with the twofold responsibility of explaining all aspects of the UNRRA program to the beneficiaries and of accounting for UNRRA's activities to the contributors," he said.

Once before, after a sharp disagreement over policy, Colonel Sergeichik had requested Mr. Hochstetter himself to ask for reassignment. The latter refused.

UNITED STATES MAY BLOCK UNRRA FUNDS TO REDS DUE TO BAN ON PRESS—HOUSE MEMBERS IRKED BY REFUSAL TO ADMIT WRITERS

A "none-for-Russia" tag on this country's $465,000,000 final contribution to UNRRA became a definite possibility today.

President Truman's disclosure that Moscow had balked at letting American correspondents report on the relief agencies' activities in two Soviet Republics sent influential House Members into an angry huddle.

They tried before but failed to ban the use of United States funds in nations which refused to give American press and radio representatives free access to UNRRA news.

Finally they settled for a provision requiring the President to seek through "appropriate channels" to obtain admission of American correspondents to recipient countries.

"Apparently we did not go far enough and will now have to get together," Representative BROWN, Republican, of Ohio, told a reporter. "It may be that the House now will be willing to insist that no UNRRA funds supplied by the United States be used in countries which don't allow our reporters to go inside and find out how the money is being used."

Mr. BROWN was one of the leaders in the previous fight to put a "no reporters—no money" provision into UNRRA legislation.

Acting Secretary of State Acheson told a news conference today that so far as he knows no American news dispatches about UNRRA activities in the Ukraine and White Russia have been censored so far.

SOVIET RULES EXPLAINED

He pointed out that the Soviet Government did not refuse to permit American reporters to check on UNRRA activities in the two republics, but at the same time insisted that the usual Russian censorship rules would apply, making their reports subject to censorship.

He said he understood that a group of American newspapermen have made a trip through the two Soviet Republics in which UNRRA aid is being distributed, and have arranged for another trip.

The final $465,000,000 American allotment to the UNRRA fund is included in a deficiency appropriation bill scheduled for House consideration late this week. It will bring this country's total contribution to $2,700,000,000.

Mr. Brown said he was unable to see why Russia refused to permit American reporters to check on UNRRA operations when all other nations have removed press bans in that respect.

ARRANGEMENTS O. K. ELSEWHERE

Reporting to Congress on Russia's position, Mr. Truman said yesterday, "Satisfactory arrangements are in effect to permit American press and radio representatives to report without censorship on the UNRRA programs in all UNRRA receiving countries except the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics."

In his report to the House through Speaker RAYBURN, the President transmitted a Soviet diplomatic memorandum asserting that "the censorship rules in force for all correspondents in the Soviet Union will be applied to correspondents desiring to report on the utilization and distribution of UNRRA supplies."

Accredited UNRRA representatives, the President said, have been given "necessary facilities for observing and reporting" the agency's activities in the two Soviet Republics involved.

Through these representatives, the Soviet memorandum added, American official circles and the public "will have the possibility of receiving information."

AMERICAN PROTEST ON RUMANIAN CURES REJECTED BY SOVIET

Acting Secretary of State Acheson today said Russia had flatly rejected a strong United States protest against suppression of news freedom in Rumania, and has forced Reuben Markham, of the Christian Science Monitor, to leave that country.

Mr. Acheson told a news conference the United States had registered its objections to the treatment of Mr. Markham in both Moscow and Bucharest a month ago and that it had been turned down in both places.

Word had just been received from the Soviet Ministry of Foreign Affairs, he said, contending that the American argument furnished no foundation for rescinding the Soviet action against the American newsman.

POTSDAM VIOLATION SEEN

The Kremlin takes this view, Mr. Acheson said, despite the fact that the American Government considers suppression of news freedom in Rumania a violation of the Potsdam agreement made a year ago by Prime Minister Stalin, President Truman, and Prime Minister Attlee.

Mr. Acheson said the Christian Science Monitor has advised the State Department that Mr. Markham left Rumania June 22 and is now in Athens. Colonel General Susaikov, ranking Soviet military authority at Bucharest, had ordered him out at the latest by today.

Mr. Markham had written stories on conditions in Russian-occupied Communist-dominated Rumania to which the Russians objected.

UNITED STATES EMBASSY INTERVIEWED

Mr. Acheson related that on May 21 the Soviets ordered Mr. Markham out of the country by May 26. Thereupon the American Embassy in Moscow tried to persuade the Russian Government to rescind the order.

The United States also made strong protests, Mr. Acheson said, to Soviet military authorities at Bucharest on May 25. Subsequently, however, the State Department was informed that Susaikov had refused to consider the protests.

Furthermore, Mr. Acheson said, the Soviet Ministry of Foreign Affairs has sent word that there is no foundation for rescinding the order.

It evidently was in connection with this latest decision of the Kremlin that Susaikov finally ordered Mr. Markham out of the country.

BOSTON, June 25.—The Christian Science Monitor, commenting last night on the expulsion from Rumania of its correspondent, Reuben H. Markham, said in a statement, "There can be no question of Mr. Markham's integrity."

Mr. Chairman, the following additional information, with specific reference to Yugoslavia and Albania, I think, is pertinent at this time.

In the case of Albania, the desire of the present regime there to subordinate the building of roads to the building of any army eliminated any urgency for road-building equipment to be sent there. The Albanian Government has banished all foreign nations from that country, with the exception of UNRRA and diplomatic personnel, which has removed practically all of the technicians that were once available in that country. Road maintenance is purely the hand shovel and dirt variety. The writer has seen good road rollers standing idle while the primitive method was being followed on the main road in Albania. The people of that country are not mechanically inclined and the present government is not interested in educating the population to anything other than bearing arms. Therefore, it is believed that money and materials will be entirely wasted by sending any mechanized road-building equipment there.

Yugoslavia is doing a very fine job of reconstructing her roads with the small quantities of equipment on hand. Her people are industrially minded and are rebuilding all of her transportation facilities rapidly. However, it is the opinion that most of this is the result of military aims rather than any earnest desire to rehabilitate a war-ravished country.

I deem it necessary to protest the sending of industrial supplies into countries like Albania and Yugoslavia where such supplies are being used chiefly to build military armies which are potentially menacing to the peace of the world. It is strongly urged that a high-level investigation by UNRRA officials should be made in these countries immediately to determine if our organization is actually performing a relief and rehabilitation job there or is unwittingly fostering the development of armed forces.

Albania appears as a country which is most unfriendly to the UNRRA ideals. The Albanese do not seem to want UNRRA aid. They treat the UNRRA staff and visitors as if they were spies and renegades. They are most high-handed about accepting UNRRA relief. Also, they are a very backward country. UNRRA is trying to reeducate, not rehabilitate Albania. This is particularly true in regard to industrial rehabilitation. Albania has always been an agricultural country, never an industrial country. They have never had industrial equipment and do not want it, and would not know what to do with it if they had it. Yet UNRRA insists on sending industrial equipment to them. Also, the country is in the midst of a military upheaval. Every male in the country is in uniform. The writer cannot understand why UNRRA food, clothing, and supplies should be furnished a country which is spending all available internal effort and money on the maintenance of a huge standing army.

The Yugoslavs, like the Albanese, are most unfriendly toward UNRRA. Again they are a militaristic country. Here UNRRA supplies are being used by the Yugoslavian Army. UNRRA vehicles around the Morgan line are hauling Yugoslav soldiers and supplies. Between Zagreb and Belgrade the 16- and 20-ton trailers UNRRA sent to Yugoslavia to be used in the transportation of heavy machinery pulled army tanks. An immediate investigation should be made by UNRRA as to the end use of the supplies being furnished Yugoslavia.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I was genuinely interested in the remarks on UNRRA that the very distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FLOOD], who addressed us a minute ago, made on this subject.

This I hope will be the last appropriation for UNRRA under its present form and as a single relief entity. There is some hope that if this relief function must continue that it will be transferred to the Social and Economic Council of the United Nations. Director LaGuardia gave us some hint of that. Perhaps the request for funds would be diminished in its entirety, that they would not ask for more than $500,000,000 in some succeeding year. There is, of course, a considerable difference between $1,850,000,000 and $500,000,000.

As I assess the value of UNRRA there is not any question that it did a lot of noble good and contributed to healing, but no one will deny that it also became something of a joy-ride for some of our cultural misadventurers.

It is just as well that it is handed over to the United Nations for probably better operation. I am not unmindful of the difficulties involved. There have been a good many. Every once in a while I have to pause to smile a little bit at the documentary evidence that comes to my attention proving some of the contentions we have made in other days. You will remember that in November last year and on previous occasions I was rather unsparing in my criticism of UNRRA. There were a good many people in the country who wrote me unkind and critical letters, stating, among other things, that I was wholly misguided. There was one in particular that came from a man identified with the Middle West, a man of considerable perception. It so happens that he is with the organization now. He used to take great umbrage over the things he read in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD that I said about UNRRA. But today he is in some far-off field and I shall not identify him because I do not want to give him away. But he wrote to one of his intimate friends very recently and said: "Whatever DIRKSEN had to say about UNRRA in other days was not very wide of the mark."

That comes from a very emphatic critic of the criticisms I made before, who is now tasting of this adventure himself.

Mr. LaGuardia in an off-the-record conversation with us in committee indicated that when this $465,000,000 is appropriated it ought to come with good grace and with the spirit of the traditional American giver to go with the gift so that no bitterness will go with the bread the hungry people will have to eat elsewhere in the world. I share that viewpoint. I let the spirit of the giver go with the gift, but I am not unmindful also that if we are going to go anywhere in the world with the eloquent, idealistic plans that we have to bring durable peace and to develop certain mutuality between our own country and other countries that there is a requirement in confidence on the part of those other people. Of course, that confidence has not been evidenced as yet to me. It certainly has not been evidenced in the case of Soviet Russia.

I believe in calling a spade a spade. I do not believe in this appeasement policy. I want to say to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. MUNDT] that I read the report which he and his associates made the other day, and it was a magnificent report that he and the committee prepared. I am in sympathy with those recommendations because I think they are on solid ground when they call for firmness in policy and no appeasement. What appealed to me more than anything else was paragraph 2 of the recommendations with respect to the Soviet Union which called for reciprocity. That is all important and, as the gentleman so well pointed out in the report, if the Soviet Embassy here in Washington enjoys a second-class mailing permit, why should not the United States Embassy in the Soviet Union enjoy the same privilege? If they have the free run of our country, why should we not say to them: "Now, we will be reciprocal in our treatment. In proportion as we do not get an equivalent in your country then obviously, in the interest of firmness and in the interest of self-respect, it becomes necessary that we put on some restrictions."

That leads me up to the item I want to discuss, namely, this matter of free press.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. MUNDT. I thank the gentleman on behalf of our subcommittee for his very nice words in connection with our report, and to announce for the benefit of the Members who may not be advised of the fact that the Foreign Affairs Committee has authorized the publication of sufficient copies of that report so that every Member of the House will receive a copy on his desk by the end of the present week.

I want to say that it is not only in the interest of firmness that we should have a reciprocal policy with Russia, but it is also in the interest of fairness. Possibly one reason why we do not have some of the same concessions in Russia for American citizens which are granted to Russians in America is because we have not asked for them specifically and definitely. We should make that request forthwith and insist on that type of reciprocity.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I thoroughly agree with the gentleman.

That brings me up to a proposal that I expect to present after a while when we read the bill, and that is a different version of the free press amendment, so drawn, of course, that it is germane and also comes within the rule requirement for a limitation.

There has been too much going on to indicate that the type of freedom of the press in which we are interested is not a condition today over there. The other day the Director of Information at the Yugoslav Mission in Belgrade was evidently let go or discharged—maybe he was fired, for all I know—by Mr. Sergeichik, who is the Director of the Yugoslav Mission. Evidently there was conflict of viewpoint between the two.

I believe we are not asking too much to request that as a condition for receiving farm machinery, for receiving food, for receiving machine tools and all the other items that are contemplated by that $465,000,000, that one of the conditions should be that press representatives, if they want to go over and take a look, shall have the free and uncensored right to report. Why, gracious me, you do not lend a dollar to a single State in this Nation or to a State agency unless we require a report. We want to know all about it. We do not lend any money to any Federal instrumentality unless we get a full report. When out of the goodness of their hearts the American people have charged the custodian of their Treasury to appropriate not only the $465,000,000 in this bill, but the other $1,350,000,000 that we have appropriated, and the balance of the second $1,350,000,000, is it too much for the generous people of America to ask that if a newspaperman wants to go abroad and ascertain how distribution is being made, that he ought to be able to write a report and send over the facts without the strange kind of censorship that goes on in some of these policed countries that are living under NKVD and OSNA, as they have in Yugoslavia? That just makes no sense to me, and I think the time has come to speak our piece.

On another occasion we were speculating some whether or not food, purchased out of UNRRA appropriations, was being used as it was intended. Of course, there was the broad-gage denial, but I am prepared to disprove it to you. The department director of one of the missions over there was in my office last Friday. I shall not mention the country. I said to him, "Do they use food as a political weapon?" He said, "That is true." The food is sent over there and distribution is made by the natives, the citizenry of the country. It is turned over to their country, the administrative director of the government, and they distribute it on a ration-book basis, and the people that belong to a favorite party—if you know what I mean—the people who embrace a certain ideological line, have far better ration cards than the rest of the people in the country. I think the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. MUNDT] will bear me out, because he had a chance to examine into that matter. In consequence the people who are following that particular line of political philosophy are enjoying an advantage out of the food and the fiber and the clothing and the textiles and the machinery that is purchased with funds that are appropriated out of the Treasury of the United States of America.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman five additional minutes.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Does the gentleman know if any of the UNRRA food is given away to starving people who have no money?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I presume it is. I presume some of this food is given away. At least, that has been my impression.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Is it not generally sold by the Government to whom it is given?

Mr. DIRKSEN. As a general thing, yes. But, I expect there are a great many instances where payment would not be made, so I think it is quite within propriety and also within the contemplation of the appropriations which we made that the hungry and destitute people be fed.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I should like to have the gentleman's comment on this. I learned this morning that the Department of Agriculture is having 100,000,000 pounds of canned pork set aside to go to Russia, and that is being set aside by the packers who can this meat. They are now waiting for this appropriation so that they can pay for that.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am afraid if there is no more time left except 5 minutes that the answer might take too long. I have no specific comment at the moment, because I want to get back to this matter which I first mentioned.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Does it not seem rather strange that we are giving 100,000,000 pounds of canned meat to Russia?

Mr. DIRKSEN. It does seem strange, manifestly.

Let me get back to this bill. I want to discuss a lot of things in connection with this bill. I could speak on it all afternoon. I want to get back to this free-press matter.

I noticed in the papers yesterday that Earl Browder arrived from Russia. He had gone over for a visit with Marshal Stalin. They would not let him land in Britain, so he made what could be called a technical landing. He did and yet did not make a landing because he was turned over to the custody of the pilot who was flying the plane. So good old Earl arrived back in New York, and how glad he was to get the pavement of Broadway under his feet again.

I presume you are advised as to what he did over there. He is going to take charge of the sale and distribution of Soviet publications in the United States. The first one he is going to plug, of course, is The Problems of Leninism, which has recently been revised and approved by Stalin. You should read it. You do not have to kid yourself as to what is going to happen in this world from here on out. Marshal Stalin does not pull any punches. He simply says that a capitalistic philosophy and the Communist philosophy cannot coexist in the same world. One must go. There is no doubt about that, is there? That is why the NKVD can come over here, and that is why they can shadow a man like Kravchenko, a Russian engineer, who escaped from them right down here on Sixteenth Street in Washington, and who has set forth in naked detail the whole brutal story in that great adventurous volume, I Chose Freedom. It ought to be "must" reading for every adult American citizen.

So Mr. Browder can fill us with a lot of Soviet literature, yet we can get no people over there to enjoy the freedom of the press, and without the restrictions of censorship tell the generous 135,000,000 Americans how our money is being spent.

Do not forget that we put up 72 cents out of every dollar of this whole appropriation. We put up $1,900,000,000 out of $2,700,000,000. That is about 72 percent. For the administrative funds to run the show, 72 cents out of every dollar comes out of the pockets of the American taxpayers. In the face of that kind of generosity, is it asking too much to let the AP and UP and INS and the New York Times and the Herald Tribune and anybody else that wants to go over there and send back a story of what was purchased, how it was delivered, whom it got to, and whether it finally alleviated and mitigated that destitution that the American people had in mind and heart and soul when they said to us that perhaps we ought to approve all of the money that has been requested?

So when we read the bill for amendment, in the very first portion of the bill I want to offer this amendment. I will tell why. It does not make any difference if another body takes it out, I want to be on record for what I regard as a great traditional American concept, that when our money goes abroad we want somebody there to take a look, then give us a report. That is not only good Americanism but that is good business.

I regret exceedingly there is no more time, there is so much to talk about.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he desires to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SIKES].

THE UNRRA APPROPRIATION

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Chairman, UNRRA is today operating in high gear. It is delivering foodstuffs, seed, fertilizer, medicine, industrial rehabilitation equipment, and other supplies to millions of war victims who must have this assistance if they are ever to get back on their own feet again. UNRRA helps primarily those liberated countries which are not able to pay for their own relief and rehabilitation imports, because they had the geographical misfortune to have to suffer the full physical impact of the common enemy. Today, UNRRA is providing general relief to Albania, Austria, the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, China, Czechoslovakia, the Dodecanese Islands, Greece, Italy, Poland, the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, and Yugoslavia. UNRRA is also providing emergency or special assistance to Finland, Hungary, the Philippines, Ethiopia, and San Marino, while its personnel are busy assisting the military in Germany and Austria in connection with displaced persons operations.

Some of these countries being helped by UNRRA ask for only limited kinds of help. For example, the Byelorussian and Ukrainian Republics are not getting any wheat or other bread grains from UNRRA, but they have requested supplies of fats and oils because most of their livestock was destroyed by the Nazis, and their people are desperately in need of these items. But other countries—like China, Greece, and Italy—must have large amounts of wheat and other food, and medicine, and other relief supplies if vast numbers of helpless men, women, and children are to survive the months ahead. We have the expert and authoritative report of Mr. Herbert Hoover himself that hundreds of millions of people are on the border line of starvation. UNRRA is not responsible for taking care of the food needs of all these people, but only of the people of those countries which I enumerated a moment ago.

But that work is indispensable at this critical time, and the job must go forward. There can be little doubt now that UNRRA is in high gear; its international machinery is functioning effectively; it has now managed to get many efficient administrators who were formerly frozen to war or military jobs; it is delivering the goods.

President Truman stated the other day in his letter of transmittal accompanying the seventh report to Congress on operations of UNRRA:

> Through March 31, 1946, UNRRA shipped 8,251,736 gross long tons of relief supplies valued at $1,140,419,000. Every American can take pride in the fact that our share in this achievement was 5,917,785 tons valued at $750,563,000, which is 71.7 percent of the tonnage and 65.8 percent of the value of all UNRRA shipments.

I have learned that UNRRA has now delivered more than 11,500,000 tons of supplies—the largest relief undertaking in history. I have little doubt that of this mammoth tonnage, the American contribution continues to represent as high a percentage and proportionate value as those mentioned by President Truman.

What I have said so far proves two facts: one, that the work of UNRRA is indispensable to world recovery, and must go ahead until the job is done; and, secondly, that the support of the United States is in turn indispensable to the work of UNRRA.

I think it only fair to point out, however, that we as individual Americans have not been asked to pay any more proportionately than the taxpayers of many other member countries of UNRRA—such as Australia, Canada, Great Britain, the Dominican Republic, and so on. President Truman now calls upon us to appropriate the rest of the second contribution which has been authorized. In other words, we are now asked to contribute $465,000,000 in order to pay up our second contribution in full—just as Great Britain, Canada, and other countries have already paid up their second full contributions.

With those additional funds quickly appropriated, UNRRA will not find itself in the unhappy position of last December, when, for lack of early enough action by Congress in appropriating funds for which this Government had obligated itself, the international relief organization had to make drastic cancellations of much-needed medical supplies so as to scrape up enough money to keep food moving overseas. If we act with foresight today, we can avoid a repetition of a situation which caused unnecessary suffering abroad among people who were looking to us for aid.

You and I know that the American people are not going to stand by and allow innocent men, women, and children to starve. You and I also know that the food needs of the postwar world are without precedent, and that UNRRA has been keeping millions of people alive in a dozen countries. To see these war victims through the next critical months, and to permit UNRRA to terminate its operations as scheduled, we must appropriate $465,000,000 which represents the balance outstanding on the American contribution.

Let us be under no illusions. This action on our part is not only humanitarian and a moral obligation; it is a matter of basic self-interest. There is overwhelming evidence available at hand here in Washington to prove that in every country where UNRRA is today operating, the recipients of its help know that most of its supplies come from the United States, and they are profoundly grateful. In fact, in the Ukrainian and the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republics, newspaper reports and the UNRRA mission personnel have continually reported home that the people of those areas are largely under the impression that all of UNRRA's aid is coming from the United States. At any rate, when almost every can on the store shelf is clearly labeled with the name of its country of origin, it is impossible for the people in UNRRA-helped countries not to know how generous has been the contribution of the American people.

This is the best kind of publicity in the world for us at this time of strained international relations. The people of Europe are obsessed with fears of a possible third world war. In such a war, they would be virtually obliterated. They know this, and they are praying that the creaking machinery of international cooperation will not grind to a standstill. But for three decades, these people have heard high-sounding phrases about peace, and have had to endure two wars. Today, the average European is putting little faith in charters, or promises of peace, or meetings between governmental officials. There is only one bit of tangible evidence which he has that international cooperation is still a reality, and not just a hypocritical phrase.

And that tangible evidence is UNRRA. Every day UNRRA cargoes are unloading in a dozen European ports. Night and day the freight cars carry their life-saving shipments from city to city. And every day the housewives in thousands of communities stand in queue to receive the rations which alone can keep their children from hunger and sickness. So long as these cans of food are handed across the store counter, so long as the farmer in Greece or Italy or elsewhere gets some seed and fertilizer, and perhaps a draft animal, with which he can make his scorched earth produce again, and so long as UNRRA doctors and nurses work day and night in improvised hospitals—then the peoples of war-torn Europe have proof that international cooperation is a living reality.

Take away that assistance, and not only have you taken away from the people of Europe those tangible supplies which all too often mean the difference between life and death, but you have also robbed them of their last hope that the nations of the world can work intelligently and decently together at common tasks.

We have a tremendous responsibility to fulfill in Congress. Let us appropriate the sum for which we have obligated ourselves, and let us do it swiftly and in a true spirit of friendship and helpfulness. In that course of action lies peace, and security for the world and ourselves.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CLEVENGER].

WHY IS THERE NO BEEF IN THE MARKET PLACES?

Mr. CLEVENGER. Mr. Chairman, the American people should begin to realize that except during the World War I period, the United States has depended partially upon beef of other lands for domestic use, this in spite of the fact that this Nation is the greatest livestock-producing country in the whole world.

Before 1913 our country was a large beef-exporting nation, but the Underwood Tariff Act levied such a low duty on beef that from then on our domestic production was too small to furnish enough beef for domestic consumption.

The following table from the United States Tariff Commission indicates the production and apparent consumption of beef and veal from 1931 to 1944:

[Millions of pounds]

	Production [1]	Apparent consumption [2]	Net exports or net imports [3]
1931	6,834	6,878	−44
1932	6,613	6,669	−56
1933	7,332	7,422	−90
1934	9,489	9,582	−93
1935	7,629	7,913	−284
1936	8,435	8,764	−329
1937	7,908	8,266	−358
1938	7,903	8,206	−303
1939	8,004	8,418	−414
1940	8,162	8,481	−319
1941	9,124	9,497	−373
1942	9,972	10,059	−87
1943	9,685	9,493	192

[1] Estimated production, in dressed carcass weight, from total United States slaughter, plus the estimated dressed weight of domestic exports of live cattle.

[2] Apparent consumption calculated from production plus imports minus exports.

[3] Difference between actual reported exports and imports (minus sign indicates excess of imports) of live cattle and calves, and of beef and veal in all forms.

Nineteen hundred and forty-three was the first year in 22 years that American beef had all the American market. Is it any wonder that Mrs. Housewife cannot find any beef in the markets? Is it any wonder that it is difficult to find beef for export? After depending upon food imports for 20 years, our country cannot become a food-export Nation over night.

In 1900, there were approximately 75,000,000 people in the United States, and we produced 6,500,000,000 pounds of beef, or over 86 pounds per capita; in 1910 our population was 91,000,000, and we produced 7,300,000,000 pounds of beef, or 80 pounds per capita; in 1920 there was a population of 105,000,000 people in the United States and 7,100,000,000 pounds of beef was produced, or 67 pounds per capita; in 1930 our population was 123,000,000 people, and we produced 6,700,000,000 pounds of beef, or 56 pounds per capita; and in 1940 we had a population of 131,000,000 people and we produced 8,100,000,000 pounds of beef, or 61 pounds per capita; and in 1943 with an estimated population of 135,000,000 people in the United States there was a per capita production of 70 pounds.

When we realize that our population may go upward to 140,000,000, we can readily see what our present-day beef situation is.

The time has come to ask whether or not food is a critical material. The time has come to decide whether or not food is a strategic material. Before our American people are provided the necessary foods of life, and before any considerable amount of food can or will be furnished for world needs, someone had better be obtaining some food facts.

The present administration has carried on a program of scarcity. They shiver at an apparent "enough" and they cannot face an abundance. An abundance would keep the bureaucrats off the farmers' necks and the bureaucrats would lose their jobs.

The bread picture is the same. Bread shortages and bread lines are the result of New Deal bungling. In 3 of the 7 New Deal prewar years, there was twice as much wheat imported as exported, and now they are trying to find an enormous surplus for shipment to other countries. Overseas shipments are made from the normal stock piles of our country, and the per capita amount of 1945 wheat on hand now is less than three-fourths bushel. The UNRRA jumped its wheat requirements 800 percent in the first quarter of 1945—over their previous quarter estimate.

Mr. Chairman, if you perpetuate the OPA, the scarcity program, and a managed economy, Americans will approach ever nearer the Asiatic diet, and this at unbearable cost. Less hogs and poultry, less dairy cows, less feeder cattle can mean only less food at home and abroad. This is aggravated by the loss of production in farm machinery, that cripples farm production. These strikes should cease. Surely Jefferson was right when he said: "If we look to Washington as to when to plant, and when to reap, we shall soon want bread."

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PITTENGER].

REORGANIZATION PLANS 1, 2, 3

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Chairman, I want to make an announcement before I address myself to the merits of the bill.

We were led to believe that certain highly privileged resolutions would come before the House for consideration today, either correctly or incorrectly. For reasons over which I have no control, they have not been reached. I refer to House Concurrent Resolution 151, which disapproves Reorganization Plan No. 2 of the administration; House Concurrent Resolution 154, which disapproves Reorganization Plan No. 3 of the administration, and House Concurrent Resolution 155, which disapproves Reorganization Plan No. 1 of the administration.

I wish to say to the membership of the House and to everybody else interested that those resolutions are highly privileged, and as the author of those resolutions I expect to exercise the privilege that goes with the resolutions under the rules of the House. I do not intend to yield for any other order of business unless circumstances over which I have no control make that necessary. At 11 o'clock tomorrow, when this body meets, we expect to call up those resolutions and to exercise the rights and privileges we have under the rules of the House, because unless the reorganization plans are disapproved within 60 days by both branches of the Congress, then they become law. I do not intend to have that happen without a vote by both bodies of Congress, if possible.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PITTENGER. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. I want to say to the gentleman that he is absolutely within his rights. It is a matter of high privilege. The gentleman and others on the committee have cooperated with me in every way possible. Under no circumstances have I the least thought in mind critical of the gentleman's observation and his intentions.

Mr. PITTENGER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. McCORMACK. As far as I am concerned, I made an agreement with the gentleman and others interested, and, as far as I am able, the agreement shall be kept, and I hope the gentleman will help me keep that agreement.

Mr. PITTENGER. I will give you 101-percent cooperation.

PENDING BILL IS OBJECTIONABLE

Mr. Chairman, if I needed any argument to convince me to vote against this appropriation bill and send it back to the committee for further study and let them bring in some emergency legislation for these departments which need funds, that argument was furnished by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN], the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WIGGLESWORTH], and others. I think this appropriation bill is a monstrosity. I think the taxpayers of America are entitled to have further consideration of these items which one of the members of the Appropriations Committee told me came in here at the request and recommendation of who do you suppose? The Bureau of the Budget. Since when did one agency of this Government become either indispensable or infallible? I believe that these items, except those that are necessary to carry on the affairs of Government, need more study. Some of them ought to be cut down; some of them ought to be thrown out of the window. Take this item that has to do with lend-lease. That was a wartime expedient. No Member on this floor can justify spending the funds for purposes for which that legislation was not enacted.

There is a great deal more I could say, Mr. Chairman. As long as my time has not yet expired, I want to pay my respects to UNRRA. I think if UNRRA ever had any justification—and I do not concede that it did, although all of us supported it for humanitarian reasons—I think that agency ought to be thrown out of the window, and, as some of us have indicated in days gone by, this country ought to carry on its own relief work in foreign countries through the agency of our churches, through the agency of the Red Cross, the Salvation Army, and with the exercise of some common sense by those who represent the American people.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. MUNDT].

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed out of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There was no objection.

GOVERNMENT'S LACK-WIFDOM WHEAT POLICIES CONTRIBUTE TO BREAD SHORTAGE

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Chairman, Thomas Jefferson once said with deadly prophetic accuracy, "Were we directed from Washington when to sow and when to reap, we should soon want bread."

It now appears, sir, that we are witnessing the fulfillment of Jefferson's dire prediction. By its policy of telling American farmers when they can sell their wheat, where they can sell it, to whom they must distribute it, how much they can receive for it, and how long they can store it, the Truman administration has so badly confused the wheat situation that it is small wonder the country's restaurants and housewives are without bread and that America is falling short of its food commitments to the rest of the world.

Mr. Chairman, Government meddling appears to be an intoxicating pastime. Not content with directing our farmers what to do with their wheat, the White House oligarchy has been using its wartime authority to jump the price of wheat around so fast and so often that a jitterbug on a hot stove would find it impossible to keep up with the confusion. Not long ago three quick-change, now-you-see-it-and-now-you-do-not-see-it price peggings were established by the Government with solemn implications that "this is now the top price—sell your wheat at once." Unfortunately, the faster the farmers responded to the patriotic appeal to sell their wheat so the world could eat, and the quicker they sold it, the more they lost. Quite naturally, the farmers have now lost all confidence in governmental promises and price fixing.

The newest bright idea of the bureaucrats who carry out the White House policies is embodied in War Food Order No. 140, amendment 9. They now require that when a farmer elects to put his grain in commercial storage he must sell 50 percent of it at the price he can get on the day he hauls it to town. Twenty-five percent of the wheat he is forced to sell is distributed in the United States and 25 percent is sold abroad; but if wheat prices move up in the next few months, the farmer loses 100 percent of the price increase.

The bright young man in the big New Deal who thought that one up and sold the men from Missouri on the idea that this would stimulate the sale and distribution of wheat must be a fugitive from the "association of writers of seed catalogs," since seed-catalog writers are about the greatest optimists in circulation. Obviously, such bureaucratic balderdash will decrease rather than increase the flow of wheat to market.

Mr. Chairman, I am one of those who believes that it is time this administration starts shooting square with the Nation's farmers. Until it regains the confidence of the farmers in its good word and its good intentions, our food shortage is very understandably going to become worse. As a start back to the road of square dealing with the food producers of America, I suggest the following steps:

First. The Government should correct the injustice suffered by American farmers who responded to its plea to sell their wheat prior to May 14, 1946, at the substantially lower price then established as the ceiling price.

Second. War Food Order No. 140 should now be repealed insofar as it requires the forced marketing of wheat.

Third. Wheat growers should be urged to market their wheat immediately through mills, elevators, and the normal channels of trade.

Fourth. Market or ceiling prices should be paid at the time of delivery with a definite guaranty that farmers complying with the sell-now request will be given the full benefits of any price advance in wheat prices between now and July 1, 1947. This guaranty should be in writing in the form of a reimbursable certificate so that the farmers cannot be duped again.

Mr. Chairman, along with wheat farmers, the corn farmers and many other food producers in this Republic have suffered from the dogmatic and ill-considered welter of edicts and mandates which the executive department has directed against our farmers.

Mr. Chairman, America's farmers are not villians and rogues. All they ask is a square deal and they will do their full part in seeing that the world gets back where it can again eat three square meals a day.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. VURSELL].

Mr. VURSELL. Mr. Chairman, today there is before us the last big appropriation of the Seventy-ninth Congress. Throughout the past 2 years I have stood before the microphone in this House and urged economy. I find myself here today again on the same mission.

Last week, in a determined fight led by the minority Members, with the assistance of a few of the Democratic Members, we killed a bill saving the taxpayers $130,000,000. We will have an opportunity within a few minutes now to save the taxpayers another $100,000,000.

Congressman WIGGLESWORTH, of Massachusetts, will offer an amendment to reduce the amount of $445,000,000, written into this bill, by striking out $100,000,000, wanted by the War Assets Administration to pay for the cost of liquidating surplus property.

The American people will be amazed when they learn that there has been such a tremendous waste in the legislation of surplus property that the net return to the Treasury for the sale of over $100,000,000,000 worth of surplus property will be less than 18 cents on the dollar.

This organization is asking for more money than they had last year. They want to add an additional 14,000 high salaried employees to the 28,000 they now have.

When we come to vote on this amendment, I hope enough of the members representing the majority party and this administration will join with us of the minority in our effort to reduce the amount by $100,000,000. When the time comes to vote on this amendment think of the men and women you represent back home in your districts who have to pay the bill for all this waste and extravagance.

Let us join together on both sides of the aisle and save this $100,000,000 in the interest of the taxpayers we represent.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time.

The CHAIRMAN. If there are no other requests for time, the Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1946, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, to provide appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, namely:

Mr. LESINSKI. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order a quorum is not present.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Sixty Members are present, not a quorum.

The Clerk will call the roll.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. COOLEY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 6385) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, to provide appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, and finding itself without a quorum he had directed the roll to be called, when 313 Members responded to their names, a quorum, and he submitted herewith the names of the absentees to be spread upon the journal.

The SPEAKER. The Committee will resume its sitting.

The Committee resumed its sitting.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration: For an additional amount to enable the President to carry out the provisions of the act of March 28, 1944 (Public Law 267), as amended, to be consolidated with the appropriations for the same purpose in the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration Participation Appropriation Act, 1945, the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration Participation Act, 1946, and the First Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1946, $465,000,000, to remain available until June 30, 1947: Provided, That said consolidated funds may be expended without regard to the limitations in the proviso clause of the first paragraph of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration Participation Act, 1946.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TABER: Page 4, line 14, after the colon, strike out all of the balance of line 14 and all of lines 15 to 18, inclusive.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I have offered this amendment so that the law may be left the way it was in the Extension Act brought in here by the Committee on Appropriations last winter which provided a limitation that none of the rehabilitation supplies procured out of the funds herein appropriated shall be shipped to any country except in the Far East after December 31, 1946, and in the case of any country in the Far East after March 31, 1947.

The provision that is carried in the present appropriation bill would wipe out this proviso which, as I remember it, was offered by the gentleman from New York, [Mr. BLOOM] chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. On page 248 of the hearings, Colonel Wood, who represented the State Department before us on UNRRA, stated:

Yes. That leaves us a carry-over for the January to March period in this table which is based on finishing by the end of the year except as to China of about $20,000,000.

Mr. Chairman, they have laid this thing out on the basis of getting through according to the law. Now, why should we wipe out that proviso which protects this item and provides that it shall terminate on the 31st of December 1946, as to other countries and in the Far East on March 31?

Mr. Chairman, I hope my amendment will be adopted and that this proviso repealing the limitation in the law will prevail, so that UNRRA will be ended according to the way they have the funds set up and according to Colonel Wood.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendment close in 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. Chairman, when the facts are understood clearly as to what the amendment is designed to do there should be no doubt as to what action the committee should take. There was a limitation in Public Law 259, for which the proviso is designed to control, as follows:

Provided, That no relief or rehabilitation supplies procured out of funds heretofore or herein appropriated shall be shipped to any country except in the Far East after December 31, 1946, and in the case of any country in the Far East after March 31, 1947.

Everybody was perfectly satisfied with that proviso in the law, but due to shortages and due to strikes UNRRA is not able to get those things shipped within that limitation of time. They were perfectly willing to have the limitation on there, but having bought the material with this money the only way they can get it all over there to the foreign countries is to remove the limitation of time. We have bought the material. It is here and paid for; that is, most all of it. The entire amount will be expended soon.

I fail to see the logic of not giving them time enough to ship it. If the gentleman from New York had offered an amendment such as we have here that the time be extended 90 days, I can see why that would possibly be justified. We all want to end UNRRA. We want to close it up. But where you have bought the goods, and you cannot make delivery to the points where you want it delivered, the only way you can get the goods there is to remove this proviso, and therefore, in order to carry out the proper delivery of these goods it is necessary to eliminate the proviso. All there is in the bill is an extension of time for getting this material over there, and the gentleman moves to strike that out, so there cannot be any extension of time. I do not believe that is sound or what the House wants to do.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'NEAL. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. TABER. If we do not adopt this amendment there will be no limitation on it and it can last forever; that is the picture.

Mr. O'NEAL. If the gentleman will permit a suggestion, if he would offer an amendment along this line I think it would meet the situation so the goods we have bought could get there. I would suggest an amendment of this character: "The dates named in the proviso clause of the first paragraph of UNRRA administration, 1946, are each hereby extended for 90 days."

That would give time enough for these goods that are bought to get there, and it would extend the time 90 days beyond what they are now permitted to use.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'NEAL. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. As I understand the present law, it provides that no goods shall be shipped to any country except the Far East after December 31, 1946, and in the case of any country in the Far East after March 31, 1947. That is exactly the testimony that Director LaGuardia gave our committee, as I recall it, of what he proposed to do.

Mr. O'NEAL. If the gentleman will turn to page 233 he will find that that is not exactly the testimony. He stated that it did not give them sufficient time to deliver the goods that are already bought that we want to get there.

I trust the amendment will not be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. CANNON of Missouri) there were—ayes 109, noes 112.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed as tellers Mr. CANNON of Missouri and Mr. TABER.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 125, noes 105.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. O'NEAL: On page 4, line 14, after "1947", insert "Provided, That the dates named in the proviso clause of the first paragraph of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration Participation Act, 1946, are each hereby extended for 90 days."

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment on the ground that it is legislation on an appropriation bill not authorized by existing law.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, I should like to be heard on the point of order.

The gentleman makes the point of order that it is legislation on an appropriation bill. The amendment offered applies directly to the legislation referred to in the same paragraph, the Rehabilitation Administration Participation Act, 1946. The provisions of that act are referred to in this paragraph, and the amendment affects one of the parts of the Participation Act. It seems clear to me, since it touches on the very matter referred to in the paragraph, that it is certainly not legislation which is not in conformity with the rest of the paragraph.

Mr. TABER. The law now provides a period within which certain things may be done. This changes the law so as to make that period 90 days longer. There is nothing in the bill at the present time to which this amendment is germane.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. COOLEY). The Chair is ready to rule. In the opinion of the Chair, the amendment is clearly legislation on an appropriation bill. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DIRKSEN: On page 4, at the end of line 18, add the following proviso:

"Provided, That none of the funds herein appropriated shall be used for the acquisition, transportation, delivery or distribution of any supplies, commodities, or equipment to or for any recipient country which fails or refuses to permit the properly accredited representatives of the American press to enter, observe, and report without censorship on the distribution and utilization of relief and rehabilitation supplies and services furnished to such countries."

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, one day last week a very considerable number of interesting documents reached my desk, as it must have yours. The first one was styled The American Soviet Reporter, published in New York. That particular issue was an analysis of an article which appeared in Life magazine by John Foster Dulles. I am glad that Reporter came to my desk because I like to have that information.

In the same mail there appeared upon my desk a series of speeches from the Yugoslavia Ministry of Information in Washington, D. C., carrying the speeches of the Prime Minister, extolling the virtues of OSNA, which is the Yugoslav equivalent of NKVD. I was glad to have it.

In the same mail came brochures with reference to the eastern Ukraine and the Balkans, all of which evidences what we mean when we talk about freedom of the press.

Accredited to the Press Gallery above you is what is known as the Telegraph Agency of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, of which Mr. Lawrence Todd, a really fine newspaperman, a man of character, is in charge. Some of his associates are S. S. Krafsur, Olive Chuba, and Boris N. Kaigler.

They sit in our Press Gallery. We do not mind that. We want them to be there to tell all the world what we are doing here. Free exchange of information is one of the real safeguards of freedom.

Accredited to that Press Gallery is Reuters, which can send messages, speeches, and explanations into every corner of the world. That is what we mean by "freedom of the press."

Now, it occurs to me that there ought to be reciprocity about this press freedom. It should not be necessary, as befell the New York Times, as related by Mark Ethridge, that it took them nearly 1 year to qualify their second man in Russia. Strange proceeding.

I contend that if the American people have been generous to a fault in providing nearly $1,900,000,000 of funds to relieve distress and destitution elsewhere in the world, when the American people have charged us as the custodians of the Treasury to appropriate another $465,000,000, certainly we are entitled to ask free entry and observation for every newspaper man who wants to go abroad for the purpose of informing our people, whose taxes made this money possible, how such food, supplies, equipment, and machinery have been distributed abroad. That is all this amendment provides. It simply provides that none of the funds shall be used for any recipient country unless they permit the entry of our American accredited newspaper correspondents for the purpose only of reporting upon the distribution of relief and rehabilitation supplies that are purchased out of these funds.

Is that asking too much? There is something important involved here. It is a principle. It does not make any difference to me whether a single newspaper man goes abroad. That does not count, but the time has come for this country, in an hour when difficulty haunts us over on the far horizon, to stand up and speak our piece. The time has come to quit appeasing. The time has come to demand a little reciprocal treatment in this world. Otherwise, I shall despair here and now of ever achieving durable peace and the restoration of order everywhere in the world. So the time is at hand when appeasement must stop. We should insist on reciprocity, and this is one way to do it. This is to stand up for the principle of freedom for our people so that they can report upon goods that are purchased out of the generosity of the American people. That is the whole story and I sincerely hope that in this rather uncertain hour that the Congress can give a good account of itself and insist that freedom of the press be upheld everywhere.

It was only last week that at the instance of the Russian authorities the Christian Science Monitor's representative was taken out of Rumania. General Hodges had his problems over in Korea and had to forbid Russian newspapermen from coming into the American zone because our newspapermen were not permitted in the Russian zone.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Illinois may proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. We are squarely up against that proposition at the present time, and in my judgment this matter of freedom of the press is probably one of the most important principles and one of the most important issues that will ever confront this Congress and this country So I appeal to you today that we go through on this matter and assert the freedom of the press to all the world.

When this matter was before us in November last when we were dealing with an extension of UNRRA at that time obviously it was in the realm of speculation. We did not have all the information and all the data that we needed in order to make a good case, notwithstanding the fact that the State Department seemed to be willing to go along with a modified amendment. But today we have the information, today we know, today we know to what extent the freedom to report on the distribution of relief and rehabilitation has taken place in many sections of the world.

On every hand it has been denied when the assertion was made that food was being used as a political weapon, yet it was reported only last week from China that food was being used as a political weapon over there, and yet we have not gotten the facts. It has been reported on occasion by the grapevine and otherwise that food was being used as a political weapon in Yugoslavia. I asked the Director General when he was before the committee and he said everything was going along very nicely. The trouble is we do not get the facts. The Deputy Director of one of those nations was in my office last Friday morning and told me that when goods arrive at certain countries they are distributed on ration cards to the people by the authorities of that country. The people who hold the cards, who get the extraordinary benefits and decided advantages, are those who are affiliated with a certain political party and who embrace a certain political ideology. If that is not the political use of food that has been paid for by the American people then my name is not EVERETT DIRKSEN. There is only one way to stop it if this is going to be a continuing program, and if sometime in the future American funds beyond the limits that have already been established in UNRRA legislation are to be used for the relief of the destitute people everywhere, and that way is to let the sunlight of publicity shine in.

I am not so naive as to believe that this will be the end of our relief activities, notwithstanding the fact that we wrote into the law that UNRRA would terminate sometime next March when we got to the end of the authority for the relief of China. The Director General said it would probably be turned over to the Social and Economic Council of the United Nations. Then, of course, there is every possibility that additional funds will be requested from the American people until the relief job has been fully accomplished. If that is going to be the case then I want to see something a little tangible for the generosity of our own people, and that is a full and unvarnished and uncensored and unadulterated report of the way it is being used.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. GAVIN. I am inclined to believe that the gentleman has changed his attitude and position from that which he held when UNRRA was before the House some time ago. The gentleman was of the opinion, was he not, that even though the same conditions prevailed then as prevail now we should still go along with it?

Mr. DIRKSEN. The gentleman from Illinois has never changed his position on this matter. While he found much fault and while reports from the field have sustained every criticism he made in the well of this House, he still believes there is before us the discharge of a great humanitarian duty. That does not mean we should not be realistic; that does not mean we should permit Tito to run off with American food and use it for some political purpose or let anybody else in the world who runs a closed corporation over there plays ducks and drakes with hundreds of millions of dollars of the American taxpayers' money that is used to buy food, machinery, and equipment to be sent over there. That is what is involved.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Is it not true that often the supplies we send over to other countries are accredited to some other ally rather than to us, which makes trouble for us? I think if the press were in there, and I mean the American press, the conditions would be changed very materially.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That has been officially denied, of course, but there has been a good deal of evidence on that point that we were not getting the credit.

I beseech for this the utmost of grace because I think it is important and involves a high principle in an anxious hour of the world's history.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the pending paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 50 minutes, the last 10 minutes to be reserved to the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, as the gentleman from Missouri well knows, I am the author of the original amendment on this particular subject and, if possible, I would like to have 10 minutes.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 55 minutes, including 10 minutes for the gentleman from Ohio [Mr BROWN], the last 10 minutes to be reserved to the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. GALLAGHER].

Mr. GALLAGHER. Mr. Chairman, I used to be in the newspaper business. I know many newspapermen and I have been interviewed. I want to say that you cannot always depend upon them. You send them into a foreign country and they will just write about UNRRA, they will write about the political conditions in that country and you cannot stop it.

I believe men should be appointed by the American Government you can depend on to do this work. If you will remember there was one man when we were at war who had a release ready and he was discharged and sent home.

I want to say that newspapermen have to be watched.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HERTER].

Mr. HERTER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this amendment. Since a similar question was debated before this House a number of months ago and a compromise was finally reached whereby the President of the United States was requested to use his good offices in order to secure the passage of American newspapermen into countries where UNRRA was operating so that they might be able to report freely to us on what they found in connection with those operations, a number of things have happened, and I think they have a direct bearing on this amendment and on the position that we ought to take in connection with it as it appears in the limited form in which it has been offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

In the first place, the refusal which came to the President's request to allow American newspapermen to report without censorship from White Russia and from the Ukraine did not come from either of those two countries. The answer came from the Soviet Embassy here in Washington, which said that in view of the fact that those two republics were not carrying out their own independent foreign missions it, the central government, was speaking for them, and the regulations that applied in Russia as a whole must apply in those two republics. In other words, the hoax which has fooled a good many people, that began at San Francisco when Russia was given three votes in the United Nations Council, of setting up these two sections of Russia as independent, autonomous republics, is completely blasted by the fact that they could not speak for themselves and that the Russian Government is speaking for them in this particular matter. That is one thing that has happened.

Another thing has happened. Since we last debated this matter, Poland came to the United States for a loan. Negotiations in regard to that loan were, I am informed, suspended for the reason that Poland refused to reveal the text of its secret trade agreements with its neighbors. When those negotiations began to bog down the Soviet Government offered to make a loan to Poland in place of the United States and said that it was not necessary for Poland to continue negotiations with us; that loan to be in the form of an open line of credit given to Poland to allow Poland to buy rehabilitation and reconstruction machinery throughout the world. Once again we have an example of a nation through claiming that it could not pay for the relief of its component parts offering another nation credits with which to buy very much the same type of things which we are now being obliged to give freely as a matter of relief to these two independent Republics, so-called.

There is one other thing. The amendment that has just been offered is narrower in scope than the amendment previously debated here. It is a very simple amendment which merely required that American press representatives be allowed to go into these various countries that are receiving UNRRA relief and report without censorship.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. This amendment does not ask. It just simply literally provides that no funds shall be expended unless these representatives of the American press are permitted to enter.

Mr. HERTER. The gentleman is quite correct. It is a limitation on the appropriation. But let us examine that limitation on the appropriation a moment as far as the practical effects are concerned. In the last 2 months American press representatives have been allowed to go to Minsk in White Russia and to Kiev in the Ukraine. They went in under the regular procedure that is provided for American press men when they go within the territory of Russia anywhere. It so happens that the dispatches which they sent out with respect to UNRRA activities were not censored. That may or may not be repeated, but at least the precedent was then set of allowing them to send out dispatches without censorship. In other words, I cannot see that there can be any serious objection and certainly no one can say that hungry people are going to starve if this amendment is adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BARDEN].

Mr. BARDEN. Mr. Chairman, I do not propose to inflict myself upon you for the full 5 minutes, but I would like in a minute or two to say that I cannot understand for the life of me how any man in this House can oppose this amendment. Here we are taking the funds of the American people and sending them abroad, and in the next breath they say to us, "We refuse to give you any information whatever as to what goes with it or what use is being made of it or who is getting the benefit of it."

I have had some reports from the type of gentlemen that Members have just referred to, and they have disturbed me greatly. I sat in my office a few days ago and talked to an old college mate of mine who has been over there in charge of one of the areas. He told me things that almost made me sick. At the conclusion of that conference I felt as though we had simply been saps in the fullest sense of the word.

There is nothing in this amendment that would discriminate against anyone. There is nothing in it unfair. There is nothing in it that would cause anyone to go hungry. There is nothing in it that should be objectionable to any well-intentioned fair-minded person. The amendment simply says that we would like to have the privilege of knowing what happens to our own money. That I do not regard as being anything but a very sincere responsibility that we have. We owe the people that. We are not justified in taking their money on any other basis.

As far as I am concerned, I propose to vote for the amendment. I am opposed to any further appeasement. I will not duck my head and shy around every time Mr. Joe Stalin or Mr. Tito or anybody else says, "Be careful, son, you might step on my toes." We have been doing that right consistently.

Mr. CHELF. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARDEN. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. CHELF. I just want to say to the gentleman's remarks, Amen.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARDEN. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. Permit me to observe that it is to be regretted that a condition exists in this world that makes this kind of an amendment necessary.

Mr. BARDEN. May I say to the gentleman, it is to be regretted that it is even necessary for this amendment to be debated on the floor of this House. I have nothing further to say.

Mr. SAVAGE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARDEN. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. SAVAGE. I am concerned about the fact that the money in UNRRA is not all American money. Can we bind every other country in making this restriction on the American appropriation?

Mr. BARDEN. I do not think the gentleman is as much concerned about that as he is concerned about the principle involved in this thing, which is the same principle that was involved in the matter before the House on yesterday. I should like to say this to the gentleman. As far as I am concerned, from here on out I do not propose to pull my punches where any inference of this type is made. If there is one red penny of American money involved, the principle of honest spending and full public accounting is there. I am opposed to even just a little bit of stealing on this appropriation.

Mr. SAVAGE. We are trying to tell a country, "We are going to feed hungry people, provided you do what America says."

Mr. BARDEN. No.

Mr. SAVAGE. America is only one part of this thing.

Mr. BARDEN. No. This is what we are saying to them, let me remind the gentleman. We are just saying, "Here is tax money we have taken from our people. You may use it if you use it for the purposes and in the manner for which it was appropriated. If you do not propose to let us know what happens to it, then you do not have to use it; just let it alone."

That is all.

Mr. SAVAGE. But there are 44 nations in UNRRA, and this is a unilateral action.

Mr. BARDEN. I want to know why the gentleman does not want this.

Mr. CHELF. There may be 44 nations, but 1 nation, the United States, puts up 72 percent of the entire amount.

Mr. BARDEN. Yes; and I think more of this one Nation than I do of the other 43. That is my position.

Mr. CHELF. Amen.

Mr. SAVAGE. We are able to put up 72 percent, because it is determined on an equal basis of contribution according to national income. We are as able to put up the 72 percent as all the rest of the nations are able to put up the 28 percent.

Mr. BARDEN. No; the gentleman wants to continue the policy of appeasement toward some of these nations, and he would seek to do things that the people of America will not stand for.

Mr. SAVAGE. Either we are going to feed the people or we are not. That is the question.

Mr. BARDEN. If we are going to appropriate American tax dollars to feed hungry people, then the American people are entitled to know whether or not those tax dollars are being used properly, fairly, and honestly, and that is all this amendment proposes to do.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, about 8 months ago I presented to this body an amendment concerning the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration legislation which would have prohibited the expenditure of UNRRA funds in any country, or the distribution of any goods or food purchased from such funds, in any country which prohibited freedom of the press as far as reporting the activities of UNRRA might be concerned. That amendment, after considerable debate, was defeated by the very narrow margin of only a few votes and a rather weak, namby-pamby, pussywillow type amendment was substituted which requested the President to use his good offices by saying to nations partaking of UNRRA largess, "Please, will you not let us see and learn what is being done with our own money and our own food that we are giving to you in your great hour of crisis and need?" The President, in good faith, has tried to find out what was being done, and to get permission for the American press to report upon the way in which our contributions of food and medicine and other supplies were being used and distributed. But he failed. Now, 8 months later, the correctness of the position which I took then has been demonstrated, and I believe proven, to the satisfaction of every true American and every right-thinking person. We cannot compromise on a thing like this. I am glad to see so many of my fellow Members come up to the mourners' bench today, and join in the support of this amendment.

After all, it is the American people whom we are presumed to be representing here; but sometimes I wonder whether all of us actually are representing the American people, or are as much interested in their welfare as we claim to be, or as we take our constitutional oath of office to be. But I thank my God that there is still a majority of this House who believes it is our duty and our responsibility, first of all, to serve and represent our own people. So I say to you, with all the emphasis at my command, that those Americans whom we represent here, who have been going without themselves because of the charity and the humaneness within their hearts, are entitled to know how this food they send abroad is being distributed. There has been a great shortage of food in America. There have been many families which have not had the food needed for their own children. Our people have made sacrifice after sacrifice, willingly and gladly, in order that a little of the food which they saved might be sent overseas to help starving people of other nations. We owe a duty and responsibility to those Americans to see to it that they are properly informed as to how that food is being distributed and used and if for the purposes for which they gave it and not to build up and strengthen any organization, political or otherwise, which, after all, may not be, in the end, for the benefit of America or best interest of Christianity and the humanity in which we believe and for which our people have sacrificed so much in the last few years.

Mrs. LUCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield.

Mrs. LUCE. The gentleman from Washington [Mr. SAVAGE], pointed out that there are 44 contributing nations in the UNRRA program. Could the gentleman perhaps tell me how many of those 44 nations have protested the entry of the American press or of their own press into the recipient areas?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. It is my understanding that there has been but one nation, and only one nation, that has refused to cooperate by permitting the American press to tell the American people what is being done with the American food that is being sent to them through the charity of American citizens.

Mrs. LUCE. Then, does not the gentleman agree that if 43 nations wish to take certain action and approve of it, and one nation holds out, it is not this Nation that can be accused of taking unilateral action?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Certainly the gentlewoman is correct.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. RANDOLPH. On an earlier occasion when the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] presented certain amendments, I supported those proposals. I felt then that I did correctly. My belief has been reaffirmed. I shall again support the Dirksen amendment.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I thank the gentleman.

I want to reiterate today what I said on a previous occasion, 8 months ago, that we are simply providing in this amendment if we furnish the food to meet foreign distress, one of the conditions must be that our press be given permission to report, without censorship, on what is done with that food and with the other goods we give for the relief of the suffering people of the world. Therefore, I am happy to join with the gentleman from Illinois in presenting and supporting this amendment.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. This amendment relates to the relief and food that we furnish.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. That is correct.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. We do not undertake to interfere with what the other 40 nations do?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. We are not telling any other nation what sort of press it must have, but we are insisting that if we furnish this food and other relief, that we give it only with the understanding that the American people, through their own press representatives, have a right to be informed as to how such food and relief is being distributed and used.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I want to commend the gentleman's strong stand on this matter and to say that I have followed and supported him since the first time he introduced this proposition.

Mr. SAVAGE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Yes; I yield.

Mr. SAVAGE. It is my impression that the UNRRA Board is supposed to set down the policy and each of the 44 nations that are contributing the money——

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I understand the gentleman's question but let me say to the gentleman as far as I am concerned there is no international board, or no authority over the American people higher than the American Congress; and I hope there never will be.

Mr. SAVAGE. But we have agreed to help——

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Oh, no; we agreed only upon our own arrangement.

Mr. SAVAGE. We agreed to cooperate in UNRRA, to help furnish the money and the policy would be laid down by UNRRA.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I do not know what agreement the gentleman may have made, but I do know what agreement the Congress of the United States has made, and I do know what the American people understood our agreement to be, and what the American people expect us to do toward protecting their proper interests.

Mr. SAVAGE. Will not the gentleman admit——

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I do not yield further.

Mr. SAVAGE. I will be through in a minute.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I cannot yield further. Does the gentleman understand me?

Mr. SAVAGE. Well, the gentleman cut me off in the middle of a sentence.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. And I say that now is the time for those who believe in the American way, and are opposed to the continued encroachment of radical philosophies of government, to stand up and be counted. I hope this amendment will be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, let us not get the idea that this amendment involves withholding food from women and children because of the political beliefs of their government. One purpose of having the reporters from a free press report back is to make sure that food goes to the needy rather than distributed on a political basis. This amendment will help protect needy women and children. Let us also remember that out of this $465,000,000 we are talking about only $40,000,000 is going to be spent for food. Less than 10 cents on the dollar is going to the kind of relief that most of you think is represented by the work of UNRRA. You will not find that figure in the report or in the hearings, but I have found it, and that is the fact. Let us understand the issue clearly that is involved here.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. O'NEAL. Would the gentleman object to giving the authority for that statement?

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I found it in the records of the Appropriations Committee, and it ought to be reliable.

Mr. O'NEAL. Will the gentleman identify those records so we can see them?

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Yes. I will show them to the gentleman shortly. I have not time to go into it now.

Mr. Chairman, in this postwar world there is an ideological struggle between two ways of life and one of the great weapons on our side is free information, coming from individuals through the right of free speech and circulated by a free press. Opposed to that is the totalitarian weapon of government censorship and propaganda. Each way of life is vulnerable to the information weapons of the other. Democracy, typified by our system, will die when there is state censorship and state-controlled propaganda. Autocracy, typified now by the Soviet system, cannot survive where there is free speech and a free press. On this issue, to my amazement and shame, I find that my Government has not only followed a policy of appeasement but a policy of imitation of the other side. I not only find that my Government, which I love and which I want to revere, has opposed and is opposing this amendment, which is designed not to force a free press on other countries but to protect our own press from foreign censorship; I find that in that most important means of international mass communication, international short-wave radio broadcasting, my Government has been insisting upon a Government monopoly in this country, with complete Government control of all the time of all the stations. Our State Department was instrumental in killing this amendment last fall, and in killing my antimonopoly amendment to their appropriation for short-wave broadcasting this spring. We, here on the floor of Congress, have got to fight this battle for free speech and a free press and free communications in order to preserve in this struggle this most important weapon of democracy, and our fight is not so much with foreign governments as with the executive branch of our own Government. This is not a secret weapon but a public weapon; this right of free expression by private individuals and their press. We have got to make sure that this great weapon of ours is used in defense of freedom all over the world and in our own land.

Mr. Chairman, in the hearings on this bill Director LaGuardia, of UNRRA, is reported as saying that all is well now in the distribution of UNRRA supplies in Yugoslavia. I have information from official Government sources which makes me absolutely certain that he is not stating the truth as to conditions respecting UNRRA's distribution in Yugoslavia now, information which he could easily find out and which our Government has through its representatives and should have presented to the Appropriations Committee; that is, that the use of UNRRA for political purposes in Yugoslavia is still going on.

We are not interfering with the administration of UNRRA by this amendment.

All we do by this amendment is to find out whether, after supplies have been officially ordered to be distributed in a certain way by UNRRA, the international organization, they are in fact distributed in a different way, through graft or politics, as is now the case in some countries. All we want to do by this amendment is to use the American press to find out what is going on and inform the American public. All we do is to prevent some other government from gagging our own press on information which we have a right to have.

When we furnish 72 percent of the supplies, and when an international organization, UNRRA, to which we belong, has decreed how these supplies shall be distributed, we have a right to know whether they are being distributed that way or not, and no country has the right to bar us from obtaining that information. The issue here is not whether there shall be a free press in other countries but whether other countries shall censor the American press. I am sorry that the executive branch of our Government is on the wrong side on this issue. We here in Congress have a duty to be on the right side. I hope this amendment will be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. MUNDT] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Chairman, I was one of those who supported a similar amendment to this when we had UNRRA before us the last time, and I am glad that we now have an opportunity to discuss this very important issue again.

I am like the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BARDEN]; it is difficult for me to understand how any American can vote against a proposition as simple and as logical as this one. It simply provides that the American people have a right to be advised through American press and radio representatives as to what is being done with the money they are forced to contribute to this type of relief. I supported UNRRA appropriations every time they have come up. I intend to do so again, but certainly I should think that the American public is entitled to know what use is being made of the funds and of the money since Americans pay 72 percent of the entire cost.

I want to straighten out a point which a great many people fail to understand who are not closely connected with this UNRRA legislation, and that is that the UNRRA itself has nothing whatsoever to do with the distribution of the food and the relief supplies of all types once UNRRA shipments have reached the country of consumption. We have got to keep that in mind. The local government has the complete control of how the goods are distributed, and if you are not even going to be allowed to tell the American public what use is being made by the local governments of these supplies, it seems to me you are certainly engaging in profligate use of the taxpayers' funds.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MUNDT. I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Is it not a fact that America can never gain for herself and other nations the world leadership for peace that we desire if we weaken one of our great institutions in dealing with these other countries?

Mr. MUNDT. The gentleman is precisely correct; and I assure the gentleman that every other country in the world, save one, is expecting us to take this action today, and I think that one is expecting it but hoping that we seek to appease her instead by shying away from our responsibility.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MUNDT. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I supported the last amendment and I expect to support this one. I would like to ask the gentleman this question: If we do not adopt this amendment, can it not be said that we are aiding and abetting in building up an empire for Tito in the Balkan States and thereby contributing American money to the promotion of communism in Europe?

Mr. MUNDT. I am afraid you are going to be able to say that, regardless of whether we adopt the amendment or not. However, this amendment should slow down the process and it will at least give the world a ringside seat to observe what is actually taking place.

Mr. CHELF. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MUNDT. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. CHELF. I opposed a similar amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio some 8 months ago because I believed at that time that the amendment was a little bit premature. I did not want to take any chances so far as our relationships were concerned with Russia. But after the conduct we have seen in evidence on the part of Russia, and after the rebukes we have seen administered to our great Secretary of State in his sincere attempts to secure and preserve world peace, we must be firm and uphold his hand. I say that it is now high time that we adopt this amendment, and I intend to support it.

Mr. MUNDT. Good for you. I hope that many others like the gentleman will see the light of day.

Before I yield any further, I want to quote the final paragraph of the subcommittee report which is being published today by the House Committee on Foreign Affairs dealing with the subject of UNRRA in Yugoslavia. I am happy to advertise this report a little bit because I was afraid for awhile it was going to be Sovietized by not being made available to the press of the country. It was earlier and erroneously reported that this committee document was not to be printed and made available to the Congress and the country. However, its printing has now been authorized by action of the full Committee on Foreign Affairs so you and your constituents may read it if you so desire.

Let me read this sentence:

Finally, our committee recommends that if UNRRA is to measure up to its responsibility in assisting the needy of Yugoslavia, its operations must be open to free inspection and reporting by the newspaper and radio reporting people of the world.

The opportunities for its misuse in Yugoslavia are both numerous and tempting.

I am certain that if we actually have freedom of press and freedom of reporting in Yugoslavia more of the food and more of the supplies will go to those who actually need it.

I am sure the President of the United States reported to Congress in good faith the other day when he said he had been advised, I presume by the UNRRA people, that there is now freedom of reportorial service in Yugoslavia and in Poland. However, I suggest a good way to test the situation would be for the Chicago Daily Tribune to send a reporter to Warsaw to report back on UNRRA activities in unhappy Poland. I am inclined to believe that experiment would cause the President to revise his report to us.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MUNDT. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. JUDD. Is it not true that if one of our reporters went in under this proviso and were to report on other things than the distribution of UNRRA supplies, that Government would have a legitimate right to censor his dispatches on those matters?

Mr. MUNDT. This amendment applies only to reporting on UNRRA.

Mr. JUDD. But we are not insisting on a free press in every respect in those countries, we are merely demanding information on this one particular field of effort.

Mr. MUNDT. The gentleman is exactly correct. I hope the House will support this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that my time be allotted to the distinguished gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. LUCE].

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. LUCE].

UNRRA AND THE PRESS AMENDMENT

Mrs. LUCE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Dirksen amendment to the UNRRA sections of H. R. 6885. The purpose of this amendment, like that of the amendment which was defeated during the last consideration by the Congress of UNRRA appropriations, is to withhold UNRRA relief from a recipient country which refuses to allow accredited American press representatives to report on the use of UNRRA supplies.

Mr. Chairman, 2 years ago, in reporting to my district on the actions of the Seventy-eighth Congress, I made a statement on UNRRA which I should like to repeat today, for what I warned could happen with UNRRA has, unhappily, happened.

The Seventy-eighth Congress authorized the expenditure of $1,350,000,000 as our first contribution to UNRRA. On April 11, 1944, I pointed out in relation to this appropriation that:

This is the amount of the people's money that the Congress has authorized the administration to spend on Europe's postwar grocery bill. I was heartily in accord with the passage of this legislation. The rehabilitation of postwar Europe is vitally necessary, not only to a peaceful world but to American postwar prosperity. But I would feel much better about voting that sum if I were sure that the American people were totally aware of two facts:

First. That this $1,350,000,000 is really only about half the amount we are going to be asked to lay out for Europe's grocery bill, for another billion and a half, for postwar feeding of Europeans and Asiatics, is concealed in future Army and Navy appropriation bills, for food to be used in the wake of our armies, and in lend-lease military protocols to our allies, notably our lend-lease protocols to the Russians. Once the Russians have crossed their old frontiers, they will be using American groceries in all the countries they occupy. I would like it if in the countries soon to be occupied by the Russians the peoples were as well aware of the source of their groceries as they are of the nationality of their Russian liberators, for food is a very great political weapon, both in war and in postwar strategy. "Who eats my bread sings my song." And I think it would serve both the cause of democracy and American interests best if the peoples of Europe and Asia would sing Yankee Doodle Dandy quite as loudly as they will sing the Internationale or Britannia Rules the Waves. In short, I hope this $3,000,000,000 European grocery bill, which will be presented to the American taxpayer, will be as much a matter of common knowledge in foreign lands as it is bound to be in America.

The second fact I am not certain that Americans are aware of is that many of our present domestic agricultural policies may well result in such serious American food shortages that when the war is over we may not be able to feed the peoples of Europe, anyway.

Today, the American people are suffering the serious food shortage I warned against; worse actually—as any housewife can testify—than the shortages caused by our vast shipments of food to our now demobilized Army and Navy overseas. These shortages have not been caused by contributions of food to starving Europe. They have been caused by absolutely incompetent policy makers in our national administrative branch.

Moreover, the food that we have sent abroad has, in far too many instances, not reached our friends at all, but has been turned over to groups and governments which have used it to get rich in foreign black markets or to make political capital against us.

No one questions the moral necessity of aiding the sick, and feeding the hungry to the very utmost of our ability to do so. That is not the question. The necessity for UNRRA is clear. The manner in which this organization is administered, however, increasingly gives us cause for anxiety.

Let us not reduce our contributions to UNRRA, but let us make sure, both by congressional control and by Executive surveillance that all we have to give, and do give, is used in our name and in the name of greater freedom for individuals under God, rather than to promote an empire for those who use our gifts as though they were plundered booty from a subject nation.

Common sense demands that as the overwhelmingly greatest contributor Nation to UNRRA, the United States should be permitted to inspect and to report on the distribution of our foods and medicines wherever and whenever they reach their ultimate beneficiaries.

And it would seem that common sense should suggest to Soviet Russia that they permit us to do so. In this connection, the following editorial from the New York Times of yesterday is most persuasive:

CENSORSHIP AT ITS STUPIDEST

Outside aid of the sort UNRRA can give is badly needed in the Soviet republics of White Russia and the Ukraine, both of which were terribly ravaged during the advance and retreat of the German armies. Americans who understand how much the Russion resistance did to destroy Hitler have been eager that we should do our part; so eager, indeed, that Congress turned down an amendment to the UNRRA appropriation bill which would have withheld American aid in any country from which American reporters could not send out uncensored reports. Instead the President was requested to do what he could to secure transmission of uncensored news as to how the UNRRA program was working out.

The President has done this. In every beneficiary country except the Ukraine and White Russia (or Byelorussia), as he advised Speaker RAYBURN on Monday, "satisfactory arrangements have been made." The Russian Government, under date of March 26, advised Mr. Truman "that the censorship rules in force for all correspondents in the Soviet Union will be applied to correspondents desiring to report on the utilization and distribution of UNRRA supplies." In other words, Moscow will suppress and delay as it pleases.

Apparently Moscow has not taken this action for the purpose of concealing pertinent facts from UNRRA itself. Mr. Truman states that the organization's accredited representatives have been given "necessary facilities for observing and reporting on the distribution of UNRRA supplies" and have already "submitted extensive and detailed reports." What seems to be at work is the heavy hand of a bureaucracy. It may seem vital to the Russians to keep the news of failures from the outside world. But it is plain stupidity to try to suppress facts which will come out anyhow, and which are not discreditable to Russia, simply because they fear even the lightest breeze of a free press. The effect may be to stir up Congress against further UNRRA grants for White Russia and the Ukraine, and so to injure the people we would very much like to help.

Mr. Chairman, most of the debate this afternoon has concerned the use, or rather abuse of UNRRA relief supplies that have gone into the European areas controlled by the Soviet Union. I should like to draw your attention briefly to the fact that the same abuses exist in those parts of Asia which are under Communist domination.

I hold here in my hand a clipping sent to me a month or so ago by an American soldier in China. It is from the People's Herald, a paper printed in Tsingtao, which has a Chinese editor, and, he tells me, a great many Chinese readers who speak the English language.

Let me read you that editorial dated March 3, 1946:

[From the People's Herald, Tsingtao, China]

RELIEVE WHERE RELIEF IS NEEDED

The UNRRA policy of distributing relief without distinction of race, religion, and political belief is in complete accord with the Christian spirt of love and therefore deserves the support of all interested in a better world for the human race in future. It is more than unfair to leave people in deep water simply because they are born with a certain skin color, have faith in a certain form of government or believe in a certain religion. The fact that people are Negroes, Europeans, Asiatics, Christians, Buddhists, Democrats, Communists, does not deprive them of the right to be human beings and all human beings are equal before God. They should be treated equally, at least so far as relief is concerned.

There is, however, another angle to the noble undertaking of relief, and that is, relif must be given where the people need it. Since it is now out of the question to relieve all the poverty-stricken people existing in large numbers in every corner and nook of the earth, the relief and philanthropic organizations will do well to apportion their limited available supplies in such a manner that those people who are suffering worst will benefit by the relief first.

In the case of Shantung Province, the urban population is undoubtedly suffering greater privations than the country people. The comparatively rich veneer of the cities, including Tsingtao and Tsinan, is deceptive and must not be taken as an indication that the city people are better off than the rural population. As a result of the prolonged Communist blockade of the cities, supplies of foodstuffs and vegetables are extremely short, whereas in the Communist-dominated rural regions such shortages either do not exist or are much less acute. In consequence of the Communist policy of persecuting those who do not believe in their principles, large numbers of refugees have fled to nationalist-held cities, thus further aggravating the already serious food situation in the cities.

We are not suggesting that UNRRA relief supplies should not be sent to the Communist areas, where there are bound to be a sizable number of needy people awaiting relief. We do emphasize, however, that on the average the city people are in a much more serious plight than the country people, and for this reason they should be entitled to more UNRRA relief goods.

There is another point we want to take this opportunity to stress: UNRRA relief must be distributed to the needy, strictly irrespective of politics. While the UNRRA policy of neutrality in political matters has been strictly adhered to in nationalist administered cities, the same cannot be said of the Communist-ruled regions. We have received reliable information that the better part, if not all, of the UNRRA relief supplies recently dispatched to the Communist areas, have been distributed to Communist soldiers or civilians working for them. Not a single person unconnected with the Communists in one way or another has received anything in the way of UNRRA relief. Families of the middle classes which have been able to live on their own until the Communists confiscated their properties through the so-called process of class struggle, are living in untold misery but cannot have the benefit of the UNRRA relief. What is the use of relief when the Communists are busy creating poverty and destitution in their areas?

Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that any Member of Congress, who is interested in building up a strong Communist China, which will then become a political puppet state of the Kremlin, knows precisely what he is doing when he votes against this amendment. But I do not believe this Congress is interested in spreading, with American money and American food, the strength and power of Soviet Russia and the Communist doctrine throughout Europe and Asia. We want to feed everyone who is hungry. We want to feed Communists if they are hungry. We want to feed Democrats if they are hungry. We want to feed people of all religions, colors, and political faiths, if they are hungry. But I, for one, do not want to see the food that the American people, out of their generosity, send to Europe, and for which they pay out of their own pockets, used as a political tool to crush by starvation everyone who disagrees with Communist political ideology.

To subscribe to such a policy is inhuman, un-Christian, and undemocratic. It is also incredibly stupid from the point of view of our own national self-interest. There was perhaps little this Nation could or would do to prevent the growth in World War II of the Frankenstein monster, communism, that was born of World War I. But in the name of common sense, do not let us use American food to feed that monster. For that was not the intent of the American people when they gave us a mandate for UNRRA.

Any man or any women in this House who sincerely believes that the true intent of UNRRA is to feed hungry people, rather than to create communism in Europe or Asia cannot fail to support this amendment.

I repeat, this amendment does not deny Communists food; it simply insists that we Americans shall have a chance to reassure ourselves that Communists themselves are not denying food to hungry people because of their political convictions. And if they are not doing so they have no reason to fear this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. WHITE].

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed out of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Chairman, the House will soon be called upon to vote again on the price at which the monetary reserves of silver in the Treasury can be sold. There is a determined effort and a very determined and well-financed campaign of the jewelers to buy silver from the Treasury at 71.11 cents per ounce—58 cents less than its monetary value. I want to call to the attention of the House that if this plan goes through, which is being advocated by the jewelers, we are simply opening the doors of the Treasury to speculators to come in and buy silver at 58 cents less than its monetary value in this country and less than its value in most every country, and dispose of it in any part of the world where silver is higher than its monetary price of $1.29 in this country, thus making a profit for the speculator. I do not think the Congress should open the door to these speculators or sell silver at less than its monetary value of $1.29. The difficulty many people have in understanding the silver situation is that in an ounce of silver there is enough silver to make a dollar and have a remnant of 29 cents toward making the next dollar. In considering the monetary value of silver we find that since this country was first established and our monetary system was first adopted, the monetary value of silver has always been $1.29 an ounce. We have $20,000,000,000 worth of gold in the Treasury, most of which was acquired at the old price of $20.67 per ounce. It is just as illegitimate for the jewelers to come to the Treasury and ask to buy that gold, which we hold as a monetary reserve at $35 an ounce, for the old price of $20.67 per ounce. Silver is worth more than its monetary value here, in India, and in most every part of the world. Any Member who is interested and wants to confirm this fact can call the Monetary Research Department of the Treasury and ask for the price of silver in other countries, or call the Department of Commerce and get the British Empire Unit and get the facts. Why should we sell our silver monetary reserve in the Treasury for less than its coinage value? We were assured when we passed the Silver Purchase Act, under which we bought silver at 35 cents from foreign countries and at 69 cents an ounce domestically, that for every silver certificate issued we would have double the amount of silver in reserve or 2 ounces for every certificate issued. Under the provision of this law, we accumulated almost 3,000,000,000 ounces of silver and issued $2,000,000,000 in silver certificates. Of this accumulation, we had 1,350,000,000 ounces of so-called free silver which the Treasury refused to put in circulation as money.

Today we find we have frittered away most of 1,350,000,000 ounces of silver, until we have got down to less than 225,000,000 ounces. Most of this silver has gone out of our country to England and her Empire colonies under lease-lend, if you please, and we did not get a dollar in return for it. Why should we dispose of the last little silver reserve that we have for less than its monetary value?

Mr. BALDWIN of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITE. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BALDWIN of New York. The gentleman says that the silver is principally for use by the jewelers. Does the gentleman realize that hospitals, research laboratories, the movie industry, the photographic industry, and a great many other industries as well are vitally interested in being able to obtain silver? The jewelers do not use very much silver so let us not kid ourselves on that score.

Mr. WHITE. If the gentleman will make himself conversant with the present law, he will find that under the provisions of the Silver Purchase Act the Treasury has authority now to sell all the silver that the industries want at $1.29, the monetary price.

Mr. BALDWIN of New York. These hospital and research laboratories cannot pay $1.29.

Mr. WHITE. That is what you pay for silver certificates when you get your salary. You pay $1.29. Why should the jeweler come in and get the silver at less than you get it? Why should the jeweler and these people you mentioned get silver at 58 cents less than you pay for it? If you walk down here to the office of the Sergeant-at-Arms and cash the check for the money you receive for your services here on the floor of the House you will be paid in silver certificates in 1, 5, and 10-dollar bills, and you accept them in payment of your services at $1.29. Why do you want to be better to the silver users than you are to yourself and why do you want to permit the jewelers of this country to raid the last monetary reserve you have for the only redeemable money that you have which is, in other words, silver certificates.

Mr. Chairman, the silver in the Treasury was placed there for monetary purposes and nothing else. But we of the silver-producing States realize that there is an acute shortage of silver. For that reason, and that reason only, we agreed to a compromise before the Senate Appropriations Committee where both the producers and consumers, and their Senate representatives, agreed to a price of 90.3 cents per ounce for 2 years and $1.29 per ounce thereafter. The Senate accepted this gentleman's agreement and passed the bill in that manner. Now the bill is in conference, and I want to warn the silver consumers that unless they accept that compromise, including the price of $1.29 per ounce in 2 years, that they may get no silver now and that the price in 2 years will probably be $3 per ounce with very little silver even at that price, and I will tell you why. Silver has been the money of the Orient from time immemorial; they reluctantly accepted paper money a few years ago, but are afraid of it, and are again demanding silver. Then the industrial use of silver has increased 200 percent while domestic production has dropped 57 percent. In the past 400 years the total production of silver has been less than 18,000,000,000 ounces, and while silver is indestructible, yet losses and other uses have decimated that so that in the entire world there is probably less than 14,000,000,000 ounces. Three thousand silver-producing mines in the West have been closed because their reserves were depleted in the patriotic war effort. It will take 2 years to restore those reserves—by sinking shafts, driving tunnels, making raises and blocking out ore. They are unable to finance this work unless assured of fair prices at the end of that time, so if the price is not set at $1.29 per ounce in 2 years no ore will be blocked, and the industrial users will face a famine in silver. Managed economy and managed currency is a snare and a delusion. All the present frenzied efforts for peace and recovery and full employment are just so much sound and fury signifying nothing, unless we adopt a sound world economy based on a dollar or other monetary unit of a universally recognized value. Such a dollar is only possible when backed with redeemable monetary reserves.

Since there is not enough gold in the world—less than 1,250,000,000 ounces—the only solution of our monetary problem is a return to bimetallism with a fixed and proper ratio between gold and silver.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. O'NEAL].

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield so that I can give the place where I found the information I cited previously?

Mr. O'NEAL. I yield briefly to the gentleman.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. On page 15 of the request for the appropriation for United States participation in the work of UNRRA is the item: Food, $40,100,000, out of a total of $465,000,000.

Mr. O'NEAL. Is that the statement the gentleman made on the floor?

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Yes; I think I said $40,000,000, but I left out the $100,000.

Mr. O'NEAL. I thought the gentleman said one-fourth of it was for that purpose.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I said less than one-tenth, I think.

Mr. O'NEAL. The gentleman from Kentucky who is addressing you is not very optimistic as to the result of anything he may say on this proposition today. I am also strongly of the opinion that a very serious mistake would be made in doing what this amendment asks us to do. It is very easy to stand here and make a patriotic, fine American speech. I could do it also. I think I am just about as much interested in protecting America 100 percent as probably any other man on the floor. I do not believe I am championing, crawling or cringing to Russia. That is not the proposition here today. We have had this matter under consideration time after time and there were sound reasons why we have defeated it in the past.

We must think of Europe not as we think of America. There you have a small bit of land divided and torn between many, many nations, with animosities going back generations and centuries; the people distrustful of each other; hereditary enemies; all that welter of confusion, fear, and distrust which we call Europe. That is the situation that we must face, practically.

UNRRA is composed of 44 nations. In those 44 nations are many nations that have been enemies with the countries being assisted; that have been on the opposite side from those little countries we are trying to help. When America says, "Now, we have a loaf of bread in our hand and you do not get it unless you do what we tell you to do," every other nation in UNRRA has the same right to say to those afflicted nations, "Do what we say or you do not get food." We are asking every country over there, before they will get food—and in some places 90 percent of it comes from America—we are saying, "Unless you let us dictate everything about this proposition you will not get a loaf of bread." The other countries are equally entitled to demand the same, and hereditary fears, perhaps justified, arise from such demands.

We have other means of doing away with too close censorship and national seclusiveness. We have other plans working and other agencies. The Secretary of State has been over there trying to open up certain countries so that our people can move about freely. But, no. We are not leaving it to that method. We are now saying, "We have the food. You must have it and you may not unless you consent to stipulations. We have not accomplished the open-door policy with the threat of the atomic bomb, but with a loaf of bread we are going to demand that they must surrender to our will. It is not in the spirit of the United States of America to approach the problem from that viewpoint. The facts are, and I think it is freely conceded, that there has not been any censorship that is causing any great trouble. The press, when we last debated the proposition, had no complaint that they could not move about freely. They can now go where they please. We are getting reports everywhere UNRRA goes. We know the whole situation. UNRRA is making its own investigations. But now to say to those little countries, to those afflicted peoples, that we demand they shall do exactly what we tell them to do or they do not get a loaf of bread, that is not America.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] is recognized for 5 minutes to close debate.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I asked that 10 minutes be reserved for the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. But the gentleman gave 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. O'NEAL].

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Oh, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the gentleman will be recognized for 10 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is based upon a premise for which there is no foundation of fact. There is not, nor has there been, any such situation.

Russia has not refused to admit American reporters to check UNRRA activities. There is no denial of admission of newspapermen to any of the countries named in the amendment. There never has been. And there is not today. The entire charge is a fabrication out of the whole cloth.

No official or credible source warrants any such interpretation. All evidence adduced before the committee was emphatically to the contrary.

On page 269 of the hearings both Governor LaGuardia and Colonel Wood, of the State Department, testified:

Mr. WOOD. There has been no evidence that there has been any censorship or reports regarding UNRRA distribution by American correspondents and we know positively that the UNRRA mission in both the Ukraine and White Russia has had complete freedom to report, to go back and forth, to come back here and report on their observations of distribution of UNRRA supplies.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. And this newspaper mission is going into Byelorussia now. That is recently.

Mr. WOOD. That is right. So I think, on the whole, the response has been satisfactory.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I can assure you if any mission complains to me that any United States or relief agency correspondent is prevented by the Government from observing operations I will call attention to the situation immediately.

No more authoritative statement could be made. Director General LaGuardia served for years as a Member of this House. And no man ever won and held the confidence of his colleagues more completely than Governor LaGuardia. His evidence is unimpeachable.

The Director General has not subsequently notified the committee, or any member of the committee, that there has been any change in the situation. On the contrary, the press for the last 2 days has carried official statements corroborating Governor LaGuardia's statement and bringing it down to date. Here is a quotation from the Under Secretary of State, Hon. Dean Acheson, in charge during the absence of Secretary Byrnes, appearing in the New York Times of yesterday, June 26, 1946:

Russia has not refused to admit American reporters to check UNRRA's activity within the Soviet Union. What she has done, he explained, is to say that the same provision with reference to censorship will apply in the two republics as apply elsewhere in the Soviet Union.

So far, he added, nobody has been barred and as far as we know no reports have been censored in the two republics.

These two republics are the countries named in the pending amendment. I ask you, Mr. Chairman, if the House of Representatives proposes to go on record by a vote of the House in contradicting all the evidence, including that of Governor LaGuardia and Secretary Acheson, and declaring that a situation exists which as a matter of fact does not exist.

The State Department goes further and says:

Nobody has been barred and as far as we know no reports have been censored in the two republics. There has been complete freedom of movement of UNRRA missions in each of the two republics, and there has been a full report of the UNRRA missions from the two republics.

There is complete refutation of every irresponsible charge made here in behalf of the amendment now before the House. Could it possibly be made plainer or given with more authority?

And he adds:

In addition a press group, which included American correspondents, has toured the two areas and the correspondents are soon starting back for another tour.

There cannot be under the widest stretch of the imagination such a situation as the pending amendment seeks to have the House officially misrepresent the American people—and the world.

Again, in this morning's issue of the New York Times, the issue for June 27, 1946, Governor LaGuardia is quoted as saying:

There has been no evidence that there has been any censorship and we know positively that the UNRRA missions in both Ukraine and White Russia have had complete freedom to report, to go back and forth, to come back here and report on their observations and the distribution of UNRRA supplies.

In order to leave no possibility of doubt on the subject I called up the State Department just now and was informed by Secretary Acheson himself that the situation referred to by the pending amendment has never existed, does not now exist, and so far as can now be judged, will never exist. In other words, Mr. Chairman, it simply is not true.

I ask you, Mr. Chairman, does the House want to base a resolution intruding upon the internal affairs of another nation, and involving implications of too serious a nature to be discussed on this floor, on the strength of an apocryphal tale in support of which there is not the slightest shred of credible evidence to be found? Mr. Chairman, have we taken leave of our senses?

No one even casually acquainted with the history of the times will deny that it was action taken by the Congress of the United States at the close of the First World War which left the way open for the Second World War. Is it possible that we are once more heading down the same path?

A proponent of the pending amendment says cynically that no one will starve if the amendment is adopted. Can he also give us the assurance that a million boys will not march away to die if this spirit of undocumented braggadocio is incorporated in the legislative enactments of the Congress?

Another refers to the taxpayers' money involved. He does not mention the fact that it is money which we have contracted by international treaties, with 44 nations, to pay. He does not mention the fact that the proposed amendment is a potential proposal to abrogate such treaties and welch on our promissory note. He does not allude to the amount of the taxpayers' money which would have to be spent if insult was answered with insult and the international ill will thereby created followed to its ultimate conclusion.

And, Mr. Chairman, who will suffer from this myth-supported proposal, even if the complications it creates can be adjudicated? I quote from an editorial in the St. Louis Dispatch, one of the great papers of the Nation:

RECOURSES OF THE STARVING

UNRRA's report of the desperate extremity of starvation throughout the world gives urgency to President Truman's appeal to Congress to appropriate the remaining $465,000,000 it has pledged but not yet given to the world relief agency.

UNRRA tells of Chinese eating grass, roots, bark, clay; of Viennese cooking nettles. It was in the same terms of human degradation and misery that the Save the Children International Union reported 60,000 children without milk in Budapest, 14,000 derelict children foraging the streets of Milan, a Europe in which new-born babies are swaddled in paper and families suffer out the rigors of winter with cardboard for windowpanes.

UNRRA is not enough but it is an essential beginning, and after that the nations and their peoples with enough to eat should do everything addditional they can to give from their plenty to the hopeless, tortured millions that hover on the brink of death from slow starvation.

Even if no more serious results follow, it is the innocent and the helpless who will pay the price of this unnecessary and uncalled for folly.

Someone here tells us, with righteous indignation, that we pay more than any other nation. The inference is that for that reason we are justified in dictating to the other 44 nations with whom we are associated in UNRRA. We do not pay more. Under the formula adopted by the contracting nations no nation pays more than any other nation. Each pays an equal percent of its national income.

The greatest Advocate of Peace in all the flood of time, standing with His disciples in the Temple saw the purse-proud Pharisee ostentatiously casting their alms into the treasury to be seen of men. But when the widow timidly dropped in her mite He said "She has given more than all the rest. She has given of her penury while they have given of their abundance." I have not the slightest doubt that if the truth could be known there are nations which have, out of their limited means, given more than we, the richest Nation on earth, have given out of our wealth and abundance.

The charge that food supplied by UNRRA is being used for political purposes is also unsupported. Here is the testimony in response to inquiries by the committee. It is by Governor LaGuardia and it is all the evidence—and the only evidence requested by the author of this amendment:

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Mayor, are you satisfied with General Gale's report on Yugoslavia that food there is not being used as a political weapon?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Yes; I have to be satisfied with it. He is the top man in Europe, and a man of good judgment. He has no prejudice or bias. I believe it is a constructive report.

Incidentally, I have the No. 2 man in Yugoslavia, a gentleman whom we got from the Department of Agriculture, right here in the room, and if you would like, you may question him or you can talk with him afterward.

He will tell you the story. He has been on the job from the very beginning.

Mr. DIRKSEN. What report have you had from Mr. Scandrett up in Byelorussia?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. It is going fine. There cannot be any question of using food for political purposes in that country.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That is all.

What could be more conclusive? And no attempt was made either to impeach the testimony or to produce other testimony. To sum up the whole matter, there is not the slightest evidence that this food is being used for political purposes. Mr. Chairman, are we willing to base scandalous and slanderous legislative enactments, indicting and impugning the motives of sovereign nations of the world, on such testimony as this?

What would be the reaction and the response of the American people to a foreign nation—any foreign nation—which would falsely accuse the American Government of such reprehensible actions as are charged here in this amendment and on that ground proceed to indict us before the world for something of which we were not guilty—something of which there was no evidence or confirmation?

We are at this moment in the most delicate phase of postwar negotiations. Our diplomatic representatives are now meeting in Paris with the representatives of the other great powers in a final endeavor to establish permanent peace. If they fail the possibilities are too serious for contemplation. War today means not only the destruction of armies and navies but the sacrifice of civilian populations, the annihilation of nations.

It is a critical time. Can we afford to rock the boat? Will this proposal contribute to the peace of the world? Will these truculent, jingo, saber-rattling declamations against "appeasement" here on this floor assist Secretary Byrnes and the American delegation at the peace conference in reaching an amicable agreement with our sister nations? Why take a chance?

I do not believe there will be another war. I do not believe any nation on earth wants war and I am certain the American people do not want war. But why take a step which might start a train of circumstances leading in that direction? We have the assurance of all the witnesses who testified before the committee. We have the reports of all established news agencies. We have the releases in the morning newspapers. And we have the emphatic testimony of our own State Department. All agree that there has been no curtailment of the freedom of the press. So far as UNRRA is concerned the American people have had access at all times to unbiased, unprejudiced, unvarnished, uncensored reports on all supplies sent to all foreign countries, including those named in the amendment.

Let us be sensible. Let us keep our heads. Let us not pass a bill carrying statements that will certainly give mortal offense. There is nothing in the amendment which will contribute to the peace of the world. It is charged with dynamite. It is fraught with potential catastrophe. It is hopelessly freighted with international ill will.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment should be voted down.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent, since the gentleman's time was extended 5 minutes, that I be permitted to proceed for 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, my time was not extended. The original request was for 10 minutes for the committee. The Chairman simply failed to count the gentleman from Kentucky, who was standing in the aisle at the time. There was no extension of time to the committee. In the second place, the gentleman from Ohio could have asked and secured 5 minutes or 10 minutes at the time had he so desired. He now asks to set aside the rule under which the committee closes debate. There has been 55 minutes' debate controlled by his side and 15 minutes by the committee. I am constrained to object.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed as tellers Mr. CANNON of Missouri and Mr. DIRKSEN.

The Committee divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 154, noes 53.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

CIVILIAN PRODUCTION ADMINISTRATION

Salaries and expenses: For all necessary expenses of the Civilian Production Administration, fiscal year 1947, including salary of the Administrator at $12,000 per annum, and salaries of six principal officials at $10,000 per annum each, and other personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; the employment of aliens; the employment of expert witnesses; acceptance and utilization of voluntary and uncompensated services; not to exceed $10,000 for the temporary employment of persons or organizations, by contract or otherwise, without regard to the civil-service or classification laws; contract stenographic reporting services; lawbooks, book of reference, and periodicals; reimbursement at not to exceed 4 cents per mile, of employees for expenses incurred by them in performance of official travel in privately owned automobiles within the limits of their official stations; not to exceed $2,000,000 for travel expenses, including travel to and from their homes or regular places of business in accordance with the Standardized Travel Regulations, including travel in privately owned automobile (and including per diem in lieu of subsistence at place of employment), of persons employed intermittently away from their homes or regular places of business as compliance commissioners and receiving compensation on a per diem when actually employed basis and expenses of attendance at meetings of organizations concerned with the work of the Administration; not to exceed $157,850 for deposit in the general fund of the Treasury for cost of penalty mail as required by section 2 of the act of June 28, 1944 (Public Law 364); not to exceed $494,000 for printing and binding; and the rental, maintenance, and operation of passenger automobiles and one airplane; $20,000,000: Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be available for the maintenance or operation of an airplane or for the payment of rental of any airplane.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TABER: On page 8, line 1, after the semicolon strike out "$20,000,000" and insert "$18,000,000."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 10 minutes.

Mr. BENDER. I object, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I have offered this amendment to try to save $2,000,000. Frankly, that is not a big percentage of this appropriation. It is only 10 percent of this particular figure. It is difficult to see why there should be $20,000,000 for the Civilian Production Administration as against an estimated expenditure of $26,473,000 for the present year. On top of that, they have funds to carry them along on their housing program. It seems to me they can take a cut of $2,000,000 and get along very easily. The committee cut out only $600,000. They will have an average of 4,600 employees with the $20,000,000 as against 6,000 in the present year. It seems to me that is perfectly ridiculous. If we are ever going to get through being regimented, and all that sort of thing, it is about time for us to begin. The only way we can do it is by cutting down the amount of money we give these people who are placing restrictions upon the business operations of our citizens. It is time we begin to get back to the point where we have production instead of restricting production. I hope this amendment will be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BENDER].

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to speak out of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Chairman, apparently the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations would exercise the authority that is now given in restricting freedom of expression, freedom of press, and free speech. He asked for additional time himself, and after that was granted he refused to grant additional time in order for me to answer an argument which is wholly unfounded.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BENDER. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. O'NEAL. In the spirit of fair play, Mr. Chairman, and I know the gentleman from Ohio himself is for fair play, possibly the gentleman does not know that at the time the gentleman from Missouri made the request he asked anyone who wanted to speak on that amendment during that time to stand, and he asked for a full 5 minutes for everyone, reserving the closing time for the committee. It is common practice, everyone knows, for the closing time to go to the committee. It does not seem to me the gentleman should be criticized for declining to extend the time after the committee has closed.

Mr. BENDER. I am fully aware of what the gentleman says. I know the rules of the House.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BENDER. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. To make the story accurate, an additional 5 minutes was granted to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. BENDER. That is right. The gentleman asked for an additional 5 minutes and no objection was made. Under the circumstances, if the gentleman will grant me a minute's time I will be glad to use a part of his time to answer the gentleman's argument.

The gentleman says we have full freedom of the press as far as the operations of UNRRA are concerned. Apparently he did not read this morning's paper. Here is an article from the New York Times of this morning:

UNRRA IN BELGRADE OUSTS AN AMERICAN—DIRECTOR OF INFORMATION SENT BACK TO WASHINGTON BY RUSSIAN CHIEF OF MISSION

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, June 25.—Leo Hochstetter, American member of the UNRRA mission to Yugoslavia and director of its office of public information, revealed today that he had been removed from his post and ordered to return to Washington by Col. Mihail Sergeichik, Russian chief of the mission, because of a disagreement over the censorship of UNRRA news releases by Colonel Sergeichik.

Mr. Hochstetter said that Colonel Sergeichik's policies prevented the Yugoslav public from being fully informed about the source and nature of UNRRA aid and directed the efforts of the UNRRA public information office toward presenting the most favorable aspects of UNRRA in Yugoslavia instead of giving a full, truthful account of its successes and failures.

Mr. Hochstetter, a former newspaper reporter and recently an official of the Office of War Information in Turkey, was informed yesterday that he had been relieved of his duties through an order informing the rest of the UNRRA staff that his place was being taken by his British assistant, Leo Fuller. The order was dated Saturday.

Asked about his impending departure, which became known through other members of the UNRRA staff, Mr. Hochstetter issued a formal statement, saying:

"Because of basic differences in concept on the conduct of public information activities in Yugoslavia, Col. Mihail Sergeichik, chief of the UNRRA Yugoslav mission, has ordered me to return to Washington.

"It is my view that a public information officer in UNRRA is an international public servant, charged with the twofold responsibility of explaining all aspects of UNRRA's program to beneficiaries and of accounting UNRRA's activities to the contributors.

"In any case I have found that the attitude of Colonel Sergeichik and his advisers made it increasingly difficult for me to carry out my responsibilities as I see them."

As one of the basic causes of disagreement, Mr. Hochstetter cited a memorandum dated June 12, stating that by order of Colonel Sergeichik all press releases, whether originating in Washington, here or elsewhere, must be approved by Colonel Sergeichik before being released to the Yugoslav press.

Obviously the gentleman from Missouri is in error when he states that there is no censorship and that there is freedom of expression as far as UNRRA's practices are concerned, when an UNRRA official, in fact, the man charged with the responsibility of the distribution of these UNRRA funds, is sent back to our country by this Russian dictator. The people of America want the needy people of all nations to be cared for. There is no disposition on our part to withhold bread in order to foist our own ideology onto the people of the world, such as some of our allies insist upon doing, even in their own country. Not a Member of the House would be so callous as to withhold an appropriation for the feeding of the hungry and the clothing of the naked. All that the amendment provides is that the people of America be given an opportunity to see how their money is spent. There is no other question involved.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, the request for 10 minutes time was due to the fact that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN] were given 10 minutes and the committee should therefore have 10 minutes to close.

Now, with reference to the excerpt that has been read from the Times, that was an instance in which one individual correspondent was persona non grata. During the war and since the war, every nation has at times sent home individuals for personal reasons. But the gentleman did not read all the article. If he had read the entire article he would have found on page 5 the statement that there was no censorship in the past, no censorship at present and complete freedom of the press.

The gentleman very carefully avoided reading the most pertinent paragraphs of the article. They completely refute the gentleman's argument. I trust those interested will take time to read all of the article in the New York Times of June 26, 1946, page 5. The gentleman has read only an irrelative excerpt.

With regard to the amendment before us, you are here affecting the distribution of critical materials. The amendment proposes to interrupt the building program. It has nothing to do with prices but merely with the distribution of essential supplies. If you are to provide for housing and if you are to provide for the veterans' program you must have a means of channeling building material equitably and in the right direction. That is what this agency does. We are giving them in this paragraph barely enough money to discharge their duties.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. O'NEAL. Does the gentleman feel that by cutting this appropriation it will very vitally affect the emergency housing program?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. It cannot be otherwise. We cut the appropriation to the lowest figure and if cut lower, especially by the amount indicated in the pending amendment, it will make it impossible to adequately perform the duties of channeling construction materials in the reconstruction program.

I trust the amendment will be defeated.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. CANNON of Missouri) there were—ayes 109, noes 85.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. COOLEY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee having had under consideration the bill H. R. 6885 had come to no resolution thereon.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members who have spoken on the bill today may extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include certain amendments.

INVESTIGATION OF CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS CHARGED WITH ESPIONAGE

Mr. ELLIOTT. Mr. Speaker, from the Committee on Accounts I submit the following privileged resolution (H. Res. 682) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the expenses of conducting the investigation authorized by House Resolution 430, to authorize the Committee on the Judiciary to conduct an investigation of the disposition of the case against certain individuals charged by the Federal Bureau of Investigation with espionage and possession of confidential Government documents, including such printing and binding and the employment of such clerical, stenographic, and other assistance as the committee may deem necessary, and all other expenditures, shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House on vouchers authorized by the committee signed by the chairman thereof and approved by the Committee on Accounts, but shall not exceed $2,500.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ELECTION TO STANDING COMMITTEE OF THE HOUSE

Mr. DOUGHTON of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 683), which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That FRANK BUCHANAN, of the State of Pennsylvania be, and he is hereby, elected a member of the following standing committees of the House of Representatives: On Census, Flood Control, and Elections No. 3.

The resolution was agreed to.

AMENDING THE NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill S. 2341, an act to amend the National Housing Act, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain this bill?

Mr. SPENCE. This bill merely extends the authority of the Federal Housing Administrator to insure mortgages on existing houses, which otherwise would expire on the 30th of this month. It gives him no additional authority. They are acting within the authorization previously granted them by the Congress.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. It is a unanimous report of the committee?

Mr. SPENCE. There was no objection in the committee to the report, and I understand there is no objection by anybody to the bill.

Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield.

Mr. GAMBLE. This is section 2 of the Federal Housing Act?

Mr. SPENCE. Section 2 of the Federal Housing Act.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 203 (a) of the National Housing Act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking out the second and third provisos and by striking out the colon at the end of the first proviso and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING THE FIRST WAR POWERS ACT

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary may have until midnight tonight to file a report on the bill (H. R. 6890) to amend the First War Powers Act of 1941.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, will there likely be minority views filed?

Mr. HOBBS. Not that I know of.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Would the gentleman make the same request, in the event there are minority views to be filed?

Mr. HOBBS. Certainly. I include that in the request, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS]?

There was no objection.

AMENDING THE SECOND WAR POWERS ACT OF 1942, AS AMENDED

Mr. HOBBS, from the Committee on the Judiciary, submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 5716) to amend the Second War Powers Act of 1942, as amended, for printing in the RECORD.

EMERGENCY FARM MORTGAGE ACT OF 1933

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 6477) to amend section 32 of the Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended, and section 3 of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation Act, as amended, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman make some explanation of the bill, particularly the necessity for action at this time?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. I intend to offer an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and extend what is known as commissioner loans for 1 year. The commissioner loans will expire on the 30th of this month if not renewed and I think now that all of the members of the Committee on Agriculture are of the opinion that this extension should be made in order to give the committee time to work out, if possible, a way of servicing these farmers, who are now being serviced by commissioner loans, by similar loans made through the Federal Land Bank System.

Mr. HOPE. May I ask the gentleman, is it not the understanding of the committee that if this extension is made consideration will be given before the matter comes up again to work out some program which will make it unnecessary to have further extensions of this act?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. I have a section 3 to the amendment I shall offer which directs the administration to make a thorough study of the situation and make recommendations to the committee not later than March 1 next year, so we will have time enough to work out legislation before the end of the year.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment I have offered would simply extend what is commonly known as the commissioner loans for a period of 1 year, this in order to give further time to the question as to how the farmers who at present are served by reason of the commissioner loans may be served in a similar manner under the Federal farm bank system.

H. R. 6477, as originally introduced, would have extended the commissioner loans for a period of 2 years. The House Committee on Agriculture adopted an amendment to the bill striking out the provision in the bill extending the commissioner loans for 2 years, and in lieu thereof prohibiting the making of such loans unless, and until, the Congress by joint resolution specifically authorized the making of such loans.

Permit me to first draw the issue: H. R. 6477, as introduced, extends the lending authority of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, which expires on June 30, 1946, for a period of 2 years. This means that the authority to make commissioner loans would be extended for a period of 2 years. The amendment to the bill, adopted by the committee by a vote of 11 to 8, and herein complained of, while extending the lending power of the Corporation for a period of 5 years, prohibits the exercise of this lending power unless, and until the Congress, by concurrent resolution expressly authorizes the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation to make loans. In other words, the amendment while extending the lending power to make commissioner loans for a period of 5 years would, as of June 30, 1946, prohibit the making of all commissioner loans, and this prohibition could only be lifted by concurrent resolution passed by the Congress. To say the least, such action smacks of the philosophy enunciated by the mother in graciously giving her consent to her daughter's request to go swimming:

"Mother, may I go out to swim?"
"O, yes, my darling daughter,
But hang your clothes on a hickory limb
And do not go nigh the water."

In the second place permit me to line up the forces for and against H. R. 6477:

First. The Secretary of Agriculture.

Second. The Governor of the Farm Credit Administration.

Third. The Land Bank Commissioner.

Fourth. Eleven of the twelve Federal land banks.

Fifth. The National Grange.

Sixth. The American Farm Bureau.

Seventh. The National Council of Farmer Cooperatives.

Eighth. The National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation.

Ninth. The National Farmers Union.

Tenth. The Bureau of the Budget—approved.

Against H. R. 6477 as introduced; that is, for H. R. 6477 as amended so as to cut off the authority to make commissioner loans as of June 30, 1946:

First. The American Bankers Association.

Second. The Federal Land Bank of Houston.

BACKGROUND

In order to understand the issue it is necessary to give a brief history of both the Federal land-bank system and the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.

(a) Federal land-bank system: The Federal Land Bank Act of 1916, creating the Federal land-bank system, designed "to provide capital for agricultural development" and to "equalize rates of interest upon farm lands," has more than justified its existence. Had it no other accomplishment to its credit than the reduction of farm interest rates from a national average of 6½ percent in 1916 to 4 percent in 1946, it would be considered a Godsend to the farmers of America. Add to this accomplishment the bailing out of the banks, insurance companies, and other farm mortgage lending institutions, during the depression, when loans in 1 year jumped from $222,446,223—1933—to $1,283,503,456—1934—over $1,000,000,000—thus saving not only thousands of farmers, but thousands of financial institutions holding farm mortgage paper by swapping cool cash for their agricultural paper, and you begin to realize what an important part the system has played in our financial picture.

While the Federal Government supplied the original capital that went into the land bank system, the system was designated from the first to become farmer-owned and farmer-controlled, this objective to be accomplished by the farmers subscribing for stock in an amount equal to 5 percent of the loan granted, and in a very short time will have accomplished this worth-while goal. There are 12 land banks in the system, and at present 11 of these banks have paid back every cent of Government capital and are really and truly farmer owned and farmer-controlled, and the remaining bank, the St. Paul bank, in a few years will have retired all of its Government capital, at which time the whole system will become farmer-owned and farmer-controlled. This has been accomplished by the farmers, when obtaining loans, purchasing stock in the amount of 5 percent of the loans so obtained.

I also call attention to the fact that in recent years due to greater efficiency in administration and improvement in farm prices the Federal land bank system has been able to greatly reduce its loans, both in numbers and amount, and also its personnel. From 1938 to 1945 the record shows:

	1938	1945	Percent reduction
Number of loans	1,086,272	644,518	59.3
Amount of loans	$2,803,764,000	$1,370,123,000	48.9
Number of Federal land bank central office employees	205	97	40.1
Federal land bank district employees	5,024	2,014	47.3

(b) Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation: The Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation was set up in 1933 in order to go to the relief not only of the farmers but to the relief of the banks, insurance companies, and other financial institutions holding farm-mortgage paper. Under the act of May 12, 1933, creating the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, the sum of $200,000,000—all of which except $50,000,000 has been returned by the Corporation to the Government—was made available to the land-bank commissioners for the purpose of making loans to farmers on the security of a first or second lien on real estate or personal property in an amount not to exceed 75 percent of the appraised normal value of the security. These loans, commonly known as commissioner loans, were handled by the Federal land banks.

The Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation makes two types of loans, known as the first- and second-mortgage commissioner loans. The type known as the first-mortgage commissioner loan is made principally in those areas where the risk is high and consequently no local farm-loan association, confined as it is to a small local area, can safely assume the risk. However, when the risk is spread over the entire United States, as these commissioner loans are, the losses are greatly minimized. This loan is based upon the same principal insurance companies operate under. These high-risk areas are usually found in irrigation, drainage, and level districts; areas subject to excessive field erosion or erosive action of streams; and where the character of farming is undergoing a change.

The second type of loan, known as the second mortgage commissioner loan, is supplemental to the straight land bank loan, and today is widely used in order to service farmers who are unable to get by on straight land bank loans. For instance, suppose a farmer needs $7,500. He applies to his local Federal Land Bank Association for the loan. Land bank appraisers are sent upon the farm to make an appraisal, based upon its normal agricultural value; that is, upon the earning capacity of the farm during normal times. The appraisers, we will say, value the farm, based upon the normal value yardstick at $10,000. The land bank, of course, could only lend 65 percent of this value, or $6,500, which would be $1,000 short of the farmer's need. Now if it were not for the second mortgage commissioner loan the farmer would be forced to go to other sources for his loan, but with this supplemental service what happens is this: He is granted a land bank loan for $6,500 at 4 percent interest, taking stock in the local Land Bank Association for 5 percent of the amount of the loan, and granted a second mortgage commissioner loan for $1,000 at 5 percent interest.

The commissioner loans, first and second, are both needed in order to adequately serve the farmers of America, and should be continued until there is worked out the proper changes in the Federal Farm Loan Act to take care of the service these loans at present are rendering the farmers.

The commissioner loans, originally inaugurated to meet the desperate emergency occasioned by the depression in the thirties not only successfully took care of the emergency, but, from purely a business standpoint, so far, have proven highly successful. The financial statement of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation as of December 31, 1945, is as follows:

Land-bank commissioner-loan operations, May 12, 1933, to Dec. 31, 1945, inclusive

[Even thousands of dollars]

Earnings:
Interest on mortgage loans, purchase-money mortgages, etc		$369,461,000
Loan fees		12,012,000
Other fees and miscellaneous income		1,386,000
Gross earnings		382,859,000
Deductions:
Interest expense	150,375,000
Operating expense:
District offices	107,400,000
Central office	12,182,000
Total deductions		269,957,000
Net earnings		112,902,000
Less: Loss on mortgage-loan and real-estate transactions		62,145,000
		50,757,000
Interest at 2 percent on all Government capital		39,708,700
Net balance		11,048,290
Reserve set aside to cover future losses		68,998,396

On the same date, namely, December 31, 1945, there were outstanding commissioner loans in the sum of $228,397,216. Hence, the financial statement reveals, it is believed the best record ever made by a governmental emergency agency, namely:

First. After paying all losses, amounting to $62,145,000, the Corporation has net earnings of $50,757,000.

Second. The Corporation has a reserve fund set aside to take care of all future losses of $68,998,396, which is 30 percent of the outstanding loans. This reserve is three or four times the amount of the anticipated losses.

Third. If the Corporation paid the Government interest on all capital advanced at the rate of 2 percent, which would amount to $39,708,710, it would still have a net operating profit of $11,048,290, and a reserve fund of $68,998,396.

There is no other emergency agency, so far as I know, that has a comparable record.

The land-bank loans until June 30, 1945, were limited to 50 percent of the normal agricultural value of the farm plus 20 percent of the permanent insurable improvements. Under this yardstick of determining values, the loans in truth and in fact were about 43 percent of the normal agricultural value of the farm.

During the early part of 1945 a bill was introduced revamping the Federal Farm Loan Act along lines that experience dictated were necessary in order to bring about greater efficiency and service. At that time a careful study by the House Committee on Agriculture was made of the whole act. Among the changes recommended was raising the loan limitation from 50 to 65 percent of the normal agricultural value of the farm. The Congress approved of this recommendation, and on June 30, 1945, this recommendation became law.

At the time the House Committee on Agriculture held hearings on the bill revamping the Federal Farm Loan Act, careful consideration was given to commissioner loans, and while the hope was expressed that in raising the loan limit from 50 to 65 percent, commissioner loans could be discontinued, the bill extended the loaning authority of the Federal Mortgage Corporation for a period of 1 year in order for the Farm Credit Administration to give further study to the problem. In reporting the bill to the House the committee stated:

The authority for the making of Land Bank Commissioner loans will expire under the present law on June 30, 1945. The bill as introduced would have extended this lending authority for an additional period of 2 years. This has been reduced by the committee to an extension of 1 year as provided by section 13 of the bill as reported. This will be sufficient time to observe the extent to which the change in the lending power of the Federal land banks under section 4 (c) of the bill will make it possible for them to make loans which have heretofore required credit from the Land Bank Commissioner.

The Farm Credit Administration made a thorough and complete study and embodied its findings in a printed report under the title "Study of Federal Land Bank and Commissioner Loans Made Through 1945." This study gives a complete picture of the operations of the Federal Land Bank System from the very beginning, and its reading is recommended to those who really want to obtain a better knowledge of the system. I believe that it is not inappropriate to commend Governor Duggin and his able assistants upon the thorough manner in which this study was made. Based upon this study the Secretary of Agriculture recommended to the committee that commissioner loans be continued for a period of 2 years in order to give further time to the consideration of the problem. This request is thought to be not only reasonable but proper. Further time is needed in order to make a proper study of the problem, and then, too, the next Congress should have ample time to go into the matter thoroughly. If an extension of only 1 year is made the next Congress would only have 6 months within which to work the matter out. Moreover, the financial statement shows that the extension will involve no loss to the Government.

The study referred to, among other things, shows that since July 1, 1945, the date on which the loan limit was advanced from 50 to 65 percent, until March 31, 1946, loans have been made as follows:

	Number	Amount
Land-bank loans	18,043	$81,522,000
First-mortgage commissioner loans	1,874	3,064,000
Second-mortgage commissioner loans	8,483	6,610,000
Total	28,400	91,196,000

Hence, the study shows that even after the loan limit was raised from 50 to 65 percent, had it not been for the commissioner loans, 10,357 of the 28,400 farmers applying for loans could not have been served by the Land Banks. In other words, 37 percent of the farmers applying for loans could not have been served by their own institution.

Let us take the record, as revealed by the study, for the year 1945. In 1945 loans were made as follows:

	Number	Amount
Land-bank loans	22,905	$92,986,000
First-mortgage commissioner loans	3,684	6,470,000
Second-mortgage commissioner loans	15,320	22,415,000
Total	41,909	121,871,000

Hence, the study shows that during the year 1945, had it not been for the commissioner loans, 19,004 of the 41,909 farmers applying for loans could not have been served by the land banks. In other words during the year 1945 a fraction over 45 percent of the farmers applying for loans could not have been served by their own institution.

Another thing, with respect to these commissioner loans that we desire to call attention to is the fact that under the changes made in the Federal Farm Loan Act when it was revamped last year, the law now forces the holders of commissioner loans to go into the land-bank system as soon as they qualify. The present situation is this:

First. All farmers who can qualify for land-bank loans are required to take such loans. These farmers are required to take 5 percent of the loan in stock but they are only charged 4 percent interest.

Second. When the 65 percent limitation will not give the farmer the amount of loan he needs, then he is forced to take a land-bank loan for 65 percent of the normal agriculture farm value and is given a second commissioner loan for the extra 10 percent. He takes stock for that part of the loan carried by the land bank, which, of course, is at 4 percent interest, and pays interest at the rate of 5 percent on that part of the loan covered by the second commissioner loan.

Third. If, on account of the risk involved, the farmer is not eligible for a land-bank loan, he is given a first commissioner loan and pays 5 percent interest thereon. As soon, however, as the risk is removed, the farmer is required to convert his commissioner loan into a land-bank loan.

The farmers have cooperated in maintaining the system, and the land banks have experienced no trouble in getting farmers to convert from commissioner to land-bank loans as soon as they become eligible. Last year 39,084—July 31, 1945, to March 31, 1946—farmers holding commissioner loans converted their loans into land-bank loans.

REASONS FOR EXTENDING COMMISSIONER LOANS

First. The authority of the Federal land banks to make loans up to 65 percent of the normal agricultural value became effective less than 12 months ago and the actual lending program under that authority has necessarily been in operation only approximately 9 months. Although the Farm Credit Administration diligently undertook a study to see whether the 65-percent lending authority would enable the land bank system to attain its goal of complete farmer ownership within a reasonable period of time, as desired by the Congress, it has not been humanly possible for the Farm Credit Administration, within the short time available and operating under wartime conditions, to make an accurate recommendation as to the ultimate effect on this cooperative land bank system of discontinuing the authority for the Land Bank Commissioner loans. Such evidence as has been obtained, however, indicates that the system must be in position to offer farmers mortgage loans up to the extent of 75 percent of normal agricultural value in order to survive without subsidy in the form of congressional appropriations from time to time, increased Government capital, or increased interest rates to farmers.

Second. If the maximum loan which can be made is reduced to 65 percent of normal agricultural value and the volume of business declines further, especially in the areas where the loans are small, it may be necessary to make a substantial increase in interest rates in order to continue the services and pay operating costs. We think that it is much better to extend the authority for Land Bank Commissioner loans for 2 years than to incur the risk of having to increase the interest rates to farmers.

Third. Until such time as Farm Credit Administration and the land banks are in position to make a positive recommendation as to the maximum loan in relation to normal agricultural value which a cooperative system can safely make, it would seem unfair to those present stockholders and members of the system who have built up the reserves in the system to deprive them of the aid of the Commissioner lending authority.

Fourth. The study conducted by Farm Credit Administration and the Federal land banks shows that, during the last half of 1945, for example, approximately 45.7 percent of the land bank and commissioner loans which were made by the banks would not have been made if there had not been authority in the system to go up to 75 percent of the normal agricultural value. With many private lenders basing their loan rates on present inflated values, with ample funds available in the hands of these lenders, the usual normal lending volume of the land banks would, in any event, be curtailed. But, to remove from the system at this time the added 10 percent of loan value which it can utilize through the Commissioner's lending authority, would be a step toward reducing the system to some sort of stand-by organization which might not be able to remain as an efficient and effective farmers' cooperative lending organization without Government subsidy or increased interest charges to its borrowers.

Fifth. There is nothing in the record to indicate that other private lenders are as concerned with the interests of the farmers in making loans as the cooperative land-bank system. Farm Credit Administration has a creditable record of carrying out the congressional mandate embodied in the original act of contributing to "agricultural development." Private lenders, on the other hand, in most instances are concerned primarily with the safety of their funds and profits on their investments in the form of interest. As a result of these different points of view, private lenders in most cases are highly selective as to areas, often lending in only the best areas and in many cases only to the best farmers in these areas. This may make it impossible for the other farmers to obtain farm-mortgage funds at reasonable rates if the cooperative land-bank system cannot lend as much as 75 percent of the normal agricultural value.

Sixth. There can be no disadvantage to the Government in continuing the authority for Land Bank Commissioner loans for 2 more years. Since the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation commenced operations in 1934, it has created an earned surplus of over $50,757,000 which can be used to meet any losses on future loans. In addition, it has set up approximately $68,998,396 as a direct valuation reserve against loans already made. Aside from the $50,757,000, the $68,998,396 in reserves are estimated by Farm Credit Administration to be greatly in excess of the losses that will be sustained on its loans. Such valuation reserves are among the other evidences of the sound and conservative practices of Farm Credit Administration in its lending operations. The ample reserves created in the operations of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation are further justification for the Congress relying upon the sound judgment of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Farm Credit Administration, and 11 of the 12 Federal land banks, with the approval of the Bureau of the Budget, in asking that the Commissioner's lending authority be extended for two more years.

Seventh. There is certainly no reasonable prospect for loss to the Government by extending the Commissioner's lending authority for the additional 2 years. There is no reason to believe that Farm Credit Administration would depart from the sound practices in lending which it has heretofore followed. In addition, the evidence shows that it requires, at the present time, only a small amount of funds to make the Land Bank Commissioner loans. Of the approximately $43,697,000 of loans between the percentages of 65 and 75 percent of normal agricultural value made by the Federal land-bank system with second-mortgage commissioner loans during the period July 1, 1945, to March 31, 1946, only approximately $5,000,000 of first- and second-mortgage loan funds was required from the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.

Following is a table showing the volume of Federal land bank and Land Bank Commissioner loans for the period 1925 through December 31, 1945.

Eighth. The Commissioner's lending authority is being utilized in such a way as to foster, rather than interfere with, the growth of the land-bank system as a farmer-owned and farmer-controlled system. The land banks, themselves, are the agencies used by the Land Bank Commissioner for making and servicing Land Bank Commissioner loans. Thus, they have the opportunity as well as the duty to utilize the Commissioner's lending powers in such a way as to aid, rather than deter, the growth of the cooperative farm-mortgage credit principle. The record bears out the fact that the banks have performed this duty properly in the past and are doing so at the present time.

Ninth. It would seem that the Congress would be playing into the hands of private interests and acting against the welfare of the farmers if it did not grant the extension. It is admitted that the land-bank program has reduced interest rates to farmers. It is apparent also that these high interest rates may return unless the extension is granted. We believe that the land-bank system must be maintained as an efficient and going organization with adequate authority to serve promptly, and without waiting for congressional action, those worthy farmers who prefer or require the cooperative system as a means for obtaining their farm-mortgage credit. We think that it would be illogical and that it is unnecessary to cripple the cooperative farm-mortgage system by allowing the authority to expire.

Tenth. There is no prospect of cost or loss to the Government by continuing the authority. But, if the authority is not continued at least during this period when others are lending on inflated values, the earnings of the banks may decline to where they must increase the interest rates charged their farmer borrowers.

OPPOSITION TO ENACTMENT OF H. R. 6477

As heretofore stated, the only opposition the hearing developed came from the Land Bank of Houston and the American Bankers Association.

(a) Land Bank of Houston: The opposition of the Houston Land Bank is based on the belief that the commissioner loans should be discounted and the land banks authorized to make loans up to 75 percent of the appraised normal agricultural value. As heretofore stated, we do not think we have had sufficient experience with 65 percent loans to take this step. Further study and experience are both desirable.

It may be that the solution to the high risk field and to bridge the gap between the 65 and 75 percent loans will be found in giving the Federal land banks authority to make loans similar to those now made by the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation — commissioner loans—charging an extra rate of interest for such loans, and setting aside the extra interest charge as a reserve fund against losses.

(b) American Bankers Association: It is unfortunate that the American Bankers Association saw fit to enter into the controversy by advocating the cutting off of all commissioner loans as of June 30 of this year. I cannot believe that the association gave very much, if any, consideration to the question. Surely this committee has expressed every desire to preserve private lending agencies in every way, and not to hamper or burden them by setting up competitive farm lending agencies operating on Government capital. This committee, on more than one occasion, has expressed the desire to see all farm lending agencies farmer-owned and farmer-controlled; but in bringing this working objective about, we cannot believe that either the committee or the American Bankers Association desire to either destroy or cripple our great Federal land bank system. Only this year this committee brought in legislation laying the foundation upon which to erect the farm lending agencies, with the avowed purpose in mind of following up the legislation with further legislation to coordinate and properly integrate the agencies. The American Bankers Association joined in this worthy undertaking. Yet, we now find the American Bankers Association rushing in, in an attempt to cripple, if not destroy, the greatest of these farm-lending agencies, the Federal land bank system.

Probably it would not be out of place to remind the American Bankers Association of some of the governmental subsidies and concessions the banks of this country have been enjoying over the years. Lest we forget, let us catalog a few of them:

First. Private banks buy and sell Government bonds, notes, and certificates. They have made profits on the purchase and sale of Government obligations. Bonds are priced to allow handling charges for the banks.

Second. Banks have a large volume of Government deposits on which no interest is paid. Banks purchase Government bonds, notes, and certificates and establish an account for the Government on which they pay no interest.

Third. The Federal Reserve banks help their member banks to avoid losses on Government bonds bought by the member banks by furnishing an immediate market for the bonds.

Fourth. According to the annual report of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, transmitted August 21, 1945, the Government has a substantial investment of noninterest-bearing capital—$150,000,000—in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for the benefit of the banks.

Fifth. The Government is guaranteeing loans by banks, including GI loans, housing loans, and loans to small business.

Sixth. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, a wholly Government-owned corporation, has been, and still is, rendering numerous services to private banks.

Seventh. The banks have available without cost a large volume of free funds made up of deposits by the Government and the public generally.

Eighth. The private banking system, through the Federal Reserve System, has the power to issue currency.

It ill behooves the American Bankers Association to rush in and call the kettle black. We are striving, in a sensible and constructive way, to bring about farmer-owned and farmer-controlled lending agencies, agencies that are free of all Government subsidies and concessions, and if the American Bankers Association would take a like view and make a like effort, we would probably get along a little better. Certainly it is not asking too much to ask the American Bankers Association to clean its own house before voluntarily offering its services to clean house for the farmers.

TO SUMMARIZE

First. Cutting off the commissioner loans as of June 30, 1946, as provided for in the amendment adopted by the committee, means, at best, that no commissioner loans could be made until sometime next year. Congress will adjourn in a short while, certainly until after the election, probably to the first of the year, and no action could be taken to revive such loans until Congress gets back in session.

Second. If such loans are cut off on June 30, 1946, some 40 or 50 percent of the farmers will be forced to abandon their own institution and go to some private lending agency for their loans. If such a condition should prevail, it is unreasonable to expect that the farmers will lose faith in a system that furnishes relief to so few?

Third. Cutting off such loans at one fell swoop will greatly cripple the Federal land-bank system, probably do irreparable damage to the system, in that it would greatly curtail the earning capacity of the system and force the system to either run in the red or increase interest rates.

Fourth. The Federal land bank system has been a godsend to the farmers of America and should be strengthened, rather than weakened. It is operating efficiently and successfully at present without any cost to the Government, and common sense and just ordinary prudence dictate that it would be not only unwise, but manifestly unfair to the farmers of America who have their money invested in the system, to take hasty and uncalled for action that would, in all probability, strike the system such a blow that it would take years to recover from. "Haste makes waste" is an oft-quoted maxim. Haste in this case may mean more than waste, it may mean the beginning of the end of a great institution that has served the farmers over the years faithfully and efficiently.

No wonder the farmers from one end of this land to the other are exercised over the action of the committee in cutting off the commissioner loans as of June 30 of this year. They are demanding that the system be held intact until time has been given to make a comprehensive study upon which action can be taken that will, at least, preserve to the farmers the service they are today enjoying under the system. This is not only a reasonable, it is a sensible, request, and one, in our opinion, the Congress should comply with.

A complete picture of the loans made by the land banks from 1925 to 1945, and by the Land Bank Commissioner from 1933 to 1945 is as follows:

Mr. Speaker, the extension of commissioner loans has been endorsed by all the great farm organizations, as shown by the following letters and telegrams from the National Grange, American Farm Bureau, National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, Farmers Educational and Cooperative Union, and National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, which I ask unanimous consent to include in my remarks at this point:

THE NATIONAL GRANGE,
Washington, D. C., June 19, 1946.

Mr. JOHN FLANNAGAN,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. FLANNAGAN: As you know the authority of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation to make loans expires June 30 of this year. To meet the needs of farmers and meet the competition of other lenders, it has been necessary for the land banks to grant a supplemental or Commissioner loan in nearly half the cases of loans closed. After June 30, unless the right to make Commissioner loans is extended, it seems apparent that the banks will lose from a third to half their business. This loss would necessitate either a sharp curtailment in the loan facilities in district and field, or an increase in the interest rate, neither of which contingencies is in the interest of the farmers.

The National Grange has constantly worked to strengthen this farm-loan system, especially its cooperative features, and has tried to bring about conditions under which the direct loans by the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation could be discontinued. However, we do not want to see the discontinuance effected in such a way that it will handicap or injure the cooperative land-bank system. At the time the Congress raised the loanable base from 50 percent to 65 percent, we strongly opposed the change on the following grounds:

1. We maintained that the interest rate on bonds would suffer by increasing the hazard, and all farmers would thus be penalized.

2. We maintained that these was a field for a 75-percent loan which would have to be filled, and that the banks would soon be back asking for the renewal of direct lending.

3. We maintained that loans in excess of 50 percent could be made on a self-supporting basis if the interest rate was increased sufficiently to meet the additional hazard, and that a system of applying such increases would enable the land banks to make the higher loans and thus eliminate the need for the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation as a lending institution. We proposed a definite practical way in which this could be done.

4. We said it would be far better to provide a permanent cure than a fair weather cure which would necessitate opening up the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation with every squall.

During the year all 12 land banks have come to concede that we were right in our contention that the 65-percent loan would not fill the bill. A number of them also now agree on the principle we advocated for a higher-rate loan adjusted to meet the additional risk. We are confident that if the committee studies the question thoroughly, it will concur with us that the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation can be discontinued as a lending agency and at the same time benefit instead of injuring the land-bank system, by adopting some plan similar to that which we have recommended. Obviously there is not time to develop and pass legislation of this kind before June 30. In fact that is a task which may require some months of research and study to develop it on a thoroughly sound basis, and since Congress is about to adjourn, and there would be little time before June 30, 1947, we recommend:

1. That the lending life of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation be extended to June 30, 1948.

2. That the Farm Credit Administration be requested to report to your committee recommendations for a loan system with a loanable base of 50 percent of the value of the farm, with a plan for increasing the interest rate to meet the increased hazards arising from advancing the loanable base from 50 percent to 75 or 80 percent.

Very truly yours,

A. S. GOSS,
Master, the National Grange.

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION,
Washington, D. C., June 21, 1946.

Hon. JOHN W. FLANNAGAN, Jr.,
Chairman, Committee on Agriculture,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CHAIRMAN FLANNAGAN: We are very much concerned over the action taken by the House Committee on Agriculture in approving an amendment to H. R. 6477 which practically nullifies the authorization for commissioner loans by prohibiting any more such loans after June 30, 1946, unless both the Senate and the House by concurrent resolution specify when these loans may be made. We believe it would be a serious mistake to discontinue commissioner loans at this time, particularly due to the delay in the enactment of the Flannagan bill, H. R. 4873, which provides for the reorganization of all farm credit facilities. Authority for such loans should be continued until a proper study and reorganization of all farm credit facilities can be made.

As you know, under present authority, Federal land banks may make loans up to 65 percent of the normal value of the land. In order to provide for loans in excess of 65 percent, the land bank commissioner is authorized to make loans jointly with Federal land banks and in some cases in high risk areas where Federal land-bank loans cannot be made, he may make the entire loan up to 75 percent of the normal value of the land.

Due to the competition of insurance companies and private banks, almost half of the loans made during the last 6 months of 1945 were joint Federal land bank and commissioner loans. Unless authorization for commissioner loans is continued, many farmers will be unable to obtain any loan in certain areas where lending hazards and many economic situations necessitate the use of commissioner loans alone. Federal land banks cannot make loans in these areas. Higher interest rates may result if commissioner loans are not authorized.

We therefore wish to respectfully urge that the committee amendment be eliminated and that H. R. 6477, as introduced, be approved in order to permit the continuation of authority to make commissioner loans for another 2 years so that the needs of farmers may be adequately served, pending the reorganization of farm credit facilities.

Sincerely yours,

EDW. A. O'NEAL, President.

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF FARMER COOPERATIVES,
Washington, D. C., June 19, 1946.

Hon. JOHN W. FLANNAGAN, Jr.,
Chairman, House Committee on Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. FLANNAGAN: As you know the life of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation terminates with this fiscal year, June 30.

The recent lending reports of the Farm Credit Administration indicate that between one-third and one-half of the current loans now make use of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation. Therefore, if this agency is not continued the operation of the Farm Credit Administration will be restricted.

It was our hope a year ago when the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation was extended for 1 year that during that period some basis could be worked out for handling loans up to 75 or 80 percent of the appraised valuation through the Federal land banks. Obviously this cannot be done now in the short time remaining. Therefore, we recommend that the life of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation be extended through June 30, 1946, and that during the interim the Farm Credit Administration be instructed to present to your committee recommendations for a program for integrating the functions of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation with the Federal land banks on a self-supporting basis.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN H. DAVIS,
Executive secretary.

FARMERS EDUCATIONAL AND COOPERATIVE UNION OF AMERICA,
Washington, D. C., June 17, 1946.

JOHN W. FLANNAGAN,
Chairman, House Agricultural Committee, House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR CHAIRMAN FLANNAGAN: The National Farmers Union is strongly in favor of the approval by the committee and the adoption by Congress of H. R. 6477, the bill sponsored by you which would extend through June 30, 1948 the authorization for the making of land-bank-commissioner loans through the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation. Indeed, we favor the extension of the law covering these loans for a 5-year period, and are inclined to believe that there is a permanent place in the cooperative agricultural credit system for this type of authority.

Of all economic groups, farmers have greatest need for flexibility in their credit system. Commissioner loans were devised in order that they might be available for use in special instances. If it became necessary to attempt to meet such emergency loan needs through the land-bank loan, there is no doubt that over a period of years serious losses to the latter system would be entailed. Moreover, without the authority to make loans up to 75 percent of normal value being lodged somewhere in the agricultural credit system, great numbers of farmers would suffer hardships that otherwise they might avoid. We believe that commissioner loans help materially to keep farm ownership in the hands of operators who otherwise would be forced out of agriculture or reduced to the status of tenant or laborer.

The present provisions of law, placed on the statute books in considerable part because of your own efforts, authorize the land banks to make loans up to 65 percent of normal appraised value. But the land banks have not had sufficient experience in operation under this new authority to enable them to determine accurately to what extent this provision can replace commissioner loans. It is our view that there probably always will be need for making a limited number of loans of the type of commissioner loans. At any rate, we believe it is too early to risk dispensing with the authority or curtailing it.

Accordingly, we hope your bill will be approved without amendment.

Sincerely yours,

RUSSELL SMITH,
Legislative Secretary.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 16, 1946.

Hon. JOHN W. FLANNAGAN,
Committee on Agriculture, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

It would be in the public interest for your bill H. R. 6477 as introduced to be enacted into law.

CHARLES W. HOLMAN,
Secretary, National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

Mr. D'EWART. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD and include two telegrams.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wyoming?

There was no objection.

Mr. D'EWART. Mr. Speaker, H. R. 6477 in effect ends the operation of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation. This Corporation was established in 1933 when the demand for farm mortgage credit far exceeded the funds available. The main purpose of the corporation was to provide funds for the Federal land banks and for commissioner loans to farmers who needed more funds than were possible under Federal land-bank mortgages.

To accomplish this the Corporation was authorized to issue and have outstanding at any one time $2,000,000,000 of bonds fully and unconditionally guaranteed both as to principal and interest by the United States. The Corporation is further authorized to invest its funds in mortgage loans made in the name of the Land Bank Commissioner, under provision of section 32 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933. The Commissioners' lending authority under this act, as amended, expires July 1, 1946.

In testimony before the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations concerning Government corporations, the need for the continuance of this corporation was definitely established. The need is twofold:

First. The Federal land bank cannot make loans of more than 65 percent of the normal agricultural value. The first mortgage commissioner loans are usually made in areas that are considered hazardous and to farmers who cannot qualify for land-bank loans.

Second. The continuance of this corporation is needed so that the corporation can buy Federal land bank bonds when there is not any other market available. It is true the amount of our standing loans has been greatly reduced. The peak of land-bank-commissioner loans was in 1936 and amounted to $836,778,547. In December, 1945 these were reduced to $228,397,216, or 25 percent of the former amount. While this particular type of credit is being curtailed at this time, it was most urgently needed in 1933 when the corporation was set up and the time may come again when these loans will be very seriously needed to carry farm operations through deflation periods, drought periods and other hazards of the farming industry.

I urge, Mr. Speaker, that this resolution be so amended as to permit the continuance of the operation of this corporation.

In support of this plea, I submit two telegrams giving the need of commissioner loans in Montana.

GREAT FALLS, MONT., June 12, 1946.

Congressman WESLEY A. D'EWART,
Washington, D. C.:

Until adjustments permitting greater liberality in land-bank loans are made discontinuance of commissioner loans would be disastrous to land-bank system and would divert business to competitors. Urge defeat of bill to discontinue commissioner loans.

F. F. LYMAN,
President, Rocky Mountain National Farm Loan Association.

MILES CITY, MONT., June 11, 1946.

Hon. WESLEY A. D'EWART,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

Understand that House committee reported out to discontinue commissioner funds as of June 30, 1946. We feel this action if approved by Congress, will work a severe hardship in eastern Montana. Many prospective borrowers can't make the grade on straight loans due to increased costs and the fact that this section of the State was much slower in coming back to normal than other parts of the Nation. Appreciate anything you can do to see that commissioner funds are continued for another year.

RAY BAILEY,
Director Powder River National Farm Loan Association.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the eleventh sentence of section 32 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended (title 12, U. S. C., 1016), is amended by striking out "July 1, 1946" wherever it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof "July 1, 1948."

SEC. 2. The last two sentences of section 3 of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation Act, as amended (title 12, U. S. C., 1020b) are amended to read as follows: "The Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation is authorized to repay to the Secretary of the Treasury on behalf of the United States from time to time such portions of the amounts subscribed to the capital stock of the Corporation as are found by the board of directors to be in excess of the capital necessary to enable the Corporation to carry out its functions as authorized by law. The proceeds of such repayments shall be held in the Treasury of the United States as a fund available for subscription, by the Governor on behalf of the United States with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to the capital of the Corporation when, in the judgment of the directors of the Corporation, additional subscriptions to its capital are necessary."

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FLANNAGAN: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That the eleventh sentence of section 32 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended (title 12, U. S. C., 1016), is amended by striking out 'July 1, 1946,' wherever it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof 'July 1, 1947.'

"SEC. 2. The last two sentences of section 3 of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation Act, as amended (title 12, U. S. C., 1020b), are amended to read as follows: 'The Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation is authorized to repay to the Secretary of the Treasury on behalf of the United States from time to time such portions of the amounts subscribed to the capital stock of the Corporation as are found by the board of directors to be in excess of the capital necessary to enable the Corporation to carry out its functions as authorized by law. The proceeds of such repayments shall be held in the Treasury of the United States as a fund available for subscription, by the Governor on behalf of the United States with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to the capital of the Corporation when, in the judgment of the directors of the Corporation, additional subscriptions to its capital are necessary.'

"SEC. 3. The Farm Credit Administration is hereby authorized and directed to make a thorough study of ways and means of making available to the farmers through the Federal Land Bank System loans similar to those now made by the Land Bank Commissioner through the Federal Mortgage Corporation. The study shall be completed as soon as practicable and shall be submitted to the Agricultural Committee of the House of Representatives and Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry with recommendations not later than March 1, 1947."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. FLANNAGAN].

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD and include several letters and telegrams with reference to the necessity of extending this act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. POAGE] may have permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. POAGE. Mr. Speaker, I believe that the cooperative credit provided by the Federal land-bank system is preferable to any direct Government-lending program. The Land Bank Commissioner loans are direct Government loans of Government money. They served a valuable purpose during the days of depression. These loans were, and were intended to be, inflationary. They are still inflationary. I do not think that it is good judgment to treat our present bad case of inflation with this remedy, helpful as it was during a period of deflation.

I have, therefore, opposed the continuation of the commissioner loans. I still believe that we would be well advised to take the Government out of the direct land-loan business, holding the organization intact for use at a future date if a recurrence of deflationary conditions should make it desirable.

The record of the Houston Land Bank is the best in the Nation. It was the first to repay all the money it owed to the Government. It was the first to become entirely farmer owned. On April 17, 1946, the directors of the Houston bank passed resolutions suggesting the abolishment of the commissioner loans. I quote from the minutes of the directors of that great institution:

The directors entered into a discussion as to the future needs for the lending powers of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation. It is the feeling of the directors that, even though this bank now uses commissioner loans, the time has come when we should consider making loans without the aid of this emergency type of lending. Upon motion by Director Denny, seconded by Director Pumphrey, and unanimously carried, the following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation was established in January 1934, at a time when a severe economic depression had gripped the country; and

"Whereas the availability of these funds has helped thousands of farmers retain their homes and, through the medium of refinancing, make more stable the farm economy as well as that of business institutions; and

"Whereas the credit needs of the country today are not as acute as they were in 1933; Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That this board is of the opinion that the emergency period has passed and that we should state to the Texas Representatives in Congress of the United States that it is our opinion that the authority to make commissioner loans should be discontinued after June 30, 1946 in order that the fine record that has been made can be used as an example of the wise use of Government emergency lending in times of distress to the end that such funds may be available again should economic conditions in the future become so acute as to cause the need for the return of such a Goverment agency."

Mr. Speaker, 1 year ago the Farm Credit Administration suggested that if we would but allow them one more year, they would be able to wind up these inflationary loans. Now they suggest a 2-year extension. I cannot but believe that such an extention would be to establish them on a permanent basis. I could not support that, but we have today been able to work out an agreement for a 1-year extension with an agreement that the Farm Credit Administration should make a study of methods of turning this business over to the land banks and that such a report should be in the hands of Congress not later than next spring. I believe that this course may well result in a final settlement of this problem, and I shall not, therefore, oppose the measure at this time.

RIGHT OF FILIPINOS AND EAST INDIANS TO BECOME NATURALIZED CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. LESINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 3517) to authorize the admission into the United States of persons of races indigenous to India and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3517) to authorize the admission into the United States of persons of races indigenous to India, having met after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate and agree to the same.

JOHN LESINSKI,
EDWARD H. REES,
N. M. MASON,
Managers on the Part of the House.

J. W. FULBRIGHT,
HOMER FERGUSON,
JOSEPH H. BALL,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3517) combining the principal features of H. R. 776, granting certain privileges in the immigration and naturalization laws to Filipinos, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report, namely:

That the substance of the amendments offered by the Senate in effect represent the substance of action taken by the House on separate bills dealing with East Indians and Filipinos. The managers on the part of the House recede from their disagreement so that the bill may pass both Houses in order to become law before July 4, 1946, the day on which the Philippines will receive their independence. The managers believe that at a later date minor desirable amendments can be introduced and enacted.

JOHN LESINSKI,
EDWARD H. REES,
N. M. MASON,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LESINSKI. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. May I ask the gentleman to explain the conference report?

Mr. LESINSKI. The House had previously passed H. R. 3517, known as the Indian bill, and H. R. 776, known as the Filipino bill. The Senate also passed the two bills. They now find that if the President signs one bill the other bill will be null and void. Senator BALL again brought up H. R. 3517, took a portion of the Filipino bill, H. R. 776, and offered it as an amendment to H. R. 3517, to which the House agreed.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Both bills had previously passed the House?

Mr. LESINSKI. Yes.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BELL (at the request of Mr. GOSSETT) was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. DAUGHTON of Virginia (at the request of Mr. GOSSETT) was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an address by Mr. Nodel.

Mr. BARRETT of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. LANE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include some letters.

Mr. HAYS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. HAVENNER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial appearing in the San Francisco Call-Bulletin.

Mr. MURRAY of Wisconsin asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and to include an article from the New York Times.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York (at the request of Mr. HANCOCK) was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a baccalaureate address by Chancellor Samuel P. Capen of the University of Buffalo on June 2, 1946.

Mr. JENSEN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances; to include in one an editorial from the Des Moines Tribune, and in the other some figures regarding exports and imports of beef and pork.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH asked and was given permission to revise and extend the remarks he made today and include several House resolutions, certain extracts from a recent report by the Comptroller General, certain extracts from committee hearings and newspaper articles.

THE LATE PRESIDENT OF CHILE

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, we learn with deep regret of the untimely passing of a distinguished leader of a great people. President Rios of Chile has laid aside the performance of his executive duties and gone to his permanent rest. My association with President Rios, both in Santiago and in Washington, convinced me that he was an exceptionally able leader of his country which has suffered a great loss in his passing. I am very confident that the entire membership of the House join me in expressing to the great people of Chile our deep and heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement.

RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT

Mr. BATES of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 3420) to provide for refunds to railroad employees in certain cases, so as to place the various States on an equal basis, under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, with respect to contributions of employees.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman please explain this legislation?

Mr. BATES of Kentucky. This bill endeavors to correct an inequity that has existed for the past several years, as a matter of fact, ever since the creation of the Railroad Retirement Act. Prior to that time 10 States collected from both the employer and the employee whereas in the other 38 States the employees did not pay, and this is an attempt to have that money refunded in those 10 States. Incidentally, Massachusetts is one of the States that paid in.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. That is all it does? It merely seeks to refund the money to these railroad employees?

Mr. BATES of Kentucky. Yes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That (a) notwithstanding any other provision of law, in any case where an employee amount (as hereinafter defined) was paid from a State unemployment fund to the Unemployment Trust Fund, an aggregate amount equal thereto shall be paid from the Unemployment Trust Fund, as refunds, to employees who paid into the State fund the contributions upon which such payment into the Unemployment Trust Fund was based, except that in case any such employee is deceased, payment shall be made to his estate; and the payment so made in the case of any employee shall be in proportion to the contributions paid by such employee into the State fund: Provided, That payment in any such case shall be made only if application therefor is made to the Railroad Retirement Board within 12 months after the date of enactment of this act.

(b) As used in this act—

(1) The term "employee amount" means any amount paid from a State unemployment fund to the Unemployment Trust Fund which would not have been required to be paid, under the provisions of section 13 (c) of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, if such section 13 (c) had not required payment of amounts based on contributions collected from employees.

(2) The term "Unemployment Trust Fund" means the fund established by section 904 of the Social Security Act.

(3) The term "employees" has the same meaning as in the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

House Resolution 677 was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HENRY asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial which appeared on June 25, 1946, in the Daily Jefferson County Union of Fort Atkinson, Wis., on the subject of the British loan.

Mr. CLASON and Mr. FULLER asked and were given permission to extend their remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. MUNDT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and further to extend his remarks and include some extraneous material.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. HAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Tuesday next, at the conclusion of the legislative program of the day and following any special orders heretofore entered, I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. VOORHIS] is recognized for 20 minutes.

EXISTENCE OF IMPORTANT SMALL BUSINESS THREATENED BY BIG BUSINESS PATENT MANIPULATION

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, repeatedly I have pointed out that control of patents and manipulation of patent rights can become, wrongly used, one of the most powerful instruments of monopoly in America today.

I do not refer to the basic provision of the patent law which gives to an inventor the right to a monopoly upon his invention for a 17-year period. I refer instead to the practice of powerful corporations in prostituting legitimate patent rights to monopolistic ends, and particularly to the action of such large corporations in preventing scientific and industrial development from taking place as a deliberate policy. The case that I want to bring to the attention of the House today is that of the Bodine Soundrive Co., of Los Angeles, Calif., and the relationship it has had with the Curtiss-Wright Corp.

On January 2, 1943, Curtiss and Bodine entered into a contract under the terms of which Curtiss agreed to pay not in excess of $5,000 per month to enable Bodine to carry on inventive scientific and development work in Bodine's factory in Los Angeles. In return for this Curtiss was given an option to take exclusive licenses on any patents taken out by Bodine covering inventions made by this company. These licenses were to be given to Curtiss at half price.

These option rights extended even to inventions made and paid for by the Bodine Co. prior to entering into the contract with Curtiss. The contract further provided that Curtiss could discontinue the agreement and stop the payments to Bodine but would still continue to be able to exercise the option agreement until such time as a proper termination of the agreement had been made. And while Bodine has the right under the contract to terminate on 1 year's notice, it was provided that even if Bodine took this action it would not impair Curtiss' right to demand an exclusive license on any inventions made prior to the effective date of termination and to prevent Bodine from licensing any other company to use such inventions or processes unless released by Curtiss.

The present situation is that in August 1945 Bodine informed Curtiss that it wished to terminate its agreement, the reason being that Bodine found itself completely hamstrung and unable to proceed either with its business or with the further development of jet propulsion, which was its principal line of endeavor. However, as I have already pointed out, this notice of termination will become effective in August of 1946 as to any future inventions of Bodine. It will not, however, release inventions or developments made prior to that date. These will still be controlled by Curtiss.

The next fact is that while Curtiss has ceased payments to Bodine, it has not released Bodine from the option agreement and has thus effectively tied up the company. The reason for this action, as will be clear as we proceed further, appears to be that Curtiss has decided not to proceed with the Bodine developments, but to push, instead, certain other inventions which it more directly controls.

One of the most serious aspects of this whole affair lies in the fact that Curtiss appears to have effectively prevented Navy representatives from actually seeing the jet-propulsion developments made by Bodine during the period of the war and at the time when Germany's buzz-bomb weapons were being used against England with such telling effect.

An account of the events which took place in connection with this matter as reported by Mr. A. G. Bodine in a statement signed by him on April 26, 1946, follows:

During the latter part of June 1944 Soundrive was visited one afternoon by S. T. Robinson, lieutenant, United States Naval Reserve, of the Power Plants Branch, Bureau of Aeronautics. This visit was arranged the previous evening during a preliminary interview of Mr. Bodine by Mr. Robinson in the Los Angeles apartment of Mr. Burnam Adams. Mr. Adams was then manager of Wright-Aero, Ltd., a west coast division of Curtiss-Wright Corp, the latter who was also Mr. Robinson's employer before he entered the Navy. This preliminary meeting was arranged by Mr. Adams' telephoning Mr. Bodine and explaining that Mr. Robinson was in town and desired an interview.

During this interview Mr. Robinson stated that he was in England during the early landings of the German V-1 missile. He had observed a periodic combustion phenomenon which seemed to be an essential feature of this German missile. When Mr. Robinson observed this missile he was reminded of some information he had previously noted at Curtiss-Wright concerning the periodic combustion, "resonant" propulsion engines being developed by Soundrive under Mr. Bodine's direction.

Immediately upon his arrival in the United States after seeing the German weapon, Mr. Robinson planned to discuss the general engineering features of this pulse-jet propulsion subject with Mr. Bodine, and this was the primary reason for his desiring an interview with Mr. Bodine. Preliminary discussions in Mr. Adams' apartment consisted mainly of a brief résumé of Soundrive's work in this general field. It was decided that a personal visit by Mr. Robinson to Soundrive's laboratory would be of benefit to the war effort. This visit was arranged for the following day.

During his visit to Soundrive's laboratory Mr. Robinson learned of Soundrive's theories and aims in the pulse-jet field, and he also had an opportunity to see the pertinent apparatus which was being tested at that particular time.

At the close of his visit Mr. Robinson pointed out to Mr. Bodine that very probably the major portion of the pulse-jet activity at Soundrive was of great importance to the Nation's war effort. Mr. Bodine pointed out that at that moment Soundrive was completely dependent financially upon Curtiss-Wright and probably would have to follow their instructions relative to any program.

Mr. Robinson replied to the effect that because of the importance of the subject Mr. Bodine should bear in mind the patriotic feature in any matter of joint decision relative to the advisability of further investigation of pulse-jet propulsion. Mr. Robinson also pointed out that very soon he would be visiting Navy headquarters and would be turning in a report on this subject. Mr. Bodine invited further inquiry and offered any assistance which he might possibly supply.

On the morning of June 28, 1944 (10 a. m. Pacific war time or 1 p. m. eastern war time), Mr. Bodine received a long-distance telephone call from Mr. Robert L. Earle, general manager of Curtiss-Wright propeller division, with whom all Soundrive contractual relations were concerned. Mr. Earle said that he had just recently received word that the Navy Department had learned of Soundrive's activities in the field of jet propulsion; and he said that he would have to ask Soundrive (Mr. Bodine in particular) to make no further disclosures of Soundrive's work in the field of jet propulsion to Navy personnel. Mr. Earle inquired of Mr. Bodine regarding the possibility of Mr. Adams' disclosing Soundrive's activities to additional Navy personnel who were visiting the west coast with Mr. Robinson. Mr. Bodine replied to the effect that he did not know whether Mr. Adams had disclosed the subject to any other Navy personnel. Mr. Earle pointed out that he felt that Soundrive would be visited again by Navy personnel quite soon.

Mr. Earle further pointed out that he was sending one of Curtiss' engineers, who would be thoroughly instructed by Mr. Earle as to how these Navy personnel should be met when they arrived at Soundrive. Mr. Earle stated that he would also have one of Curtiss' representatives take some sort of story to Navy headquarters in Washington to quiet down immediately Navy enthusiasm regarding Soundrive's activity. Mr. Earle then stated that the necessity of an early visit to Curtiss' offices by Mr. Bodine was indicated. Mr. Earle said that such a visit was necessary in order for Mr. Bodine to be clearly informed of Curtiss' plans relative to Soundrive research program.

The next communication received from Curtiss was a telegram, July 1, 1944, informing Soundrive that a representative from the engineering department at Curtiss-Wright would arrive at Soundrive within a week. This telegram also included further instructions from Mr. Earle (Bob) to Burnie (Mr. Burnam Adams) to the effect that Mr. Adams should not disclose Soundrive's jet propulsion work to any party.

The Curtiss engineer arrived July 8, 1944, and conveyed again the anxiety of Mr. Earle, and the management of Curtiss in general, concerning Navy interest in Soundrive's jet propulsion work.

Mr. Warfle, lieutenant commander, United States Naval Reserve, telephoned Soundrive on the morning of July 10, 1944. Commander Warfle asked for an appointment for further discussions regarding Soundrive's work in jet propulsion. Commander Warfle mentioned that he would have with him Lieutenant Parker, also of the United States Naval Reserve.

The Curtiss engineer sent a telegram from Los Angeles to Mr. Earle telling of the intended visit of Commander Warfle and Lieutenant Parker. Mr. Earle replied immediately with a telegram pointing out that he was under the impression that Commander Warfle would be the only visitor from the Navy. Mr. Earle asked, who was Lieutenant Parker? This latter question was apparently answered by communication to Mr. Earle directly from the Curtiss engineer. This Curtiss engineering department man also pointed out to Mr. Bodine that apparently Mr. Earle was extremely anxious about the whole situation and that he was instructed by Mr. Earle to hold Soundrive disclosures to the Navy to a minimum.

The Curtiss engineer further pointed out that Mr. Earle particularly did not want the Navy to know about the most recent and novel forms of Soundrive's apparatus; and therefore in following out Mr. Earle's instructions this Curtiss representative would have to ask that Soundrive personnel dismantle the most recent forms of the apparatus before the arrival of Commander Warfle and Lieutenant Parker. Under the direction of Curtiss' instructed representative the spherical wave forms of the Soundrive combustion resonator were dismantled and the apparatus was removed from the immediate premises and hidden behind the test-yard fence. Curtiss' representative seemed reluctant to do this; however, it was clearly apparent that he was working under direct instructions from Curtiss' management.

During the visit of Commander Warfie and Lieutenant Parker only very early forms of Soundrive's apparatus were shown. It was further pointed out during this meeting that Navy financial aid, or advice concerning desirable trends of Soundrive's pulse-jet development program, was not useful in Curtiss' program. The general story given to Commander Warfie and Lieutenant Parker was to the effect that the Soundrive program was concerned only with fundamental research and it was most desirable to maintain the program in this form to comply with Curtiss' plans.

The Curtiss engineer and Mr. Bodine arrived at the Caldwell, N. J., plant of Curtiss-Wright, July 21, 1944. Upon his arrival Mr. Bodine was informed by Mr. Earle that Curtiss had not been successful in completely satisfying Navy interest at Washington headquarters and therefore a visit to Navy headquarters was necessary.

Approximately July 26, 1944, a conference was held in the office of Captain Spangler at the Bureau of Aeronautics' headquarters, Washington, D. C. During this conference Captain Spangler pointed out to Mr. Earle that Curtiss owed the Navy the favor of accepting an experimental contract or, in any other way the Navy might find desirable, aid the Navy as much as possible in its investigation of the German V-1 weapon. Mr. Earle promised Captain Spangler that Curtiss would do anything it could to aid the Navy in this investigation. Captain Spangler pointed out that probably some forms of the apparatus should be built and tested; and he had been given the impression by Navy engineers that the Bodine Soundrive Co. could probably be of assistance in this program.

With the help of the Navy Department, Curtiss engineers and Mr. Bodine were escorted to see a recently captured model of the German V-1 weapon at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio. After studying this weapon the group who visited Captain Spangler returned directly to Caldwell, N. J. Mr. Earle again repeated his instructions to Mr. Bodine to the effect that Mr. Bodine, or other personnel of Soundrive, were not to make any disclosures to Navy personnel. Mr. Earle pointed out that the management of Curtiss had instructed him that Curtiss, and not Soundrive, was the more experienced party for dealing properly with the Navy.

Soon after the first of August 1944, Mr. Bodine returned to Los Angeles. Mr. Bodine received a letter from Mr. Earle dated August 19, 1944, outlining Curtiss' views and instructions to Soundrive relative to the subject of pulse-jet propulsion. In this letter it was clearly pointed out that Soundrive should continue excusively upon the bazooka form of the program. This bazooka program was a recently new project at Soundrive concerned with the development of a high-pressure gas compressor for running turbines which in turn could be connected to propellers for aircraft propulsion. It had been previously pointed out by Mr. Earle and other members of the management of Curtiss that Soundrive should concentrate upon the development of equipment which would tend to maintain propellers as an essential element in aircraft propulsion rather than develop the earlier pulse-jet work of Soundrive concerned with propulsion apparatus which eliminates propellers. Therefore, Mr. Earle's letter instructing Soundrive to stay exclusively with the high pressure, or bazooka, form in its research program was in part apparently a continuation of the previous desires of Curtiss.

In this letter of August 19, 1944, Mr. Earle specifically pointed out that Soundrive should not work upon the forms similar to the German V-1. Mr. Earle further pointed out that it was not Curtiss' desire to obtain a Navy contract to work upon these pulse-jet forms. In this letter Mr. Earle indicated that a member of Curtiss would visit the Navy Department to make possible carrying out Curtiss' desires.

Soundrive was subsequently visited a number of times by Navy engineers but because of the exclusion of pulse-jet work there never was, during these later visits, any really pertinent data to show regarding further development in the direction of pulse-jet propulsion in which the Navy was primarily interested. Curtiss had effectively prevented development in this pulse-jet field by ordering Soundrive to do no work in this direction and also by Curtiss' declining any Navy contracts for Soundrive to work in the pulse-jet field. Curtiss' contract with Soundrive prevented Soundrive from dealing directly with the Navy Department. However, Curtiss' instructing Soundrive to stop research on pulse-jets was in violation of the Curtiss-Soundrive contract. Soundrive's complete financial dependence upon Curtiss made possible this sort of contractual violation by Curtiss. Also Soundrive assumed that Curtiss' instruction possibly reflected a reversal of Navy headquarters feelings concerning pulse-jets, altering those feeling indicated during Mr. Bodine's visit in July 1944. This assumption was later proven incorrect during discussions with Navy engineers. On October 9, 1945, Mr. Bodine notified Mr. Earle that Soundrive desired a friendly termination of its relations with Curtiss.

The Curtiss-Soundrive contract includes a provision whereby Curtiss "adopts" inventions of Soundrive. This "adoption" consists of a first option to take an exclusive license controlling the disposition of Soundrive patents. The contract stipulates that this option is maintained until each particular patent or application is released from "adoption." Therefore, the December 21, 1945, telegram indicating in the last line that releases will be forwarded to Bodine within a week thereafter has provided a continuing restraint by Curtiss, which restraint has been implemented by Curtiss' failure to provide these releases-from-adoption. All of Soundrive's jet propulsion patent applications were adopted by Curtiss.

A. G. BODINE, Jr.

APRIL 26, 1946.

Furthermore, at the present time the fact that Curtiss has refused to release Bodine from its agreement, the further fact that Curtiss meanwhile refuses to make any payments under the agreement, and the further fact that Curtiss continues to control all the inventions of the Bodine Co., creates a situation in which it is impossible for Bodine to continue its business or to enter effectively into a contractual relationship with the Navy or anyone else for that matter for the further development of its important inventions.

Curtiss evidently does not intend to proceed with the development of Bodine's inventions nor to release Bodine, until forced to do so, to carry on its business by licensing its inventions elsewhere or entering into contracts for their development. It will be recalled that the excess-profits tax was repealed as of the first of the year 1946, and it is therefore significant that as a condition to Curtiss releasing Bodine from their agreement, Curtiss stipulated that all outstanding expenses incurred by Bodine in 1946 should be billed in 1945. To this Bodine refused, and I believe quite properly, to agree.

A study of documents connected with this case as well as conversations with Mr. Bodine about the matter make possible the following summary of contractual relationships between Curtiss-Wright Corp. and Bodine Soundrive Co.:

CONTRACTURAL RELATIONS BETWEEN CURTISS-WRIGHT CORP. AND BODINE SOUNDRIVE CO.

A contract dated January 2, 1943, was written by Curtiss and signed by Curtiss and Bodine. This contract recites that financial reimbursement will be provided by Curtiss to aid Bodine in the development of Bodine inventions. It further recites that Bodine inventions are considered to be of value in the Nation's war effort.

The contract provides that Curtiss directs Bodine regarding the selection of Bodine inventions upon which Bodine laboratory work emphasis may be placed. At the suggestion of Bodine's attorney, a clause was inserted during Curtiss' writing of the contract which provided that United States Government people may also direct the emphasis of Bodine's invention development work. However, the contract restricts Bodine regarding the selection of Bodine tions to others (than Curtiss).

Bodine inventions include those inventions conceived by employees of Bodine Soundrive Co. which employees received draft deferment through direct aid by Curtiss. Curtiss also provided war materials priority ratings (AA-1 and AA-2) for Soundrive. Bodine entered into the contract in good faith and assumed that Curtiss' apparent consideration of the war effort was sincere.

Curtiss' rights under the contract include the option to take exclusive licenses thereby controlling the disposition of Bodine inventions from time of conception during both option and license period. The contract provides that a Bodine invention may be disclosed (at the insistence of Bodine) to a third party only after a United States patent has issued on the invention (usually 3 or 4 years after a patent is filed) and only to the extent necessary to arbitrate the royalty rate of a license taken on the invention by Curtiss.

During the time of these contractual relations Curtiss repeatedly instructed Bodine to not disclose Bodine inventions to Government people. Bodine's complete dependence upon Curtiss made compliance necessary. During the peak of Germany's activity with the "buzz-bomb" V-1 weapon Navy Department people made a number of visits to Soundrive with the helpful intention to study Soundrive's long established activity on this same type of rocket engine. However, Curtiss insisted that Bodine follow Curtiss' instructions regarding not disclosing Bodine inventions or progress thereon to the Navy Department. All pertinent facts, including the novelty, was effectively kept from the Navy Department. Subsequently, Curtiss again notified Bodine that it was also not Curtiss' desire to have a Navy contract for development of Bodine inventions. Curtiss repeated that Curtiss preferred retaining full control of the disposition of Bodine inventions in the jet-propulsion field.

Also during the time of these contractual relations Curtiss went further than mere direction of emphasis and actually instructed Bodine to work on only two projects and stop all other projects. Curtiss did not release option control on the other projects, however. The contract specified that Curtiss retain control under option until "release from adoption" of Bodine inventions.

During 1945 Bodine learned, in technical discussions with Navy engineers who visited Soundrive Co. laboratories, it was generally known amongst aircraft people that the V-1 type jet-propulsion engine was of considerable value to naval and military programs. In view of Curtiss' asserted position effectively shelving Bodine inventions, Bodine served notice in the summer of 1945, terminating a year hence, Curtiss' acquisition of control over further Bodine inventions. Under the contract Bodine's termination of Curtiss' option acquisition right for further inventions becomes effective after a year's notice, and Curtiss may also retain existing invention option control for 5 years after any notice of termination by Bodine.

On December 31, 1945, Curtiss telephoned Bodine and notified Bodine that Curtiss did not desire to commercialize Bodine inventions. Also, if Bodine would agree to certain terms Curtiss would send a telegram promising to pay promptly amounts owed Bodine and indicating intent to release Curtiss option control on Bodine inventions, and further the telegram would promise to give Bodine immediate clear title to these inventions for negotiating with other parties by forwarding the confirmatory releases within the first week of January.

One of the terms Bodine had to agree to in confirming the December 31 telegram from Curtiss was to adjust billing for 1946 outstanding expenses, for which Bodine was liable in 1945, so that this billing for outstanding expenses would all be shown as overbilling for December 1945. Curtiss explained that it was their desire to throw all expenses back into the higher-income-tax year 1945. Bodine confirmed this telegram December 31, 1945.

Bodine subsequently learned from his accounting firm that this method of billing was in violation of income-tax regulations. On January 15, Bodine telephoned Curtiss asking about promised payment of bills and releases from option and also Bodine pointed out the legally improper features of the telegram agreement.

Curtiss promised a reply by January 17. On January 18 Curtiss sent another telegram to Bodine saying that Bodine would have to proceed as per the December 31 telegram.

Various discussions have ensued but Curtiss has maintained its demand that 1946 "clean up" expense of Bodine caused by 1945 expenses will have to be billed as 1945 expenses.

To force Bodine into this tax juggling procedure Curtiss has refused to otherwise pay regular 1945 bills. Counsel in the Federal Tax Office, Los Angeles, has substantiated the statement of Bodine accountant. The financial position at Bodine Soundrive Co. has now reached the point whereupon the company will soon have to discontinue operations and release its carefully chosen group of specialist employees.

Bodine Soundrive Co. has to take a loss on its past 6 months of operations because Curtiss will not pay for costs during this period even though Curtiss has not yet released clear title to Bodine inventions as promised in Curtiss' December 31 telegram. Contractual negotiations of Bodine with the Navy Department have been held up because of lack of clear title from Curtiss. Also Curtiss still maintains that Curtiss has no desire, or right, to proceed with commercialization of Bodine inventions. The lack of proper release from Curtiss is primarily a restrictive hazard for the Bodine Soundrive Co.

On March 23, 1946, Curtiss notified Bodine (in Curtiss' lawyer's office at Los Angeles) that Curtiss would not pay any part of its bills or consider giving confirmed releases from options, unless Bodine would undertake to indemnify Curtiss against all forms of action which might be brought against Curtiss for Curtiss' relations with Bodine. This demand by Curtiss has not been complied with by Bodine.

Mr. Speaker, the sum and substance of this whole business from my point of view is that it ought not to be possible for one powerful company to tie a small company up by securing exclusive rights to the fruits of the small company's work, then to refuse to carry forward the development of the small company's inventions, but at the same time to effectively block that small company from proceeding in other directions with the development of the results of its own work.

Obviously, small business and the Nation suffer from such a condition. Obviously, too, it is one of those things that makes most effectively for monopolistic control in our country.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. HEDRICK, from 3:30 p. m., June 27, 1946, through Saturday, June 29, 1946, on account of official business.

SENATE

(Legislative day of Tuesday, March 5, 1946)

FRIDAY, JUNE 28, 1946

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Most merciful God, the fountain of all wisdom and goodness, we thank Thee for the gift of sleep when the tangled web of weary thought emerges clarified and straightened by the touch of the new day. Like a bird that flashes from the darkness through the light back to darkness again, so our day of light is but a moment—a sudden call, and we are gone. Since we know not what a day may bring forth, but only that the hour for serving Thee is always present, may we wake to the instant claims of Thy holy will; not waiting for tomorrow, but yielding ourselves today. So may the service of our brief hour contribute to the beauty and glory of our America as in a darkened world she looks forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, in the splendor of Him who is the Light of the World. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Thursday, June 27, 1946, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be absent from the Senate tomorrow in order to attend the funeral of a very dear friend.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, leave is granted.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT—APPROVAL OF A BILL

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries, and he announced that on June 27, 1946, the President had approved and signed the act (S. 1834) granting the consent of Congress to the State of Iowa or the Iowa State Highway Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Des Moines River at or near Farmington, Iowa.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the bill (S. 2341) to amend the National Housing Act, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3517) to authorize the admission into the United States of persons of races indigenous to India, to make them racially eligible for naturalization, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 3420. An act to provide for refunds to railroad employees in certain cases so as to place the various States on an equal basis under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act with respect to contributions of employees; and

H. R. 6477. An act to amend section 32 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended, and section 3 of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation Act, as amended, and for other purposes.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARINGS BY SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE INVESTIGATING THE NATIONAL DEFENSE PROGRAM

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, the committee has continuously examined instances of waste and excessive profits in war production. Since the end of hostilities, however, it has intensified its efforts in this particular phase of the committee's work. For months the committee staff has examined records in the Federal departments and in various companies, and executive hearings have been held. The committee is now ready to announce its first public hearings on a case of this character since the cessation of hostilities.

The public hearings will commence on Monday, July 1, 1946, in room 318 of the Senate Office Building and will concern a group of corporations located in the Chicago, Ill., area, of which the principal companies are Erie Basin Metal Products, Inc., an Illinois corporaton, of Elgin, Ill.; Batavia Metal Products, Inc., an Illinois corporation, of Batavia, Ill.; and the Interstate Machinery Co., an Illinois corporation, of Chicago, Ill. Affiliated with these companies, in connection with approximately $78,000,000 worth of war contracts, were some 11 other corporations and partnerships.

The committee's interest in investigating war contractors is to examine procurement procedures and financial aspects of the operations of war contractors for the purpose of ascertaining the manner in which Government officials have policed and supervised the expenditure of substantial sums of public funds in war procurement. This will include the safeguards set up to protect the Government where sizable advances have been made to enable the contractor to perform, the readjustment of prices in fixed price contracts, the renegotiation of profits on war work, the administration of regulations concerning the awarding of contracts, the granting of priorities for machinery and materials, cut-backs, pricing, manpower controls, "E" awards, termination, auditing, proper administrative overhead expenses and maintenance and repair costs, pyramiding, and practices and operating methods affecting the bill which the taxpayers have paid for goods produced for the war effort.

This is the first case of this character on which the committee has held public hearings since the termination of hostilities last September.

Over $315,000,000,000 had been spent in war procurement up to the end of hostilities. With procurement in World War II of such volume, with the need for haste which faced us during the early stages of the war, with need for relaxing ordinary safeguards in the expenditure of public funds because of the necessity of relative freedom of operation on the part of contracting officials of the Government and producing companies, it was perfectly obvious that there would be some wasteful and improper practices, and some instances of downright fraudulent and criminal practices.

During the war period, when the committee concentrated its activities especially on those phases of the war effort in which corrective action could be taken, of necessity, the committee could not examine closely any but the most flagrant cases which came to its attention in the course of the committee's other work. However, the committee has reported publicly in various interim and annual reports upon a number of such cases, among which are the following: Empire Ordnance Corp.; Engineers Group, Inc.; San Jacinto Shipbuilders, Inc.; Corrigan, Osborne & Wells; Clifford E. MacEvoy Co.; Basic Magnesium, Inc.; Colonial Mica, Inc.

In addition, the committee urged the adoption of measures to prevent inordinate profits on war business. As a result, the law for renegotiation of contracts was enacted. The committee has continued to follow the manner in which that law has been administered. Although production for World War II is completed, the renegotiation of profits on that war work is not completed. The committee's interest in war profits and in the administration of the renegotiation law continues.

Furthermore, the committee has continually examined the methods employed in the handling of procurement of war supplies and plans to make a report on the results of its studies throughout the war period, which will provide a basis for future war procurement policies.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. BARKLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

A telegram in the nature of a petition from Joseph S. Mendoza, of New York City, N. Y., praying for the continuation of the Office of Price Administration; ordered to lie on the table.

A telegram in the nature of a petition from Lester Washburn, international president, United Automobile Workers of America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, Milwaukee (Wis.), praying for the continuation of the Office of Price Administration; ordered to lie on the table.

JUST PEACE SETTLEMENT WITH ITALY

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to present for appropriate reference a resolution adopted by Americans of Italian origin, representing the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island, Order of Sons of Italy in America, and many other fraternal welfare organizations, assembled in Providence, R. I., on June 23, 1946, requesting a just peace settlement with Italy.

There being no objection, the resolution was received, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas a just peace settlement with the new democratic Italy and her restoration to freedom, self-respect, and contentment are indispensable to world stabilization and a lasting peace;

Whereas by finally overthrowing fascism in 1943, 2 years before the end of the war, the people of Italy struck a mortal blow to the Axis and thus tremendously helped the cause of the Allied Nations; and, thereafter, during the decisive phase of the war Italy was no longer an enemy but a cobelligerent with the Allies, rendering an invaluable moral and military contribution to the victory over the common enemy;

Whereas the late President Roosevelt and former Prime Minister Churchill affirmed coram popoli in the Atlantic Charter their most solemn engagement that in the post-war settlement the United Nations would seek no territorial aggrandizements; and the Allied Powers promised to the Italians their peace treaty would take in full consideration Italy's great contribution to the defeat of Germany;

Whereas a self-respected, laborious, and democratic Italy, as mother of western civilization for 2,000 years, will be a strong bulwark against the advancing ideologies of bolshevism;

Whereas Trieste and the Istrian Peninsula claimed by Yugoslavia; South Tyrol, which is on this side of the Alps, claimed by Austria; the Valleys of Tenda and Briga in the Maritime Alps, claimed by France, are geographically the natural borders of the Italian Peninsula since the time of creation, and politically an integral part of the Italian nation, because of more than one century of struggle for the unification of Italy which culminated with the redemption of Istria and Tyrol during World War I, when Italy was our ally and sacrificed 600,000 killed and 1,500,000 wounded;

Whereas the Italian colonies in north Africa, now under British military rule, were developed by Italy at great sacrifices years before this war and fascism; and the most appropriate solution would be to revert them temporarily to Italy under the aegis of the United Nations until the world problem of colonial empires, many times richer and larger than Italy's, would be solved by an international covenant, applying the same principle to all colonies and to all countries;

Whereas the economic resources of Italy are at the lowest ebb, and to become an element of peace and progress Italy needs loans and not the burden of reparation, of which she has already paid some in various forms to various allies;

Whereas the interest of the United States and Italy coincide, because both are interested in maintaining the European equilibrium for the good of the western civilization;

Whereas the people of Italy are bound by many ties of affection and admiration to the people of the United States;

Whereas the United States of America, more than any other country, won the war: Be it

Resolved, That we, Americans of Italian origin, representing the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island, Order Sons of Italy in America, and many other fraternal welfare organizations, assembled here in Providence, R. I., on the 23d day of June 1946, do hereby affirm our conviction that Italy does not deserve a punitive peace, and should not be humiliated nor mutilated to satisfy the revengeful and imperialistic appetites of any country;

And we voice our faith and confidence in the wisdom and good will of President Truman; and in the initiative and ability of Secretary of State Byrnes, so that the Paris Conference now being held there will be agreed a treaty of peace with Italy worthy of the traditions of the United States; which will be signed by the representatives of America without the remorse of having compromised with principles of justice in the face of unjust and arrogant pretensions; neither of having failed the vital interest of western civilization, in which is rooted our American way of life; nor of having frustrated the longing of free peoples everywhere for an enduring peace.

ADDRESS BY THE UNDER SECRETARY OF WAR BEFORE AFFILIATED YOUNG DEMOCRATS OF NEW YORK

[Mr. MEAD asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Hon. Kenneth C. Royall, Under Secretary of War, at the Seventh Biennial State Convention of the Affiliated Young Democrats of New York, at New York City, on June 21, 1946, which appears in the Appendix.]

EXTENSION OF EMERGENCY PRICE CONTROL AND STABILIZATION ACTS OF 1942—CONFERENCE REPORT

The Senate resumed consideration of the conference report on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6042) to amend the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, as amended, and the Stabilization Act of 1942, as amended, and for other purposes.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, I had intended to discuss the pending measure at some length, but in the interest of expedition I have decided to ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD some editorial comments from selected newspapers on the subject of the OPA. I have before me an editorial entitled "Joy Ride to Inflation," from the Christian Science Monitor of June 15, 1946; an editorial entitled "Hoping for the Best Is All That Is Left," from the Louisville Courier-Journal; an editorial entitled "Dying Price Control," from the Detroit News of June 15, 1946; an editorial entitled "Congress Decides To Gamble on Inflation," from the Baltimore Sun of June 14, 1946; an editorial entitled "Wrecking OPA," from the Washington Post of June 15, 1946; an article entitled "OPA and the New Spiral," written by Ernest K. Lindley and published in the New Orleans Times-Picayune of June 15, 1946; an editorial entitled "The Seeds of Inflation Will Grow Votes of Wrath," from the Philadelphia Record; an editorial entitled "Both the OPA and Prices Still Need Controls," from the Philadelphia Inquirer; an editorial entitled "Lifting the Price Lid," from the Washington Star of June 15, 1946; and an editorial from the New York Times entitled "The Future of OPA," beginning with this statement:

The sweeping amendments to price control extension that the Senate finally adopted are full of inconsistencies.

I ask unanimous consent that these editorials and article be printed in the RECORD at this point, as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the editorials and article were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Christian Science Monitor of June 15, 1946]

JOY RIDE TO INFLATION

In the badly battered price control extension bill, Congress has readied the vehicle for what Stabilization Director Chester Bowles has called a joy ride to inflation. It is all primed to climb dizzying heights, and there is little likelihood of effective brakes being applied in the Senate-House conference committee.

First ascent will be on meat, milk, poultry, eggs, butter, other dairy products, and gasoline on which ceiling prices are slated to be removed June 30. Moreover, removal of these controls, by indirectly encouraging feeding of more grain to livestock, is likely to seriously decrease the grain available for flour, bread, and cereals in the United States and abroad.

Higher priced clothing appears inevitable. For instance, unrestricted cotton would add $60,000,000 to consumer apparel costs for every penny rise in cotton prices.

Even more inflationary are the amendments eliminating OPA's cost absorption program, and guaranteeing producers and handlers of every commodity their cost plus prewar mark-ups. With many items in limited production due to strikes and scarce basic materials, the consumer will have to stand the temporarily high production costs which might otherwise have been leveled off within many industries as volume increased. Moreover, administering such a provision would be practically impossible, since no product-by-product cost and profit figures are said to be available for 85 percent of American business firms.

If Congress wants to scrap price controls—and risk inflation, a cut in everybody's dollar and a new wave of strikes—it should kill OPA, not cripple it and then put it in chains.

[From the Louisville Courier-Journal of June 15, 1946]

HOPING FOR THE BEST IS ALL THAT IS LEFT

We suppose the only thing to be said about price control, after the Senate's action on the OPA bill, is that one may yet hope for the best. But the best that can happen now is bound to approach the worst that many optimists had thought, not so long ago, could possibly happen. Both Houses of Congress having passed bills that present merely a choice between evils, the brightest prospect is that something may be left of authority after the conference committees carve out a compromise.

This, or that the President may veto the final bill if it turns out to be simply too bad. In which case there is, of course, the danger that nothing will be substituted and that all controls, including even rents, will be ended on June 30.

Kentucky consumers, at any rate, may take what comfort they can find in the fact that their two most stalwart fighters for their dollar's security are still fighting. The bill, says Senator BARKLEY, "falls far short of what I had hoped for." Representative SPENCE says it will lead to "a spiral of inflation that will be disastrous." Both are on the conference committees. Senator BARKLEY voted for the bill on its final passage, although he disapproved of it, because he hoped to get another crack at it in the process of adjusting differences between the two versions. Mr. SPENCE, as chairman of the House Banking Committee, handled the bill in the lower chamber and fought to the last against weakening OPA.

However, what lies ahead is dogged, sweating argument in the cloister of the committee room. The time for oratory is past. This is too bad, for we should like to have heard somebody tell the truth, quite out loud, about the Senate bill and its guarantee of profits—"costs plus prewar mark-ups." The Senators may insist that this comes under the head of saving free enterprise from bureaucratic tyranny. What a travesty of freedom, when a law is written to protect profit and normalcy, come what may of destruction thereby.

DYING PRICE CONTROL

We have believed and still believe that a serious state of price inflation will afflict this country if adequate Federal control of prices ceases. It is so argued by economic experience and the human side of business.

Group A gets higher prices for the goods it sells, group B demands and gets the like. So on and on, as to things we buy and as to wages.

The Senate price bill, passed Thursday, we believe, if enacted into law, would blow the lid off the prices of food and many other things just about completely. Although differing in numerous respects, the House bill is as bad.

As to what's coming, if either bill or a bad composite is enacted, also note the inflation existing because of many price increases already in effect.

But the time for sounding warnings, and dealing in dire predictions, has passed. Faint hope remains perhaps that, since the bills differ and the House-Senate conferees may, where differences exist, adopt new texts, a better measure may be the result. It's no more than a glimmer of hope, however, in view of the big majorities in both Houses for riddling OPA's powers over prices.

We are into the time of wait-and-see now. Each citizen while waiting will do well to remember the voting records of his Representative and Senators as these bills made their tortuous ways through Congress.

If, during this summer and fall, prices rocket up and the worth of everybody's dollar shrinks more and more, Members of Congress who are responsible for it may on a good ground be blamed by angry voters in November. That many Congressmen are highly nervous on this account about their political outlook is, in the light of these facts, easily understood.

[From the Baltimore Sun of June 14, 1946]

CONGRESS DECIDES TO GAMBLE ON INFLATION

The Senate yesterday passed its bill extending the life of the OPA for another year from June 30. The final shape of the OPA Extension Act will not be determined until the Senate bill and the House bill have been reconciled and resubmitted to both Houses. But the visibility for an extension of the OPA with its powers substantially intact is now zero. The House bill and the Senate bill differ a good deal in detail. But they have this in common: both of them greatly restrict the power of the OPA to control prices. It is hard to conceive of any combination of the features of the two bills which will not leave the OPA greatly weakened.

What this means is that Congress has decided to engage in a gigantic gamble, affecting all of us—a gamble in which we can't possibly win and are almost certain to lose. Advocates of price control, while conceding that price control by itself is not enough, argue that an OPA with adequate powers is necessary to hold back the forces of inflation until the time when production begins to approach demand. Congress, on the other hand, is gambling that the relaxation of price controls will prove so powerful a stimulus to production that supply will begin to equal demand much more rapidly than it would otherwise.

This is an appealing argument, considering how thoroughly fed up the country is with governmental controls. The same argument was produced following the First World War, and acted upon by Congress then—and proved utterly fallacious. The system of controls then prevailing was repealed and the boom-bust cycle of the early twenties was the result.

Now, Congress is gambling again. If it is right, the spurt of inflation will be relatively short-lived. If it is wrong, everyone suffers, particularly those with fixed incomes. Prices will skyrocket, commodity supplies will be subjected to speculative hoarding, and a new cycle of major industrial disputes will confront the country.

[From the Washington Post, June 15, 1946]

WRECKING OPA

Only by the most obtuse reasoning can what is left of the OPA be considered price control, and in no sense should Congressmen be permitted to palm it off as such. Price control after June 30 will be like the outer shell of a building left standing after the innards have been gutted by fire If the product of the combined Senate and House action actually becomes law, the door is open for another boom-and-bust cycle The best, and indeed only, prospect of averting this disaster lies in a Presidential veto.

What makes the Senate's 53-11 vote obviously a concession to special interest is the complete disregard of the wish of the majority as expressed in letters and in both national and regional public opinion polls. In October 1945, the Gallup poll showed that 72 percent of the people disapproved of removal of all price ceilings. The National Opinion Research Center in two separate national samplings in February and April 1946, revealed that 85 and 82 percent, respectively, thought price control necessary for the next year. The Des Moines Register Poll in March disclosed that 81 percent of Iowa residents felt that OPA controls should be continued for another year. In the same month the Philadelphia Bulletin poll showed 63 percent of Philadelphia residents as believing that price controls should be more rigid. And in the District of Columbia, the Post poll of last December indicated that 83 percent of the people favored continuing price control. These, it would seem, should have been enough evidence of national feeling to convince any politician.

The consequences of what Congress has done, if not revoked, will hang over Members' heads for years to come as a monument to political stupidity. It is ridiculous to say that controls on rents and other vital segments of the economy can be continued rigidly if essential cost-of-living items are allowed to rise sharply in price. Moreover, as costs go up, wages must also rise, or production—the very production relied on to prevent inflation—will again be choked by strikes. This is not mere calamity howling, for the handwriting already has been put on the wall by the labor unions. These considerations will no doubt be submitted to Congress by the President.

[From the New Orleans Times-Picayune of June 15, 1946]

OPA AND THE NEW SPIRAL

(By Ernest K. Lindley)

It now looks as if there might be a period of relative peace on the industrial front, in which production can forge ahead. The delays caused by the major stoppages of the last 6 months have been very costly to the public, as well as to industry and labor. They have also impaired the influence of the United States in the world.

Several months of soaring production would go a long way toward repairing the damage done on the international front and checking the losses on the home front—provided, however, that soaring production is not accompanied by soaring prices.

If prices also soar, another round of major demands for wage increases is certain to begin. If the increases are granted, the result will be still higher prices. If they are granted only after strikes, the additional penalty will be further delays in production, which in themselves further prolong and increase inflationary pressures.

This is the problem which is now causing top officials in the administration the sharpest anxiety. It would be hard to overstate their anxiety, for Congress is ripping the muscle, bone, and heart out of OPA. If OPA collapses, whatever the ultimate consequences, the short-term effects almost certainly will be a further sharp rise in living costs, which will in turn touch off another series of demands for major wage increases, backed, when necessary, by strikes. How far this wage-price spiral might go no one can forecast.

The situation is further complicated, of course, by the fact that the large wage increases recently granted may not have been fully reflected yet in the cost of living. They will show up in still higher costs for some manufactured articles, higher freight rates, and higher taxes. State and local public employees, along with white-collar workers in many lines of private employment, will gradually win salary increases. A large part of the cost of settling the threatened maritime strike will be paid for out of increased Government subsidies for the American merchant marine.

Food costs will go higher still unless OPA is extended with approximately its present powers in this field, including enough subsidy money.

In one way, the argument against continuing food subsidies is sound. But one practical effect of dropping them, together with the dropping or serious weakening of other controls on the cost of living, will be to hasten and aggravate the demand for still more wage increases.

Labor is bound to lose part of the benefits of the wage increases already granted. It has lost a little already and it will lose more, even if OPA by a miracle should be extended in effective form, for the increases granted have been, on the whole, too large to be absorbed within the price structure of 6 months ago. The millions of professional, white-collar, and other workers, and pensioners, who have not received increases in dollar incomes as great as those won by organized workers, will suffer relatively even more.

If the rise in living costs can be held to approximately the minimum forced by the wage increases already granted, the threat of an ascending spiral probably can be removed. But at some point the demand for more wage increases is likely to become very determined again. If OPA is gutted, that point may be reached soon. No labor legislation that Congress will or can pass would prevent that determined demand from being made. The OPA weak extension bills which the House and Senate have dished up are indirect incitements to labor to start another round of strikes.

[From the Philadelphia Record of June 15, 1946]

THE SEEDS OF INFLATION WILL GROW VOTES OF WRATH

In one respect the United States Senate was helpful when it removed OPA's vital organs, sewed it up, and pretended the patient hadn't died on the operating table.

It got the dirty work over quickly.

That's exactly what the Record urged.

The bill the Senate passed is a phony, hypocritical measure which actually kills OPA while pretending to extend its life for a year.

Speed in getting this OPA-wrecker through Congress is paradoxically the only hope of preserving any semblance of price control beyond June 30, when present controls expire.

The faster it is cleared by a Senate-House conference committee, approved and sent to the President, the better.

As we said before, the President must jam that bill back into Congress with a stinging veto. He must make it clear to the public that the majority of Congress is trying literally to "get away with murder."

Let the President put the spotlight on Congress so that it will have to kill off price control honestly before the public gaze and suffer the public's wrath or—

Congressmen, to save their political skins, will feel compelled to continue, unimpaired, the present controls.

It's difficult to decide which is worse, the Senate bill or the House bill passed in April. The Senate measure was put together piece by piece, amendment by amendment, by "statesmen" who over and over made stirring profession of their good intentions.

The Record did not print the final roll call on the Senate OPA killer. It had no more meaning than the price of beets compared with the price of cabbage.

It did not show where Congressmen really stood on this issue.

Some pro-OPA Senators voted for it as the best measure they could get, hoped to improve it in conference. Others of the administration forces couldn't stomach it at all, rejected it.

At the same time the enemies of price control voted for or against it, depending on whether they thought it reduced price control sufficiently to a state of inertness.

All motives were possible—good, bad, or indifferent. Any Senator could profess any of them and change his story to make political capital, no matter how his constituents were disposed.

By all means get that No-OPA bill through fast and back again from the White House for a show-down test that will prove where each Member of Congress really stands.

If prices go kiting out of sight, and dollars buy less and less, the American public should know where to place the blame—right on Congress.

[From the Philadelphia Inquirer of June 15, 1946]

BOTH THE OPA AND PRICES STILL NEED CONTROLS

Now that both Houses of Congress have passed bills embodying radical changes in OPA controls, it would be well to consider a few economic facts which cannot be altered by any legislation.

It goes without saying that nobody wants to see prices rise any more. In most lines they are too high now even for widely inflated wages, while they constitute a heavy hardship on those with fixed incomes.

As for producers, distributors and retailers—outside the black market—they realize that prices which go up like a rocket are bound to come down like the stick.

OPA was established as a necessary wartime agency to hold prices in check. The initial mistake was the failure to apply equally rigid controls to wages, the chief element in costs and therefore in prices.

President Roosevelt constantly told labor that its abnormally high wartime wages would be maintained after the emergency was over. When the war did end, President Truman lost no time in throwing off wage controls and asserting employers generally could pay even higher scales without higher prices.

His open invitation to fresh wage demands was, of course, promptly accepted. Secretary Wallace gave inflation another powerful push by issuing a report, which he later admitted was based on faulty guesswork statistics, that wages could be boosted 24 percent while prices remained static.

OPA accepted these false statements as gospel truth and proceeded to damage its good record by refusing to make price concessions to fit the administration's new wage-raising policy. The undeniable effect was to keep moderate-priced goods in large quantities from the market.

In considering the question of extending the life of OPA after June 30, Congress was beset by two major pressure groups—both wrong.

One urged Congress to abolish all price controls and let competitive enterprise have full play in the hope that after only a brief period of higher prices adequate production would cause them to settle down.

The other major pressure group demanded that OPA be kept without any correction of its faults since the slightest attempt to regulate its activities would ruin the country.

Congress has endeavored to legislate between these extremes, imposing certain needed restraints on this agency's enormous powers. In the hope of stimulating production, it has decreed that prices must allow fair profits.

Today OPA is not curbing inflation, as every housewife knows. Many of its price ceilings have stimulated production of only the most expensive goods. Some of the new provisions are open to question. But if this new bill is finally enacted, it will make still more necessary a radical change in the administration's policy of encouraging wage increases all along the line.

[From the Washington Star of June 15, 1946]

LIFTING THE PRICE LID

The overwhelming vote by the Senate in favor of price decontrol on most market-basket items and to lift the price lid on many other commodities obviously paves the way for a decisive test of conflicting theories as to what will happen if OPA restrictions are relaxed in the critical reconversion period. The Senate's action on the heels of a similar though not so far-reaching revolt against OPA by the House makes inevitable a conference bill completely unacceptable to OPA, if the vehement warnings of OPA supporters are a reliable omen.

The less-drastic House bill evoked dire predictions of economic catastrophe from Economic Stabilizer Bowles and OPA Administrator Porter, and Senator BARKLEY, just before the Senate voted on its broader decontrol measure, declared that President Truman has said he would veto the legislation if it came to him in the form passed by the House. If such a veto were sustained, the only thing that could save OPA after June 30 would be adoption by Congress of a last-minute resolution to extend the present price-control law—a development that does not appear likely in view of the present mood at the Capitol.

It is obvious that the developing rebellion in Congress against continuance of price control in its present form was in no way quelled by the vigorous attacks which OPA supporters have made on those who disagreed with their own theories on the complex price-control question. Charges of selfishness and greed have been hurled indiscriminately against many in Congress and out who sincerely believe that controls in many instances have been ineptly applied or have been unnecessary and that they have defeated their objective by creating additional scarcities, encouraging black markets, and increasing the dangers of inflation.

It is just as unfair and absured to impugn the motives of the majority in the Senate and House who voted to curb control of prices as it is to charge the OPA with bureaucratic self-preservation instincts in seeking extension of stringent controls. The truth of the matter is that an honest difference of opinion exists as to whether there is need for strict application of price ceilings in certain fields and as to how long such restrictions are essential to prevent an inflationary blow-up.

The majority in Congress have registered their view that while a lifting of the lid may result in a temporary rise in prices, the effect will be to stimulate production to such an extent that the law of supply and demand soon will operate to bring prices down again to fair and reasonable levels. Congress now is evidencing its determination to give this theory a test in actual practice. If it carries out its determination, it will be taking a calculated risk, the results of which only time will reveal.

[From the New York Times of June 15, 1946]

THE FUTURE OF OPA

The sweeping amendments to price-control extension that the Senate finally adopted are full of inconsistencies. They would take price controls off such basic necessities of living as meat, poultry, eggs, butter and milk, and also off gasoline and cigarettes, but leave them on high-priced automobiles and on hundreds of other luxury and semiluxury products. This is the opposite in theory of what price control is supposed to do.

OPA once ventured the quick estimate that it was fixing 8,000,000 different prices. When it is considered that before the war, Government price-fixing of coal alone, which constitutes less than 2 percent of the national annual product, involved the fixing of 350,000 different prices, this 8,000,000 estimate does not seem excessive. It is obviously impossible for any single human mind or small group of minds arbitrarily to fix 8,000,000 different prices without unsettling and distorting the whole structure of production. For each price must be fixed in relation to all other prices. We cannot fix a legal ceiling on corn without a very exact relation to the legal ceiling on hogs. We cannot fix a legal ceiling on butter without similar exact relations to the legal ceilings on fluid milk, cheese and ice cream. We cannot fix a ceiling on automobiles without relation to the ceiling on steel. We cannot fix ceilings on prices in general while allowing wages to remain free or even boosting them by Government decision. The administration and OPA have made errors at all these points. They have unbalanced the proportions in which thousands of different products are produced and have forced some products out of production altogether.

If they had realized the immensity of the problem with which they were confronted they would have begged Congress to reduce its dimensions; to narrow the realm of their discretion and responsibility. But they did precisely the opposite. They insisted on retaining in peacetime all the controls they had maintained in war. They criticized every amendment passed by the House and all the amendments recommended by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, and refused to suggest any amendments that might better accomplish the same basic purposes. They implied in advance that every amendment would be a crippling amendment.

In these circumstances Congress was led to feel that OPA was bent on holding on to practically all price controls indefinitely. OPA had itself laid down only the vaguest criteria of when it would drop price control on specific articles. One of these was that it would stop controlling prices for particular commodities when supply had caught up with demand. This overlooked the fundamental economic fact that supply comes into balance with demand only at a price, and that by keeping the price too low it is possible indefinitely to prevent supply from catching up with demand. But even where OPA's own criterion had been fulfilled, as in the case of cigarettes and gasoline, OPA failed to take off ceilings. That is apparently why the Senate felt itself obliged to demand the removal of price controls on these specific articles. In other cases, as in meat, the Senate recognized that the product had already, in fact, got out of the control of OPA, and that the prices now actually being paid for the bulk of meat supplies are black-market prices.

We may hope that a wiser and better considered amendment than either those of the House or of the Senate will emerge from conference. Meanwhile, it is well to keep in mind that price control is at best only a secondary and transitional weapon against inflation. It deals with the symptoms and consequences of inflation, not with its causes. The real battle against inflation must be fought on another front. It must be fought against budget deficits and all the other policies that tend to swell the money and credit supply.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina in the chair). The Chair will ask the clerk to read at this time the unanimous consent order under which the Senate is acting, so that all Senators may be aware of it.

The CHIEF CLERK. The order is as follows:

Ordered, by unanimous consent, that during the further consideration of the conference report on H. R. 6042, no Senator shall speak more than once nor longer than 1 hour.

The PRESIDING OFFICER The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma obtained the floor.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I have only 1 hour. I regret very much that I cannot yield.

Mr. President, before a vote is taken on the conference report I feel impelled to submit some observations for the record. I am under no illusion that anything I may say will have any effect upon the vote on this report. The report cannot be amended. Senators will either have to vote for the report or vote against it. I desire to state for the record my interpretation of what the report means.

It means, first, that the life of OPA is to be extended for 1 year; and that is all-important. A single line in the bill extending the life of OPA gives that organization all the power it needs. Any additional verbiage or provisions are so much surplusage because, judging from the past history of this organization, it pays little or no attention to any provision which the Congress enacts into law.

Neither this bill nor any other bill or law even that I know of embraces any provision with respect to wages. I am not complaining about that. I am simply making the statement that the OPA has no control over wages, and exercises no control over wages except to permit wages to go higher and higher and higher. As wages go up, as a necessary corollary the prices of the things which wages produce must likewise go up. So no one can assert that this bill has any effect over wages. Wages are exactly what labor demands that wages should be.

The bill reduces the former drastic controls over nonagricultural products. It provides for a relaxation of such controls. To that extent industry is benefited. Industry has been taken care of. Thus we have this picture before the Senate today: Wages and wage earners are free and uncontrolled. Industry has been helped. But what about the other great group of our population? I refer to the farmers of our country.

Mr. President, I came from the farm. I have been associated with farming all my life. I think I know the problems of the farmer. Since I became a member of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry I have been continually embarrassed because the administration of whatever party is in power pays little or no attention to the wishes of the farm population of America.

Many years ago my former colleague from Oklahoma, the distinguished Senator Thomas P. Gore, was chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. That was back yonder during World War I. He tried to help the farmer. He proposed relief for the farmer, and he stood for the interests of the farmer while he was a member and chairman of that committee. Because he did so he fell into bad repute with the administration, and that bad repute lingered with him all the days of his service in the Senate of the United States.

At a later time, under another administration, our late distinguished colleague Senator McNary, of Oregon, was chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. He espoused what was known as the McNary-Haugen bill. His administration did not favor that legislation. He managed the legislation through the Senate, the House concurred, and the President vetoed the bill. Senator McNary did not stand well with the party in power, of which he was a part. During more recent years our late distinguished colleague Senator Smith of South Carolina was chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. He stood for the farmer. Because what he stood for was not agreeable to the administration, Senator Smith fell into bad repute with his administration, and such bad repute lingered with him during the remaining days of his life.

Now I have fallen heir to this committeeship. I find that as a rule the things the farmers want are not accepted by the administration. The farmers want a new parity formula. The administration says "No." The farmers have made a fight for years to have their labor costs included in the parity formula. The administration says "No."

Mr. President, the original OPA bill originated in the Committee on Banking and Currency, and that committee has had control of this legislation on behalf of the Senate from its inception up to the present time. That committee is considered to be not too friendly to the farmers. The farmers knew they would receive little, if any, consideration by going before that committee. So the various groups of the farm population of the United States made appeals to my committee to hear them. The committee secured a small appropriation to cover hearings and printing, and during the past year the committee invited the farm groups of the country to come to Washington to make their recommendations and voice their several protests. I have before me one volume of the hearings taken before my committee.

As a result of those hearings, the committee has made four interim committee reports, which I now have on my desk. One report is with respect to livestock and meat. The report was submitted on the 15th day of May 1945, now more than 1 year ago. Mr. President, without reading the findings and recommendations contained in the report, I ask unanimous consent that the recommendations to be found on pages 5 and 6 of the report be printed at this point in the RECORD, in connection with my remarks.

There being no objection, the matter referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LIVESTOCK AND MEAT, MAY 15, 1945

FINDINGS

Causes which have contributed to the shortage of meat for civilian consumption include:

1. The substantial and increasing quantities purchased by the armed forces and lend-lease.

2. A decrease in pork production of over-one-third in 1945 compared with 1944 resulting from a decline in the 1944 hog production of approximately 30 percent.

3. The marketing of improperly finished cattle and calves and the failure to market the number of cattle warranted by the record numbers of cattle on farms and ranges.

4. The "squeeze" of processors of livestock between livestock prices and product ceilings resulting in losses and causing many reputable processors to curtail their operation.

5. The diversion of livestock from normal channels of slaughter and distribution into the black market, and the failure of the Office of Price Administration to take effective enforcement measures.

6. The diversion of livestock and meat into local distribution channels and away from interstate distribution.

7. An increased purchasing power resulting in a record civilian demand for meat.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The committee recommend for the purpose of improving the supply and distribution of meat the following:

1. A forthwith increase in the return to the feeders of AA and A grades of cattle through a fair and sufficient subsidy to feeders to encourage them to feed out range cattle to the maximum degree, thereby encouraging the feeding of more cattle and increasing not only the quality but the weight of AA and A grades of cattle.

2. An immediate incentive program to encourage, during the spring and early summer, the marketing of more grass and unproductive dairy cattle.

3. Raising the support price of hogs and extending support prices to cover all weights of hogs.

4. That assurance be given producers that support prices and ceilings for livestock will not be lowered unless adequate notice of such change be given.

5. That the Price Control Act be amended to require and direct the Office of Price Administration to give processors of livestock a reasonable margin of profit for processing each species of livestock.

6. The withdrawal of all slaughtering licenses and permits and a sharp reduction in the number reissued together with restrictions on slaughter by use of quotas so that meat will be directed into the normal interstate channels of distribution. The refusal to issue new slaughtering licenses and permits to known violators of governmental regulations and the concentration of enforcement efforts on fundamental major problems instead of marginal technicalities.

7. The extension of Federal inspection and set-aside orders to small slaughterers above local farm and retail level.

8. The limiting of lend-lease purchases of meat products consistent with domestic civilian supply.

9. That the Price Control Act be further amended to direct the Administrator to proceed without delay to remove all price controls and regulations from any and all commodities just as fast as any such commodity becomes sufficiently plentiful so as to permit the law of supply and demand to operate to keep the price of any such commodity within the range of the cost of production plus a reasonable profit.

10. The committee recommend that a supreme Administrator for Food be created to have supervision and jurisdiction over both the Office of Price Administration and the War Food Administration.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, the hearings continued, and we heard the livestock growers and ranchers of the country, the feeders, the processors and the distributors, of meat throughout the country. On May 2, 1946, the committee submitted a supplemental report upon livestock and meat, and in it the committee recommended that—

This committee recommends that all price controls and subsidies on livestock and edible products derived therefrom be removed at once.

Without reading the findings in full, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that they may be printed at this point in the RECORD, in connection with my remarks.

There being no objection, the findings referred to were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LIVESTOCK AND MEAT, MAY 2, 1946

FINDINGS

From all the evidence, the committee finds:

1. Government controls and price regulations affecting livestock and meat have completely broken down; price ceilings on livestock and meat are a fiction; and, as a result of the black market and subsidies, meat is costing the American public at least $2,000,000,000 a year in excess of ceiling prices.

2. Most meat is being sold at black-market prices. Reliable surveys show that five out of six stores were selling meat at overceiling prices and the average price of all meat sold at retail was 20 percent above legal ceilings in February 1946. Facts from the surveys also show that the black market has become more serious since that time.

3. There is no shortage of livestock on farms and ranches; in fact, there is an excessive inventory of cattle; but there are severe shortages of meat in some places and in certain stores because of the black-market dislocation of distribution and because price controls and subsidies have impeded production by creating fear and uncertainty in the minds of producers and feeders of livestock.

4. The "price squeeze" placed on slaughterers by the OPA from 1942 to date has forced many legitimate slaughterers to close or curtail their operations, thereby fostering the black market.

5. Remaining legitimate slaughterers, both small and large, are willing and anxious to buy livestock at legal maximum prices but are unable to do so because black-market operators pay higher prices with the result that livestock is being diverted from the normal channels of slaughter and distribution into the black market.

6. The black market in meat is imperiling the national health through insanitary slaughtering and curtailed production of essential medicinal byproducts.

7. Black-market slaughtering is causing a complete economic loss of many millions of pounds of critically short byproducts such as fats, protein, feeds, and hides.

8. Widespread evasion of price controls on livestock and meat by those who are victims of the black market and must overcharge or go out of business, plus the failure of willful racketeering violators to be apprehended, has created a disrespect for all laws, and is rapidly undermining the moral fiber of the country.

9. Thousands of employees with long years of service and valued experience necessarily have been laid off by legitimate slaughterers because such slaughterers are unable to maintain their volume against black-market competition. Additional thousands of other employees in these packing plants have had their hours of work reduced for the same reason.

10. Four years of experience with Government controls, culminating in the present scandalous situation, shows conclusively the impossibility of controlling livestock and meat prices and meat distribution through Government laws, regulations, and directives; and any new or reinstated controls on the livestock and meat industry can only create greater confusion and further impede maximum production and legitimate slaughtering and distribution.

11. Removal of price controls and subsidies from livestock and meat will stimulate the marketing of livestock and the production of meat, drive the black-market operators out of business, save untold waste, safeguard the public health, and make a large supply of meat available to all at a competitive price which will be lower than consumers are now paying as a result of the black market and subsidies.

RECOMMENDATION

This committee recommends that all price controls and subsidies on livestock and edible products derived therefrom be removed at once.

ELMER THOMAS,
Chairman, Subcommittee.
HARLAN J. BUSHFIELD.
B. K. WHEELER.

My Small Business Subcommittee on Complaints studied the meat-control question and held hearings last winter. The Barkley-Bates amendment was considered. We recommended consideration be given to setting a program for gradual removal of price controls and subsidies by December 1946, at least, but conditions have rapidly changed and I feel sure immediate removal of controls should be given.

TOM STEWART.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, later, on May 25, after the committee heard the dairymen of the country, the committee submitted another interim report in which it made the following finding:

This committee recommends that all subsidies and price controls on milk and dairy products be removed at once.

I ask unanimous consent that the findings and recommendations contained in that interim report may be printed at this point in the RECORD, in connection with my remarks.

There being no objection, the findings and recommendations were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FINDINGS

1. Dairy production is declining nationally and the declines are greatest in the areas of greatest shortage.

2. Since dairy production is a long-time planning operation and cannot be expounded rapidly, the current trend must be reversed immediately if a prolonged disaster is to be avoided.

3. The responsibility for this condition resides in the price and subsidy policies of the stabilization agencies.

4. The refusal of such agencies to deal adequately with local problems is reflected in declines in deficit areas, the threat of permanent injury to production in such areas, and the uneconomic burdening of transportation facilities to import milk not meeting peacetime local health standards.

5. The maladministration of dairy pricing has had a bad effect in all segments of the industry, but due to dairy industry price structures the effect has been notably concentrated on butter. In substance, OPA has determined that the American consumer shall not have butter.

6. The subsidy program has not served to replace necessary price adjustments to stimulate production.

RECOMMENDATIONS

This committee recommends that all subsidies and price controls on milk and dairy products be removed at once.

ELMER THOMAS,
Chairman.
HARLAN J. BUSHFIELD.
TOM STEWART.
B. K. WHEELER.

I concur in the above findings of the committee. I also concur in the recommendations, provided that the Secretary of Agriculture finds that the net income of dairymen will not be reduced thereby nor a substantial segment of our population be deprived of the use of milk and other dairy products.

GEORGE D. AIKEN.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, as I stated a moment ago, industry has been recognized and helped by this proposed OPA extension bill. The wage earners and the laboring people are not retained under the controls provided by this bill. I am not complaining about that. But the farmers are retained under the controls of the proposed legislation. Mr. President, under this bill the farmers of America are the goats of our domestic economy. This bill, if it shall be enacted, will sentence 30,000,000 farmers to remain at least for another year the economic goats of our economic system. I do not consent that that shall happen, Mr. President.

After my committee had held these hearings and had submitted these reports, when this bill came before the Senate, I prepared and submitted an amendment which of necessity had to be referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency. The amendment proposed to remove from controls a number of the leading farm commodities. Mr. President, it proposed to remove timber from under the controls. Jurisdiction over timber has remained in the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. Timber is grown upon the land, so the Senate, in deciding about the jurisdictions of committees, placed timber under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. We had a hearing on timber. We found what the conditions were. The committee was of the opinion that timber should be removed from all controls under this legislation. So a provision to that effect was inserted in the amendment. Petroleum was likewise recommended to be decontrolled. Petroleum comes from under the land, mostly from farms. Very little petroleum is produced from under cities. When it comes from the land on the farms the farmers are interested in it, because they receive royalties from it and they receive lease money for the use of their lands. The amendment proposed to take out from under controls milk, livestock, tobacco, poultry, fish and shellfish, grain, peanuts, fruits and vegetables, and the products processed in the main therefrom. Mr. President, my committee did not undertake to interfere with anything that did not appear to be a farm product.

What happened? The amendment was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency. In that committee, Mr. President, we have some very able men. In the first place, they are specially selected—for various reasons, but, for one, because of their outstanding ability. I have been a member of legislatures for a long time. I have learned a good many things as a result of my service in various legislative bodies. Mr. President, there is one rule which is used in military strategy, in economic strategy, and in legislative strategy. That rule is to divide and destroy. The Banking and Currency Committee, being wise in the ways of legislation, proceeded, I would not say deliberately, but the effect of it was just the same, to divide these several groups and then to destroy them. The committee picked out livestock and placed in this bill a recommendation that livestock and meats be decontrolled. They took the next largest group, perhaps—the dairy industry, which covers the entire United States—and the committee placed in the bill a recommendation that milk and dairy products likewise be decontrolled. Third, in order still further to divide the farm groups the committee took the third largest group, perhaps, one which affects everyone—poultry—and the committee recommended that poultry likewise be decontrolled.

So the committee proposed to have livestock and the products of livestock, which means the little packers and the big packers and the ranchers and the feed-lot operators, come out from under this bill—relying upon the psychology that if they took out that large group, such group or groups would not be further interested in having any other group of agriculture decontrolled. When they proposed to decontrol livestock and when they proposed to decontrol poultry and when they proposed to decontrol dairy products, they found they had covered in that way more than one-half of the farm groups of these United States.

When the bill was reported providing for the decontrol of these various commodities, no doubt many farmers of America interested in those commodities thought, "Well, I am taken care of; why should I interest myself further in other groups of farmers who produce articles which I perhaps must buy and on the sale of which I cannot profit."

Mr. President, the bill came on the floor in that condition. There were a number of other products which we thought should be controlled, such as tobacco. The evidence before the committee was that there was a surplus of tobacco, and that it was not selling at ceiling prices. A motion was made to decontrol tobacco. By a voice vote the amendment was agreed to. There was no opposition so far as we could learn to decontrolling petroleum. Therefore my colleague the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. MOORE] offered an amendment to decontrol oil and oil products. The amendment was agreed to.

As the bill passed the Senate it contained provision to decontrol livestock and livestock products, poultry and poultry products, and dairy and dairy products. Decontrol was also provided for tobacco and tobacco products. Some of the Senators being satisfied with such decontrols lost interest in the bill and some of them voted against my amendment. They had been protected and they thought they would be able to retain their assumed protection. My amendment secured only 21 votes here in the Senate. What happened thereafter, Mr. President? The rule of divide and conquer, the rule of divide and destroy was working.

Mr. President, I wish sincerely to pay a compliment to my old time friend and colleague the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY]. I did not become a Member of Congress as soon as he did. I reached the lower House in 1923. I found the now senior Senator from Kentucky at that time one of the most influential Members of the House of Representatives. I knew that he would sooner or later become a Member of the Senate of the United States. I likewise wanted to become a Member of the Senate and was successful. On March 4, 1927, the senior Senator from Kentucky and myself walked across to the Senate from the House of Representatives. Each of us took the oath of a Senator here in this Chamber. I am glad that the senior Senator from Kentucky has been a Member of the Senate during all the time which has intervened since that date. I am glad he is a Member of the Senate now, and I hope that he will remain such for many years to come.

Mr. President, the senior Senator from Kentucky is the best informed man in public life today. That is a broad statement, but I believe it. He is the most efficient and successful legislator this Government has developed in 157 years of its existence. That is also a strong statement, but it is justified by the record which the senior Senator from Kentucky has made. What the Senator favors he secures. He gets what he wants. He defeats what he opposes. I regret that I do not find myself in agreement with him more often. If I did I would not suffer defeat so frequently. I realize that when I oppose the senior Senator from Kentucky I am doomed to lose. If I win in the committee I lose on the floor. If I win in the committee and also on the floor, I lose in the conference. [Laughter.] So. Mr. President, the Senator from Kentucky approaches more nearly the status of being a general specialist than any other man I have ever known.

What I am saying is not idle talk because the Senator is opposing me on the pending proposal. It is now too late for me to do anything about it. I realize what will be the fate of the farmers of this country during the next 12 months to come. I am fearful that a year from now we will have the same fight again. The longer these controls remain on the people of the United States, the harder it will be to remove them. It may be that we are today sealing the fate of the people of the United States.

Mr. President, I have explained what happened to my amendment. Some amendments were agreed to in the committee, later in the Senate, and went to conference. Then what happened? The conference report came before the Senate and we found that everyone had been taken care of but the farmer. Controls were eased on industry. Controls, instead of being released on farmers, were clamped down upon them like a crown of thorns. Mr. President, I cannot agree to such treatment of the farm population of this country. Oh, it may be said that the farmers are now in good condition. I cannot deny that. Wars always bring higher prices, but I make the positive assertion that during the war the farmers did not fare on an equality with the wage earners and industry. Any time the wage earners wanted an increase in salaries, in wages, or in liberalized rules, they asserted their desires, went fishing, and got what they wanted.

During the war the Congress found it necessary to pass legislation providing for the renegotiation of contracts in order to prevent industry from making unconscionable profits. What about the farmer? Only last November did farm prices increase approximately to parity.

My State, Oklahoma, is an oil-producing State, Texas is an oil-producing State, and Kentucky also produces oil. Mr. President, the oil industry has not been permitted to increase its prices above 61 percent of parity. In other words, oil and oil products today are selling at only 61 percent of what they were selling at back in 1926, the era of so-called Coolidge prosperity. Yet this Congress proposes to keep them on that level.

Mr. President, I do not wish to do anything which will cause me to lose the floor, because I may talk for only an hour. However, I should like my friend, the distinguished senior Senator from Kentucky, to answer one or two questions so as to clarify the Record.

In the committee no objection was voiced to taking petroleum and petroleum products out from under control. No objection was voiced on the floor of the Senate to taking petroleum and petroleum products out from under controls. I ask the Senator from Kentucky what reason exists today for maintaining petroleum and petroleum products under OPA control?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I cannot tell the Senator the reason that petroleum and petroleum products are still under control. It was stated during the debate that one of the reasons why those products had not been decontrolled was the threat of a maritime strike, in which event the eastern seaboard of the United States and New England might be found short of oil, and therefore it was advisable to maintain controls over petroleum and petroleum products. However, that danger has now passed. I shall be frank with the Senator, as I tried to be yesterday with other Senators in regard to meats. I know of no reason, so far as supply and demand are concerned, why petroleum should be any longer maintained under control with price ceilings.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. While the Senator is on his feet, I will ask him to explain why the decontrol of livestock and meat was not retained in the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the reasons have been explained. The House conferees would not agree to that provision of the bill. When the bill was originally before the House the Members of the House voted against the decontrol of livestock, beef cattle, and meat. Inasmuch as the Senate bill has provided for a decontrol board, the other House did not feel that it was logical to set up another board and at the same time take away from it jurisdiction with respect to important items of food such as poultry and poultry products, dairy products, livestock, and meat. Therefore, they would not agree to those provisions in the Senate bill.

In order to get an agreement it was necessary of course for somebody to yield. The conferees retained practically everything the Senate put into the bill except those specific decontrols. The House conferees would not accede to them and would not yield. So under the circumstances, the Senate conferees felt that they were justified in yielding; and evidently the judgment of the House conferees was sustained by the later action of the House, for when the conference report was before it and a motion was made to recommit the bill to the conferees with instructions to agree to these very items which were in the Senate bill, namely, poultry, dairy products, livestock and meat, that motion was defeated by a vote of 221 to 150, a majority of 71 votes. That is the reason, frankly, why the provision for the decontrol of these specific items was removed from the Senate bill. The same thing applies to tobacco and petroleum. The House conferees took the same position as to all the specific items mentioned, and the Senate conferees could not very well assume the position that one or two of these items should be kept in and decontrolled if the House would not agree to all of them. So the entire list was eliminated from the conference report.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for his explanation, and I hope it will satisfy the 30,000,000 farmers in the United States, but I am afraid that it will not be entirely agreeable to them.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator will permit me—I do not want to take his time because he is limited to an hour—let me first thank the Senator for the very generous compliment he paid me a moment ago. I do not deserve such praise, but I know of no man in the Senate, or out of it, from whom I would rather hear it than from the Senator from Oklahoma, who, as he has said, has been associated with me and I with him for many years in the House and in the Senate. But I do not think it is quite accurate or fair to say that the bill does something for industry and nothing for the farmers, because in the conference committee, whereas the bill of the Senate mentioned only manufacturers and processors in the formula that would include costs since 1941, in conference we inserted the word "producers" so as to include all producers. A farmer is neither a manufacturer nor a processor, but he is a producer. So, in order that the formula might apply to all people on equal terms we inserted the word "producer," which of course includes farmers.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, at no time in the consideration of this bill, so far as I know, was there a proposition to decontrol a single specific item of industry; but it was proposed to decontrol a number of specific commodities produced by the farmers. So that the bill, insofar as industry is concerned, it is in general terms; it was developed in general terms; it was passed in general terms, and it comes back to the Senate in general terms. But, so far as the farmers are concerned, the Senate put in specific items that should be decontrolled and the conference committee took those items out.

Mr. President, the Congress is presumed to be the policy-making branch of the Government. The makers of the Constitution intended it to be. The makers of the Constitution put the legislative branch first in the Constitution. Of the 3,000 words or so in the Constitution 65 percent, approximately, are devoted to the powers of Congress. The Congress controls all other branches of the Government. The Congress can impeach any member of the executive branch; the Congress can impeach any member of the judicial branch; the Congress can make laws under which they are supposed to act. But, Mr. President, that is not the case. If we pass this law simply extending the life of the OPA that is all the OPA wants. The Congress has failed to establish any direct policy over anything in this bill. Its terms are all in generalities, so that when the Administrator gets this bill he will look it over and will see that the life of the organization has been extended, and he can then say that the Congress itself did not know what it wanted; that the conferees did not know what they wanted, hence all is left to the discretion of the Administrator.

Here is the way things go in the administrative branch. Mr. President, who has charge of the foreign relations of our Government? The answer—the State Department under the President. Who calls the signals on the team that represents the State Department? The Secretary of State, of course, calls the signals, and his staff, his personnel, and his employees play on his team according to the signals he calls, and if anyone does not play according to his signals, out he goes. Who calls the signals in the War Department? Of course the Secretary of War is the manager of the team, but I doubt if he presumes to act as the signal caller. At the present time the man who calls the signals there is the General of the Armies, General Eisenhower. I do not complain of that; I do not know that a better choice could be made. Who calls the signals in the Department of Justice? There is only one answer. The Attorney General calls the signals.

Now, Mr. President, following the analogy, who calls the signals on the price-control program? There is only one answer, and that answer is Generalissimo Bowles. So long as his organization has life he does not need any law; the law is in his way and he pays little or no attention to the law enacted by the Congress.

In 1942 Congress passed a law containing a provision that in fixing maximum prices of farm commodities the element of farm wages should be considered and included. He has never read that law, or, if he has, he has paid no attention to it.

The Congress passed the Bates-Barkley amendment, but, so far as I can learn, he paid no attention to that law. The distinguished author of that amendment said that it was not being carried out as he thought it ought to be carried out. So he conferred with the Generalissimo himself, and after his conference, with his keen sense of perception, his fine eyesight, and acute hearing, he made the statement that he thought he could discern a slight improvement. That is not very assuring, Mr. President, to the farmers of the United States.

Getting back to meat, I exhibit to the Senate a copy of the Evening Star, printed in Washington, D. C., dated June 26, and I read the headline as follows:

> Meat famine spreads in district area with distributors depleted. Retail grocers report scant stock and no relief in sight.

After 4 years of manipulation of the price-control system, at a time when there is more meat in the country than ever, at least more live meat on the hoof—eighty-one or eighty-two million head of livestock—we come to the point under the control of the OPA that we have no meat in the city of Washington. The shelves are bare, and there is no prospect of any meat. Yet today the Senate will vote to approve that record.

Mr. President, it has been stated on both sides of the aisle that the management of OPA is a national scandal. Yet today the Senate, if I do not mistake my guess, will vote to approve and to continue what Senators admit is a national scandal.

Mr. President, the OPA has made every citizen of this Republic a law violator. All producers are law violators. That might be a little too broad, because many do not know they are violating the law. The Senator from Texas [Mr. O'DANIEL] had on his desk last night a stack of orders and laws 2 feet high. Those laws are orders and regulations and amendments which the OPA has promulgated for the government of the people of the United States. While I have not read those amendments and those orders, I think I would not be far wrong in stating every citizen of the United States has unknowingly violated some of those innumerable orders, rules, and regulations.

So, Mr. President, under this national scandal the producers today stand as law violators in the United States, and the processors likewise are law violators, in the main. Perhaps they do not know it, perhaps some have escaped, but the statement stands.

Mr. President, the distributors are law violators under the rules and regulations and amendments of OPA. Finally, the consumers of the country, great and small, old and young, if they are eating, are violating the provisions of some rule or regulation of OPA. Every time a citizen puts a piece of steak in his mouth, the chances are it is a black-market steak. The citizen has no idea where the steak came from. There is practically no meat going through the regulary examined and inspected slaughter houses, so the chances are about 9 out of 10 that the meat the people of the country are eating today is black-market meat, ungraded and uninspected.

What does anyone know to be the condition of that meat? Nothing. Yet the Senate today in all probability will vote in favor of continuing a system whereby the people of the United States are forced to continue for another year at least eating uninspected and ungraded meat, and from an unknown source. I cannot support that kind of a proposal.

Mr. President, as I view the question, those who vote for the conference report vote to pass the buck and ball to Bowles. Thereafter, as to what he does with it, they will have no say.

Mr. President, a vote for the conference report means a vote to approve of the national scandal about which we have heard so much on the floor of the Senate during the discussion of the bill. It is admitted that there is plenty of meat in our country. It is admitted that there are plenty of milk products, though they may be scarce in some sections. It is admitted there are plenty of poultry products. Yet, Mr. President, in this land of plenty there is a scarcity, and a vote in favor of the conference report in my opinion is a vote of approval of a near famine, practically, in a land of plenty.

Therefore, Mr. President, assuming to speak for the farm population of this country—and I do that by the authority of many thousands of letters and telegrams which I have in my office—I cannot vote for the conference committee report. So, when my name is called, I shall vote "no."

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to include in the RECORD a statement of a former distinguished Member of this body, now Governor of my State, Hon. Mon C. Wallgren, regarding the question now pending before the Senate, together with Governor Wallgren's letter to Mr. George Pepper enclosing the statement.

There being no objection, the statement and letter were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF WASHINGTON,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Olympia, May 29, 1946.

Mr. GEORGE PEPPER,
Executive Director, Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions, Seattle, Wash.

DEAR MR. PEPPER: Response to your letter of May 14 has been delayed because of my absence from my office. I have been in the East in the interest of the livestock and other industries of the State. I am glad to comply with your suggestion that I make public a statement in support of the OPA extension bill without crippling amendments and I shall cooperate with our State delegation in Congress in accomplishing this result.

I am enclosing herewith a copy of my public statement relative to the OPA controls.

With kind regards, I am,

Cordially yours,

MON C. WALLGREN,
Governor.

STATEMENT BY HON. MON C. WALLGREN IN SUPPORT OF OPA EXTENSION BILL WITHOUT CRIPPLING AMENDMENTS

The threat of unbridled inflation will continue to endanger us unless and until Congress gives approval to the OPA extension bill, without crippling amendments. There is no question but what the OPA can screen out certain nuisance items but controls must be maintained over all necessities. It is evident that selfish groups in this country are attempting to bring about the defeat of this measure or to so amend it as to make it ineffective. Once OPA controls are removed, prices on all commodities will immediately rise and inflation will be upon us. Inflation and speculation go hand-in-hand. The price of raw materials to the manufacturers will jump and the race to secure such materials will bring a constantly increasing manufacturers' cost. Merchants will then face increasing prices. The buying public will find that its dollar, saved during the past productive years, will shrink in value.

In 1920 inflationary prices, as many will remember, reached the point where sugar cost 25 cents per pound, bacon 58 cents per pound, eggs 90 cents per dozen, and many other items proportionately high. Clothing prices rose 30 to 50 percent. After the last World War, when pressures were far weaker than at present, rents climbed more than 50 percent.

The effect of all of this inflationary and speculative pressure would mean demands for increased wages which would again boost prices. The standard of living for the average family would be reduced to a distressing level, and for those on low fixed incomes it would result in wretchedness.

Some people misguidedly believe that taking off controls will mean spurt in production and that competition will then serve to hold prices down. But the present depletion of all consumer goods it so great that production could not be expected to increase to a point where competition would operate to bring prices down again for a considerable period of time. The more likely effect of this inflationary-speculative era would be that consumers would be unable to purchase enough goods and services to sustain the prices brought about by inflation and we would have another collapse similar to that which took place in 1929. Let us urge Congress to approve firm controls on prices and thus avoid repeating this frightful blunder.

Mr. BUSHFIELD. Mr. President, I wish to bring to the attention of the Senate a notorious and habitual violation and disregard by the Office of Price Administration of section 201, title 18, of the United States Criminal Code, commonly known as the Antilobbying Act.

Mr. President, I read a section of the code, as follows:

No part of the money appropriated by any act shall, in the absence of express authorization by Congress, be used directly or indirectly to pay for any personal service, advertisement, telegram, telephone, letter, printed or written matter, or other device, intended or designed to influence in any manner a Member of Congress to favor or oppose, by vote or otherwise, any legislation or appropriation by Congress, whether before or after the introduction of any bill or resolution proposing such legislation or appropriation; but this shall not prevent officers and employees of the United States from communicating to Members of Congress on the request of any Member or to Congress, through the proper channels, requests for legislation or appropriations which they deem necessary for the efficient conduct of the public business.

Any officer or employee of the United States who, after notice and hearing by the superior officer vested with the power of removing him, is found to have violated or attempted to violate this section shall be removed by such superior officer from office or employment. Any officer or employee of the United States who violates or attempts to violate this section shall also be guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or by imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or both.

Mr. President, this section prohibits the direct or indirect use of any part of money appropriated by any act, except where expressly authorized by Congress, to pay for any—(a) personal service, (b) advertisement, (c) telegram, (d) telephone, (e) letter, (f) printed or written matter, (g) or other device, intended or designed to influence in any manner a Member of Congress to favor or oppose, by vote or otherwise, any legislation or appropriation by Congress, whether before or after the introduction of any bill or resolution proposing such legislation.

Any officer or employee, after notice and hearing by the superior officer who has the power of removing him, found guilty of violating or attempting to violate section 6, must be removed from office or employment.

Furthermore, any officer or employee of the United States who violates or attempts to violate section 6, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction must be punished by a fine not to exceed $500, or by imprisonment for not to exceed 1 year, or both by fine and imprisonment.

The self-evident language of the section was explained to the House on May 29, 1919, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, Sixty-sixth Congress, first session, page 403 by Representative Good, of Iowa, a member of the Committee on Appropriations and, from the noted applause, met with laudable approval by the House. Representative Good stated, page 403:

The bill also contains a provision which I am frank to say is subject to a point of order. It is new legislation, but it will prohibit a practice that has been indulged in so often, without regard to what administration is in power—the practice of a bureau chief or the head of a department writing letters throughout the country, sending telegrams throughout the country, for this organization, for this man, for that company, to write his Congressman, to wire his Congressman, in behalf of this or that legislation [Applause.] The gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. Sherley, former chairman of this committee, during the closing days of the last Congress was greatly worried because he had on his desk thousands upon thousands of telegrams that had been started right here in Washington by some official wiring out for people to wire Congressman Sherley for this appropriation and for that. Now, they use the contingent fund for that purpose, and I have no doubt that the telegrams sent for that purpose cost the Government more than $7,500. Now, it was never the intention of Congress to appropriate money for this purpose, and section 5 (later changed to sec. 6, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD p. 911) of the bill will absolutely put a stop to that sort of thing. [Applause.]

Mr. President, Congress has not expressly authorized that any moneys appropriated for the Office of Price Administration could be expended contrary to the payments prohibited in section 6 of the act of 1919. In the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1945 (ch. 271, Public Law 132, approved July 5, 1945) which provided, among other things, appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1945, the appropriation for salaries and expenses of the Office of Price Administration was limited to "all necessary expenses of the Office of Price Administration in carrying out the provisions of the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, as amended by the act of October 2, 1942, and the provisions of the act of May 31, 1941 (55 Stat. 236) as amended by the Second War Powers Act, 1942, and acts amending or supplementing such acts, and all other powers, duties, and functions which may be lawfully delegated to the Office of Price Administration, including expenses of in-service training of employees, including salaries and traveling expenses of instructors."

It should be noted that Congress has recently revived and specifically referred to section 6 of the 1919 act in the Department of Agriculture Appropriation Act of 1946 (ch. 109, Public Law 52, approved May 5, 1945, H. R. 2689), as follows:

Provided further, That no part of any funds available to the Department of Agriculture, the War Food Administration, or any bureau, office, corporation, or other agency constituting a part of such Department or Administration shall be used in the current fiscal year for the payment of salary or travel expenses of any person who has been convicted of violating the act entitled "An act to prevent pernicious political activities", approved August 2, 1939, as amended, or who has been found in accordance with the provisions of section 6 of the act of July 11, 1919 (18 U. S. C. 201) to have violated or attempted to violate such section which prohibits the use of Federal appropriations for the payment of personal services or other expenses designed to influence in any manner a Member of Congress to favor or oppose any legislation or appropriation by Congress except upon request of any Member or through the proper official channels.

Thus, the direct or indirect use of appropriated moneys by an officer or employee of the United States to pay for personal service, advertisement, telegram, telephone, letter, printed or written matter, or other device intended or designed to influence a Member of Congress to favor or oppose, by vote or otherwise, any legislation or appropriation by Congress, either before or after the introduction of the bill, is a misdemeanor subject to a penalty by fine or imprisonment or both and removal of the officer or employee from office or employment.

Mr. President, every Member of the Senate has knowledge of both Mr. Bowles' and Mr. Porter's flagrant violation of this statute.

We have all been bombarded with telegrams, telephone calls, petitions, letters, post cards, and delegations, importuning us to "extend OPA without amendment"; to "vote against crippling amendments"; not to "kill price control," and similar inspired pressure.

We all know that this pressure on Congress was the direct result of literally hundreds of thousands of pamphlets, articles, charts, booklets, news releases, radio talks, and magazine articles prepared at the expense of the Government and out of funds appropriated by Congress and sent out at Government expense to women's clubs, labor unions, veterans and their families, schools, churches, newspapers, radio stations, and farm and similar organizations.

Recently many of us witnessed the spectacle of an airplane writing in the sky over the Capitol Building "Save OPA."

Mr. President, I am not so naive as to believe that Mr. Bowles or Mr. Porter or any other bureaucrat will ever be removed from office, or fined, or imprisoned for this flagrant, open, and notorious violation of this Federal statute.

However, this attitude of many bureaucrats that they are above the law and bigger than the Congress of the United States should cause the Congress to pause before it again surrenders the power of life or death over our business enterprises.

Mr. President, the people and the Congress of the United States have become indifferent, cynical, and calloused toward this kind of thing. Who would have believed a few years ago that a couple of obscure citizens, after becoming minor bureaucrats, could or would use millions of dollars of the public funds to publicize and glamorize themselves and build a powerful propaganda machine that can be turned on or off as one switches a light on or off?

Mr. President, who would have believed a few years ago that appointed public servants, responsible to the Congress, would have the effrontery publicly to brand a major committee bill "a monstrosity," "an economic booby trap," or, in effect, charge Members of Congress with being senile, doddering old men.

Who could anticipate that appointed public servants could or would organize and use a propaganda machine that overnight would be unleashed against Congress and its considered legislation. We all remember the next day after the House of Representatives passed the Price Control Act, how certain radio commentators, newspaper columnists, labor organizations, front organizations, all followed the lead of Messrs. Porter and Bowles in charging that "OPA was dead," the "Price Control Act was emasculated," "the pressure lobby had gutted OPA," "runaway inflation is on the way," and similar oft repeated untruths.

Mr. President, we all know about the protest meetings organized from coast to coast, the mass protests to Congress, the delegations from all over the country chanting the same chant "Kill the crippling amendments passed by the House."

This was not a strange coincidence, but was a cleverly organized propaganda campaign, financed with Treasury funds in violation of a United States criminal statute.

Mr. President, it is time for the Congress of the United States to take in hand and curb this vocal Frankenstein it has created.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I have been asked by some who are opposed to the adoption of the conference report rather to summarize the position which some of us have taken in the Senate relative to this legislation, and to make plain our feelings respecting it, and the reasons for the way we shall vote upon this most important measure.

First, I want to say that I think the distinguished Senator from Texas [Mr. O'DANIEL] rendered the Senate and the people of the country a distinct service last night when, during his speech he read telegrams from people all over the United States which he called "the voice of the people."

I should like to say for the RECORD that the distinguished Senator from Texas is not the only Senator who has received telegrams on this issue. I, too, could have brought into the Senate hundreds of telegrams and letters which I have received, most of them within the past 24 hours, but many of them received over the period of the past 2 weeks, telling of the deplorable conditions throughout the United States. I wish to add to the "voice of the people" which was so eloquently and forcefully presented by the distinguished Senator from Texas a few of the telegrams which I have received. I do not wish to offer them all. Time would not permit me to do what the distinguished Senator from Texas did, because of the limitation of debate. However, I have selected from hundreds of telegrams and letters which I have received approximately 115, from many States in the Union, including my own State.

These telegrams are not what we call pressure telegrams. They are not sent by organizations, or by persons who have been asked by pressure groups to write or telegraph Senators in the interest of some minority group. They are examples of telegrams which are being received from individuals all over the country. They come from housewives, merchants, farmers, businessmen, wholesalers, manufacturers, processors, jobbers, distributors, retailers, and laboring people. They come from all classes of our economy. I wish to read only one of these telegrams, but I shall ask unanimous consent that the others be printed in the RECORD.

Some may believe that these telegrams are part of a propaganda drive, and that we are exhibiting them to make a show of pressure. Let me say in all seriousness that anyone who reads the RECORD will notice the names of the small towns from which many of the telegrams come. They are telegrams voluntarily sent, imploring the Senate to take these controls off the backs of the people.

The following telegram is from Kearney, Nebr.:

KEARNEY, NEBR., June 27, 1946.

Senator KENNETH WHERRY,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

We have had no beef for college cafeteria feeding 600 students since May 1 this year.

Little of anything but chicken since September 1, 1944. We are in no position to compete with agencies using black market. Believe prices might rise for a time if OPA eliminated, but that eventually prices would level off. Continuation of present meat situation intolerable.

HERBERT L. CUSHING,
President, State Teachers College.

This is a typical message from an educational institution. I have received messages from doctors and from directors of hospitals, telling about meat famines in various districts, and pleading that something be done to obtain meat for the famine areas. I wish I had the opportunity which the distinguished Senator from Texas had to read these telegrams. They are not telegrams commending me, but graphically bringing to the attention of Members of the Senate the pleas which are made for relief from totalitarian controls in order that the people may get food and clothing.

I ask unanimous consent that the telegrams to which I have referred be printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the telegrams were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LINCOLN, NEBR., June 26, 1946.
Senator KENNETH WHERRY,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:
You are putting up a grand fight and so right; keep it up.

T. B. STRAIN.

OMAHA, NEBR., June 27, 1946.
Senator KENNETH WHERRY,
Washington, D. C.:
Hold your ground OPA bill. Filibuster out if necessary.

C. S. HAINES.

HASTINGS, NEBR., June 27, 1946.
Senator WHERRY,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:
Keep up the good fight. Remove ceilings on stocks, poultry, dairy products; filibuster if need be.

S. A. COATS.

FALLS CITY, NEBR., June 27, 1946.
Senator WHERRY of Nebraska,
Washington, D. C.:
Keep up the good work, Senator.

FRED HSCHOCK.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, ILL.,
June 26, 1946.
Hon. KENNETH S. WHERRY,
Senate Office Building:
As erstwhile Nebraskan I congratulate you on your fight against OPA. Keep up the good work.

JOHN CLAY & CO.,
W. J. MCGINNIS,
Manager.

COZAD, NEBR., June 25, 1946.
Hon. Senator KENNETH WHERRY,
Washington, D. C.:
Contacts and personal conversation satisfy me that central Nebraska merchants and farmers are about to revolt against OPA livestock and meat regulations. Meat markets in small towns closing. My patients unable to buy meat. Please vote out OPA at once.

Dr. C. H. SHEES.

COZAD, NEBR., June 25, 1946.
Hon. KENNETH S. WHERRY,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Present OPA regulations on meats and all other food products are making people lose all respect for Government. People are naming prices through black market regardless of OPA. As a producer of live stock, I urge you to use all your power to defeat OPA.

C. T. YOUNG.

SUMNER, NEBR., June 25, 1946.
Senator KENNETH WHERRY,
Senate Building:
For God's sake do something to save the livestock and meat industry of these United States.

GUY SCUFDER.

COZAD, NEBR., June 25, 1946.
Hon. KENNETH S. WHERRY,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
With OPA regulations live ceilings and so forth the livestock and meat industry is in terrible mess. Practically impossible buy meat anywhere except through black-market operators and even then only very limited supply of inferior quality. Present bill before Senate if passed will make it worse and will force livestock feeders and growers and legitimate meat industry out of business. Request you do everything possible oppose this legislation and insist upon livestock and meats being removed from OPA controls.

NOEL COVER.

BI-LO MARKET,
Hastings, Nebr., June 23, 1946.
DEAR SENATOR WHERRY: Please fight to kill the OPA on everything except rents and sugar.
Beets should be $2 per ton higher at least.
Answer is not needed, just fight to save this country.

L. J. COATES.

NORTH PLATTE, NEBR., June 26, 1946.
Hon. KENNETH WHERRY,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
It is inconceivable that Senate will reverse itself and approve present OPA bill. In our judgment retention of meat price and slaughtering regulations will completely stop supplies and create situation far worse than anything we have ever experienced. I urge you to use every means at your command to defeat present bill and immediately abolish livestock controls in the interest of common sense and sensible meat distribution and prices.

RAY FARQUHAR,
Executive Director, Frozen Food Locker Manufacturers and Suppliers Association.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator WHERRY,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
My honest butcher has no meat. The black market got above my reach. I was forced to close my restaurant. My Jewish black-market butcher wants the OPA for at least one more year. My honest butcher and myself want to end the OPA now.

THOMAS ODRIEN,
Restaurant Owner.

ELMHURST, ILL., June 27, 1946.
Senator WHERRY,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:
I would like to wake up Monday, July 1, without OPA. Please help Senator O'DANIEL.

ERNST HAMMERSCHMIDT.

TOPEKA, KANS., June 27, 1946.
Senator KENNETH WHERRY,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Suggest OPA bill be amended to give Comrade Bowles right to immediately liquidate all American kulocks rather than slowly starving them to death. Farm tractors went up $127 apiece yesterday. Present bill first attempt of American Congress to enslave an entire class of people. Filibuster your job.

CLAYTON E. KLINE.

GLENDALE, CALIF., June 27, 1496.
Senator WHERRY,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Female steers are as ridiculous as OPA. Help Senator O'DANIEL return America to America.

CHARLES W. BOYLE.

HANFORD, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator WHERRY,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
According to Fulton Lewis, Jr., you are our last defense against the dominating bureaucrats in OPA. Don't give up.

HERBERT BUTTON.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., June 26, 1946.
Senator WHERRY,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.
DEAR SIR: As a citizen of United States I have a right to pass my opinion that the OPA is ruination of small businessmen. Will you kindly analyze this situation. Thank you for same.

LOUIS REST.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 26, 1946.
Senator WHERRY,
Washington, D. C.:
We cannot operate anything without violating the law. Please kill OPA.

WALTER GARVIN CO., INC.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 27, 1946.
Senator WHERRY,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
I trust you and Senator O'DANIEL will filibuster on the OPA bill and return our country to the American way of life.

Dr. DONALD J. MACDANIEL.

TAFT, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Hon. KENNETH S. WHERRY,
United States Senator, Capitol,
Washington, D. C.:
You true friend of California housewives. They have empty bowls and too much Bowles, but no meat, bread, butter, or anything else. Knock out OPA.

Mrs. J. W. TRAVERS.

PHOENIX, ARIZ., June 27, 1946.
Senator WHERRY of Nebraska,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.
DEAR SENATOR: Please do everything you can to remove price controls off our foodstuffs. Thanking you very much to do whatever you can. Do hope that you gain enough of support to roll it back as everything is at a standstill.

E. H. MITCHELL,
Silver Dollar Motor Court.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 26, 1946.
Hon. KENNETH S. WHERRY,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Radio report tells of O'DANIEL's contemplated filibuster to kill OPA. This is good news to Americans opposed to European bureaucratic methods. Urge you fight with the same spirit you showed on town meeting OPA discussion. House has failed us. May the Senate save us from this step to statism.

CARL AND HELENE JOHNSON.

TROY, N. Y., June 27, 1946.
Senator KENNETH S. WHERRY,
Washington, D. C.:
All my family and everyone I know are heartily sick of OPA and senseless restraints.

Also disapprove of subsidies. Only Communists want continued regulations.

BLANCHE VAN EVERY GEER.

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 27, 1946.
Senator KENNETH WHERRY,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

I earnestly urge you to filibuster to kill the OPA completely. This is our last chance to get rid of it.

A. W. CORSE.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, June 27, 1946.
Senator KENNETH WHERRY,
Senate House, Washington, D. C.:

We are in back of you 100 percent in your fight to end price control. We look with pride on one truly patriotic American who knows that present bill will only end in black markets. American businesses are based on free enterprise. Do your utmost.

GUS JUENGLING & SON MEAT PACKERS.

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 26, 1946.
Senator KENNETH S. WHERRY,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

We sincerely urge you to fight most vigorously to remove meat control and thereby break the black market which has made it impossible for us to purchase meat legally during the past 5 months.

BONNEE FROZEN PRODUCTS CO.,
L. JOHN LEWIS.

MARION, IOWA, June 26, 1946.
Hon. Senator WHERRY,
Washington, D. C.:

Kill the OPA now. We are sick to death of it. Vote against the inclusion of railway mail service pensions with social security. We want no part of it. It is our pension bought and paid for and we want no tampering of administration by New Deal politicians. Sincerely,

JACK W. COMSTOCK.

DES MOINES, IOWA, June 26, 1946.
Senator WHERRY,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:

Nebraska should praise God for a Senator who sees the danger ahead if OPA were continued.

A. G. PETERSON.

RADFORD, VA., June 26, 1946.
Senator WHERRY,
Washington, D. C.:

Congratulations. Away with OPA.

MAX C. RUPE.

Don't give up fight against OPA. Filibuster.

HELEN I. MCMULLIN.

HARRISBURG, PA., June 27, 1946.
Senator WHERRY,
United States Senate:

Stick to your guns and compel controls lifted from meat and butter. Better still no OPA hampering Americans.

S. S. POMEROY.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 26, 1946.
Hon. KENNETH S. WHERRY,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Minnesota congratulates you. Trusts you will succeed in removing price control on meats. Butcher shops are out of meats, many closed. Nearly everybody driven into the arms of black marketeers. Through their weakness the House betrayed the public interest.

H. L. PRESTHOLT.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, June 27, 1946.
Senator KENNETH S. WHERRY,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

We are in back of you 100 percent in your fight to end price control, especially OPA control of meat and meat products. We urge your continued efforts to take OPA control off of meats.

JACOB BAUER SONS.

NEW GALILEE, PA., June 27, 1946.
Senator KENNETH S. WHERRY,

I. T. WARREN.

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL., June 25, 1946.
Hon. KENNETH S. WHERRY,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:
We are informed OPA bill out of conference committee leaves control on meat. This means that many legitimate packing houses will be forced out of business and the black market will be in control. You have the facts brought out before Banking and Currency and Agricultural Committees. We have done everything possible to present the gravity of the situation. We urge that you do everything possible to block passage of bill in present form.
HUNTER PACKING CO.,
FRANK A. HUNTER, Jr., President.

HOUSTON, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator KENNETH S. WHERRY,
United States Senate:
We urgently request you do everything in your power to reinstate in the OPA extension bill the Wherry amendment which would give to wholesalers and distributors their peacetime mark-ups. The committee bill ignores completely the legitimate wholesaler and distributor; and if passed its present form, will do nothing more than compel a vital part of our distribution system to go out of business. You are doing a fine job. More power to you.
GEORGE A. DASCOMB, Jr.,
President, The Vaughan Lumber Co., Inc.

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, ILLINOIS,
June 26, 1946.
Senator KENNETH S. WHERRY,
Washington, D. C.:
I am farming about 1,000 acres; am half interested in 2,500 head of beef cattle. If controls were taken off, livestock production would greatly increase. To keep controls on, production will go lower and black markets will get much worse. Why not let supply and demand govern and legitimate packers operate?
W. H. YOUNG.
EDWARDSVILLE, ILL.

MISSOULA, MONT., June 26, 1946.
Hon. KENNETH WHERRY,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Montana packers have been losing $5 to $10 per head on cattle purchased at compliance prices and sold at OPA wholesale dressed prices since January 1, 1944, when the Vinson cattle stabilization plan became effective. Black-market operators have established cattle prices in Montana, as well as the country at large, $10 to $30 per head above compliance prices. All real friends of producers and small packers should vote for the elimination of livestock subsidies and the decontrol of livestock and meat—the only way to eliminate the black market.
E. S. HOLMES,
President, Montana Meat Packers Association.

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, ILLINOIS,
June 26, 1946.
Senator KENNETH WHERRY,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:
To say we are heartsick at the action of the conference committee toward the OPA is mild. For years from our farms we have been among the largest producers of meat animals in the State of Illinois. In recent years at very short profits, and this year is showing up the worst of all. But we were living in hopes that this body would not resort to supposedly public opinion that is founded on vote-getting propaganda without facts. We at the present time are producing enough meat to feed 6,000 people per day. We have never sold one head in black market, but now we are sure there is no other way out or quit business, and this business is all we know. We think the American people are capable of running their affairs. Give them a chance.

We are wholesale carload distributors of lumber—have been for over 25 years. Under OPA regulations we have been directly discriminated against and put out of business. Senate-House conference committee report on OPA of no benefit to ourselves or other direct mill shipping lumber wholesalers. Would appreciate your rejecting the report and instruct committee to renew efforts for revision of bill more in line with that passed by the Senate. Will appreciate this consideration, as otherwise black market will continue grow bigger and bigger.

Joint conference committee report on OPA leaves wholesale lumber distributors in less favorable position than present discriminatory regulations. We solicit and urge your support in rejecting this report for revision by committee. We feel that wholesale distributors should at least be allowed the percentage of trade commissions they received prior to OPA as mark-up on ceiling prices. The joint committee report, if enacted, will surely put thousands of legitimate dealers out of business and will further encourage black-market operations.

Since 1908 we have operated retail lumber business in North College Hill, Ohio. Under OPA regulations we have been directly discriminated against and put out of business. Senate-House conference committee report on OPA of no benefit to retail lumber dealers. The report should be rejected and the committee instructed to renew efforts for revision of bill more in line with that originally passed by the Senate. If this is not done, black market will continue to flourish and legitimate concerns with enviable records for years will be out of business.

Since press reports indicate price-control conferees failed to definitely include your amendment intended to provide same protection for wholesalers and distributors, as does Taft amendments for manufacturers and processors, and since failure to recognize the plight of this essential segment of industry and commerce spells disaster for them, may we respectfully urge that you stand by your guns and insist that they be provided for as your amendment intended they should be. We lumbermen appreciate your good fight. More power to you.

The 500 home-owned food stores of Erie and Erie County, Pa., who distribute more than 80 percent of the food products in a trading area of more than 200,000 people, protest and demand that OPA controls and ceilings on livestock, meats, dairy, and poultry products be removed as of July 1, 1946.
We believe that free enterprise on these foods will provide an uninterrupted flow of livestock, meats, dairy and poultry products in our community and the entire United States. We feel that with free enterprise that prices on those products will soon be lower than is now being paid.

If you wish to prevent a national revolt on the part of all business against Government control you will vote to abolish OPA completely. Listen to the voices that are predicting the tomorrows present polls, refuse OPA three to one. Do not refuse to recognize the sounds of the times. Give industry and labor the opportunity of proving itself by eliminating controls for 9 months. If industry and labor fails to meet the challenge by then you can have a completely free hand. Present regulations are impossible, impractical, communistic, and unenforcible under a peacetime economy. When a widow with three children who desires to start a combination day nursery and home for three children who are now in an institution for two-thirds of the space devoted to the nursery and one-third of the space devoted for the home, is refused permission to build without priority assistance it is almost too late to say we still have the freedom guaranteed under our Constitution.

OUR DEAR MR. WHERRY: The conditions just passed by the House on the OPA bill are very unsatisfactory to the Panhandle, Texas. As far as meat, poultry, and meat and dairy products are concerned there is nothing but black market here. As supervisor of Ideal Food Stores markets I say, "Shall we operate legally and in fair competition, or shall we continue to operate with black market?" If the OPA continues the public will be buying at black-market prices, whereas if it is discontinued it would be much cheaper to buy legally and at competitive prices. My belief is that fair competition would discard all necessities of the OPA.
Sincerely yours,

Something over 100,000,000 people are beginning to stoop, sneak, badger, and bluff to get sugar, soap, syrup, clothing, feed, lumber, radios, nails, autos, flour, bread, butter, cheese, meat, and or anything else they want and should have. Should black or free markets prevail? These are the people of what was and we believe is the finest nation on earth, the most enlightened, aggressive, upstanding, and compassionate. Consider coffee up, butter up, cheese up, bread up, beer up. Where is the held line? Consider no lumber, no autos, no sugar, no radios, no meat,

No soap. Where is production? Gobs of these people know the death of OPA on Sunday is just another of the Bowles crowd's propaganda scares to mislead the Nation's thinking people. They know Congress can reenact or relegislate whenever they see fit to do so or feel it necessary for the national welfare. Does someone or anyone think America must be kept in or returned to swaddling clothes? And if to what group of bureaucrats consider themselves competent to be pappy to us all. SPOKANE, WASH., June 27, 1946.

Hon. KENNETH S. WHERRY,

Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:

Stand by your guns. You are absolutely right about price control. But rent control is the worst culprit of all. Owners of rental housing are afraid to complain about OPA because OPA has instituted a "reign of terror" like the Commune of Paris, 1792–94. They collect fines out of court, without trial, like the five kings of Ireland in the Middle Ages. OPA sends out letters telling landlords to dig up $500 or $1,000 (without trial) for some infraction of their Communist rules, and two policemen to collect or go to jail. And like the "dark ages" no appeal is allowed. And no one can know their laws, not even lawyers, because their word is law. And the owners of rental property have no rights in their own homes. Why should anyone have to rent at a loss or charge the same rent in 1946 as they were charging during the depression 10 years ago just because that was what they were charging on March 1, 1942? No profit for the landlord is a cunning device of OPA to Russianize the United States of America. An excerpt from article VIII of the Constitution of the United States of America reads: "Nor excessive fines imposed nor cruel or unusual punishment inflicted." But Spokane OPA pompously fined a 73-year-old landlord $9,000 (AP) news item (excerpt) from Syracuse, N. Y. "71-year-old widow who charged 50 cents a week above the OPA maximum rental for an apartment, had to pay $1,500 to a tenant," and so on, ad infinitum. Could you beat that in Russia? And the OPA has something on everybody. Is that the new Russian plan and specification for the land of the free and the home of the brave? Remember? Socialists and Communists say "Get the landlord first and the rest will be easy." Save the United States of America. Repeal or modify rent control and blow up the OPA. Remove the ball and chain.

Mr. WHERRY. As the second part of the evidence, I should like to introduce a number of letters and telegrams received from pharmaceutical and chemical laboratories throughout the country. Time does not permit me to read them, but anyone who thinks for a moment that the situation is not serious need only go to the chemical laboratories of the country to discover the shortage of glands and chemical materials necessary to produce insulin, adrenalin, and dozens of other important drugs. I ask Senators to read these telegrams. There is no pressure about them in any way, shape, or form. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks letters and telegrams which have been received from pharmaceutical organizations.

There being no objection, the letters and telegrams were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LETTERS AND TELEGRAMS FROM SOME OF THE LARGEST PHARMACEUTICAL COMPANIES

A letter from Parke, Davis & Co., of Detroit, Mich., dated April 12, 1946, reads as follows:

"You are certainly aware of the fact that the available supplies of animal glands for medicinal use during the past several years have been constantly decreasing. This has variously been attributed to a shortage of labor, a shortage of feed, or a dislocation of animal production on the farms.

"At present the situation is perhaps more critical than at any time since the beginning of the war, and we believe that one important cause is diversion of cattle away from the regularly inspected packing houses into black-market channels. This, of course, not only presents a danger from supplying the public with uninspected meats but results in a total waste of all the animal glands, fats, hides and other byproducts. This is particularly serious to the manufacturer of medicinal and pharmaceutical products which are necessary for the maintenance of public health.

"At no time during the war were we able to fill our orders for products made from the pituitary gland of cattle, many of which were strictly military orders. This pituitary gland produces two important products, one of which is used in childbirth and the other in most surgical cases and for shock. We are unable, at present, to obtain more than about one-third of our normal requirements of these glands.

"Another extremely important gland is the beef suprarenal gland, which also yields two separate medicinal extracts: First, Adrenalin—so necessary in the treatment of asthmatic conditions as well as a heart stimulant. Second, the extract of the suprarenal cortex, which is the only known treatment for the many people suffering from Addison's disease. This is not curative but has to be taken daily to keep these people alive. We are not obtaining more than 50 percent of our estimated requirements of the beef suprarenal gland.

"Records indicate that patients suffering from diabetes are becoming more numerous each month and the only known preparation which will keep these people alive is insulin, which is made from the pancreas gland and which has to be taken daily in most cases. These glands are also used in connection with production of protein hydrolysates, representing amino acids, most recently finding wide application in the nutritional field.

"There is also a very large demand for ox bile which forms the raw material for several important products used and recognized by the medical profession for various disorders of the human gall bladder.

"Anything which will serve to direct the flow of normal supplies of cattle into the usual reliable packing house channels is not only desirable from the standpoint of procuring these various byproducts but would seem to be positively imperative if we are to maintain the public health standards of our people.

"We trust that this very important problem will receive the most serious consideration of any Senate committee dealing with it."

A telegram from Eli Lilly & Co., Indianapolis, Ind., April 10, 1946 says:

"It is our sincere hope you will be able to fully impress the proper authorities with the very serious shortage of supplies of raw materials necessary for important drug manufacture which are obtained from the meat packing industry. During the past several months have personally called on approximately 100 slaughterers in Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Missouri, and Illinois, and have just today returned from trip including Spokane, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Phoenix, San Antonio, and Houston for the specific purpose of procurement of additional supplies pancreas glands, beef bile, thyroid glands. Almost universally have heard the same story on all of these contacts, namely that current regulations and conditions do not permit profitable operations especially in beef and that losses coupled with the virtual impossibility of staying in compliance make the situation nothing short of desperate.

"Cannot personally verify these facts; but after hearing the same story so many times from meat packers, both large and small, feel definitely that considerable change is necessary if the legitimate meat packer is to stay in operation at profitable volume and be honest. If situation continues much longer, someone must be prepared to accept responsibility for shortage of essential drugs, such as insulin, and other important drugs such as bile, pituitaries, thyroid, and perhaps antianemia preparations. Our current procurement is very much short of minimum needs and appears to be getting worse right along."

A letter from Wilson Laboratories, Chicago, Ill., dated April 6, 1946, reads as follows:

"The marked falling off in receipts of cattle has resulted in our supplies of certain glandular raw material being reduced to the point where we will have to discontinue operations.

"For example, beef pancreas are largely used in preparing insulin and other medicinal products. There is a shortage of pancreas of all sorts for insulin production. The failure to get insulin is very serious for the diabetic person who must rely on a daily injection of insulin.

"Pituitary glands are used to make extracts that are very largely employed in childbirth, in surgery, and in cases of shock. We are unable to produce these essential extracts because of a lack of raw material. We are practically shut down in that department.

"The failure to get cattle means our being unable to get ox bile, for which there is an enormous medical demand. You are familiar with this, since ox gall is used in the production of dehydrochloric acid. Bile products are used in the treatment of certain liver and gall-bladder and intestinal disturbances.

"There is a very serious disease known as Addison's disease, which involves the adrenal gland. We have been preparing an extract from beef adrenals that is capable of restoring those afflicted with Addison's disease to economic independence. The extract must be administered daily very much like the use of insulin in diabetes. Addison's disease patients are very susceptible to infection. Unless they have available an adequate supply of adrenal cortex extract they are in grave danger of dying.

"I do not know what becomes of these glands from cattle that are killed through black-market operations. To the best of my knowledge there is no indication that these materials are being saved. The failure to save them constitutes a definite menace to national health."

A second telegram from Eli Lilly & Co., dated April 12, 1946, says:

"If our telegram of April 10 does not in your opinion fully express the position which we as pharmaceutical manufacturers are now in due to severely reduced slaughter of many legitimate meat packers we shall be glad to have you wire or phone us, and we will endeavor to work with you to the fullest extent. Our situation with respect to essential drugs such as insulin is such that we must not overlook any opportunity to place our position to the attention of authority responsible for changes which will make the saving of pancreas gland and other important animal products possible in a quantity which is necessary. We consider this extremely serious situation which demands attention as soon as possible."

A telegram from the Cudahy Packing Co., Chicago, Ill., dated April 12, 1946, says:

"One most unfortunate result of the present impossible situation in the livestock and packing industry is the wanton waste of valuable animal glands used by manufacturing chemists and makers of pharmaceuticals in the preparation of medicines essential in medical and surgical practice. Black-market slaughterers possess neither the facilities nor the technical skill required to recover these glands, and as a result the lives of many thousands of people under physicians' care are seriously endangered. For that reason, among many others, we urge action now to restore normal operations in the livestock and packing industry."

A telegram from G. D. Searle & Co., Chicago, Ill., dated April 12, 1946, says:

"As a result of current price policy in meat industry causing great diversion of animals from usual packing plant, we are unable to purchase but very small quantities of animal glands which we use in pharmaceutical manufacture. Consequently, supply only minor portion of physicians and hospital demand for necessary drug prepared from these materials."

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, in my speech on Wednesday I called attention to the fact that labor should be interested in seeing that price controls are lifted. They are causing wholesale unemployment. At that time I stated that I had received a message from the president and secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers Workmen of North America, an organization which covers the entire industry. I wish to read the first paragraph of this telegram, and then I shall ask unanimous consent that the remainder of the telegram, which is five pages in length, be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks. The first paragraph reads as follows:

We are firmly convinced that present Government regulations in the meat-packing industry are unenforceable. These inoperable prohibitions have already resulted in thousands of men and women in packing plants being unemployed. They have resulted in scores of meat-packing plants closing their doors. Unless something is done quickly, hundreds more will do likewise. It is impossible to prohibit the flow of necessary edibles to the consumers where there is always available a ready source of supply. There is no acute shortage of livestock. The public wants it. Legitimate packers are willing to slaughter it, but governmental restrictions apparently make this extremely difficult. The Nation had its experience with prohibitive measures in alcohol during the prohibition era. Even the life-for-a-pint law in Michigan did not prevent bootlegging.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point as part of my remarks the entire telegram, of which I have read the first paragraph.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TEXT OF TELEGRAM SENT TO PRESIDENT TRUMAN, SECRETARY ANDERSON, AND MESSRS. PORTER AND BOWLES, BY THE PRESIDENT AND SECRETARY-TREASURER OF THE AMALGAMATED MEAT CUTTERS AND BUTCHERS WORKMEN OF NORTH AMERICA, A. F. L., ON APRIL 5, 1946

We are firmly convinced that present Government regulations in the meat packing industry are unenforceable. These inoperable prohibitions have already resulted in thousands of men and women in packing plants being unemployed. They have resulted in scores of meat packing plants closing their doors. Unless something is done quickly, hundreds more will do likewise. It is impossible to prohibit the flow of necessary edibles to the consumers where there is always available a ready source of supply. There is no acute shortage of livestock. The public wants it. Legitimate packers are willing to slaughter it, but governmental restrictions apparently make this extremely difficult. The Nation had its experience with prohibitive measures in alcohol during the prohibition era. Even the "Life for a pint" law in Michigan did not prevent bootlegging.

Bootlegging and black marketing are twin brothers. The consumers of our Nation no longer feel that they are under a patriotic obligation to observe unnecessary wartime restrictions. Black marketing in meats even when the war was at its height was widespread. It was impossible to enforce the prohibition of the sale and manufacture of alcohol, it is all the more impossible to enforce inoperable restrictive regulations in the flow of a commodity that the consumers need and which certainly, under even half-normal conditions, ought not to be interfered with.

It seems to us rather inconsistent to adhere to a hold-the-line principle when every consumer knows that the line is not being held. In many commodities, prices have been increased as much as 300 percent without any attempt being made on the part of the OPA to regulate them. It is also very inconsistent for our Government agencies to determine to hold the line on some commodities produced by some industries and completely ignore rising price levels of commodities in other industries. We offer strenuous objection to the plan of the OPA to place more rigid restrictions upon non-federally inspected slaughterhouses which would even make the situation worse. It is contrary to every concept of fairness to impose general restrictions upon small slaughterers that to some extent at least puts the Government in a position of finding legitimate small businessmen guilty of black marketing before they have been accused of such an offense.

The present national situation is such that offers opportunity to Federal inspected meat plants to engage in black market operations as well as non-Federal establishments. If meat can be purchased, the public is going to buy it. They consider that the war is over and that personal sacrifices need no longer be made in their principal table commodity. It is not surprising, therefore, that black market operators are springing up in all sections of the country. The owners of these establishments see an opportunity to make money. They do not consider it unpatriotic to do so; and very definitely the impossible restrictions now being imposed by OPA upon the meat industry will cause an increase in black market operations rather than a decrease. These regulations only result in a terrific increase in the cost of meat to the consumer, and the Government and the OPA is responsible for the situation. It is responsible for the loss of the thousands of jobs of our membership and responsible for the present inability of hundreds of legitimate slaughterers to continue their business.

We feel sincerely that if these restrictions were eliminated the prices of meat to the consumer would within a very short time level off which would result in cheaper purchases of the product. It would result in the packing industry generally booming as it has never boomed before because of the responsibility of our Nation to do all in its power to feed a famished world as well as to slaughter for the needs of ready purchasers within our own Nation.

The whole plan of meat price control as presently constructed is a crazy quilt of impossibilities. The purchaser of livestock is criminally libel, but the seller is not. The slaughtering industry, while to some extent at least, is influenced greatly by the larger packers; nevertheless it has always been highly competitive. We feel it will continue to remain a highly competitive industry. There is an abundant supply and there is an overabundant demand. Why not give these men who have been in the meat business all of their lives an opportunity to prove what they can do and release the controls. If they do not succeed in eliminating the present existing evils, there is no reason why the Government then cannot restore restrictions that would be workable even to the extent of actually operating the entire industry including the sale of livestock. At least the men who know the industry ought to have a chance to operate it so the consumer may have lower prices and so that the thousands of men and women, who earn their livelihood in the industry might have the opportunity to do so.

Mr. WHERRY. In my speech of last Wednesday I called attention to the fact that there was black marketing not only in meats, but in all industry. It is Nation-wide. I challenge any Member of the Senate to rise and say that there is not black marketing in lumber. Those of us who conducted hearings in connection with lumber know that today black marketing in lumber is almost as extensive as in connection with meats and foodstuffs. There is also to a great extent—and it is becoming more prevalent each day—black marketing in grain. The black market in grain today is tremendous. Times does not permit me to go into all the black-marketing operations in connection with grain, but at this point in the RECORD I should like to have printed a memorandum which was handed me, from the National Association of Commodity Exchanges and Allied Trades. I place it in the RECORD at this point because it graphically shows the break-down in enforcement, the law violations and the chaotic conditions in the production, sale, and distribution of grain.

There being no objection, the memorandum was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SUMMATION FROM NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COMMODITY EXCHANGES AND ALLIED TRADES SENT TO SENATE AND HOUSE OPA CONFEREES

I

Complete chaos rules in the grain situation in this country due to unworkable price controls. Our humanitarian efforts for famine relief have been impeded by reason of this chaos to the point where administrative departments of the Government have been forced to resort to one expediency after another in their attempts to secure necessary grain to meet famine commitments. Only to the extent that such governmental action has been toward eliminating fictitious price distortions in grains has it been successful. But, the elimination of one inequity has created another and worse one in its place. Farmer resentment has mounted. Our mills producing breadstuffs for home consumption have shut down. Animal feeders have become desperate. Black markets have spread and flourished. According to competent testimony before congressional committees, three-quarters of the country's greatest grain crop, corn, is moving in black markets. The flow of grains have virtually disappeared from many important commercial channels. Conditions are getting worse.

II

Threats of real disaster loom if livestock, poultry and meats are to be freed from price controls while grains remain under price controls. Livestock and poultry are but the end product of grain. It is inequitable and untenable to expect grain to be shipped off the farm to feed our people at one level of price when it can be walked off the farm at another and entirely different level of price. Breadlines in America will become a commonplace.

Postulate: The freeing of grain prices will facilitate assembly of supplies for humanitarian export shipments.

There is today, with uncertainty over OPA's future, a marked tendency on the part of farmers to hold back grain crops. Even if grain price control is continued until early in 1947, the possibility of increased prices then will convince many producers that the cost of storage for those months ahead will be less than the price increase to be expected in 1947. And if there is release of controls over animal foods, without decontrol of grains, the tendency to put price-controlled grains into commercial channels will fall off sharply as farm feeding ratios get better. In the meantime, grain sought for the relief program from commercial channels will be under influence of Government set-aside orders which farmers resist, and the competing influence of black markets which apparently cannot be controlled by the OPA. It will be a struggle between USDA controls and black-market prices, to get food for famine relief.

The only deterrent on some hoarding of grains would be the black market, itself both a corrupting influence in our Nation as well as a higher price level in fact. Grain crops of 1946 can be stored until the estimated end of OPA in 1947 with logical hope of a gain in price greater than the storage costs.

Industrial costs are advancing rapidly, mainly through increasing costs of labor, both in hourly rates and changing productivity per worker. Agricultural producers will not be content to have progressive increase of urban labor costs while their own labor wage figured in price obtained for their output, is strictly limited by OPA.

At a somewhat higher level, grains would flow more freely and famine relief needs could be more surely met, upon a free price basis.

If we are to set aside 250,000,000 bushels of wheat for secondary relief program needs in 1946–47, the surest way to get the grain is by price. While people abroad cry for food, it will seem difficult for governments here or abroad to explain that they cannot get enough grain at a low price; and decline to get sufficient grain at a somewhat higher price.

Shortages, both for domestic and foreign needs, result from maldistribution caused by price distortion. Grains have been wasted in unbelieveable quantities over the past few years due to this phenomena. For instance, wheat, the human consumption grain, has been fed to animals lavishly. Under the wartime stimulus of just a moderately favorable feed price ration around 350,000,000 bushels of wheat were fed to animals in one recent year.

The necesssarily clumsy efforts of artificial adjustment of price distortion by fiat has always been too little and too late. Without the automatic adjustment of delicate price ratios the disappearance of 400,000,000 bushels of wheat or more as feed this crop year is entirely possible. As the result of past policy, we have the unthinkable condition where mills are shut down in this country when our people need food, and breadlines actually exist today.

Postulate: Price ceilings must be lifted from livestock, meats, and poultry to correct well-defined evil conditions in these markets. Livestock meats and poultry are but the end products of grains. One cannot be decontrolled without the other. If ceilings are removed from prices of livestock, meats, and poultry, without simultaneous removal of ceiling prices on grains, the following results must be expected: (1) Further expansion of an already over-expanded animal population on farms; (2) a tremendous stimulation of the black markets in feed grains and ingredients; (3) producer resentment against congressional discrimination, in prices, as between farms producing grains principally, and producers of animal foods.

1. Numbers of animals on farms in the United States reached unusually high, and record numbers during World War II. This increase was made possible by Government administered ceiling and support prices, which insured exceptionally favorable feeding ratios; and because these record high numbers of animals could be fed from very high carry-overs of grain at the start of war years, heavy imports of grains, and by the four greatest years in succession, of volume of grain production in our Nation. During these 4 years this record animal population consumed over a billion bushels of grain more than we produced. Animal numbers today are too high for normal years of grain production, but numbers will not be reduced while feeding ratios are favorable.

2. Recent grain price increases by OPA-OES made the feeding ratio slightly less favorable (although OPA hastened to increase prices of milk and dairy products to prevent a reduction in the milk flow). But if price controls are removed from animal foods while price controls remain on grains, Congress itself will have re-established the favorable feeding ratio which the USDA-OPA have been trying to correct: Congress will have encouraged further expansion in our animal numbers. Heavy demand for famine relief abroad will be added to heavier demand for feed grains at home, and a chaotic black market will compete further with the Government relief program for available grain. Also, where crop and animal production occur on the same farm, diversion of grain from commercial channels (where it is needed for industrial as well as famine relief program) will be immediately made to farm feed lots.

3. Where the farm is in a principal grain producing area, such action as proposed by Congress would impose a strict limitation on price of its grain products, while freeing prices on other (animal) farms. These commercial and surplus grain area producers would resent bitterly such marked price discrimination as better classes of producers.

The further effect of such action would be to increase confusion in all price relationships between all farm products, compared to any reasonable demand-value. It would set up legal chaos in the American farm-price structure.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I wish to call attention to another subject. Yesterday afternoon on the floor of the Senate the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] stated, in his explanation of certain phases of the bill, that the provisions which prohibit ceiling prices on agricultural products which were not so controlled before April 1 will not apply to such products as milk. This, he said, is because there were ceilings on some uses of milk prior to April 1. For example there was a ceiling on the farm price of milk sold as bottled milk. On the other hand there was no ceiling price on the farm price of cream made into butter, nor on milk made into cheese or evaporated milk.

The distinguished Senator from Ohio is not in the Chamber at this moment, but I should like to propound a question. Do other Senators agree with the Senator from Ohio that the bill would permit a ceiling price on such cream or milk for manufacturing into such dairy products as cheese and evaporated milk because of the fact that the farm price for some uses of milk were under a ceiling prior to April 1?

If it be true that all milk production is included, both that which was under a ceiling and that which was not under a ceiling, then I wish to refer the Senator from Ohio to the tables for the production of milk, as they present comparisons for the years 1943, 1944, 1945, and 1946. If those figures are correct, I wish to ask him whether he believes that milk should be decontrolled immediately upon the passage of this measure. That question is similar to the question asked yesterday by the distinguished Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] relative to the surplus of beef and the demand for beef and also the surplus of butter and the demand for butter and the surplus of pork and the demand for pork and the surplus of poultry and the demand for poultry and the surplus of dairy products and the demand for dairy products; and of course some time later I also asked those questions.

Mr. President, in summarizing the matter briefly, I desire to point out that the definite points at issue that have been brought out by the debate upon this measure justify the position which I took when this conference report automatically was brought up for vote last Wednesday. An impartial analysis of the interpretations placed upon its provisions by the proponents of the measure and by the opponents of the measure should convince the most skeptical that the conference report should have gone back then for further consideration in conference. Because of the parliamentary situation in which we now find ourselves, namely, the limitation of debate, and in view of the fact that the time will soon arrive when the life of the OPA under the present act will terminate, it is now practically impossible to send the bill back to conference for further consideration. The defense has been made and will be made that it would be of no use to do so, and yet I submit that it is not unusual to send back a conference report for a further conference. It is not unusual to proceed in that manner. Conferees have been sent back for a further conference on other measures time and time again, for further consideration of issues which have been closely contested in connection with a conference report.

The defense that further conference is useless is attempted to be made, especially by the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], on the ground that the House has voted twice not to decontrol meat. Yet I wish to point out to the distinguished Senator from Ohio and to other proponents of the measure that a proposal to decontrol meat, submitted by Representative WADSWORTH, of New York, lost in the House by a very close vote.

I further submit to the Senate that the House did not even vote upon the question of the decontrol of meat, milk, livestock, poultry, and dairy products, as covered by this measure, until after the Senate conferees receded from the Senate amendments on decontrol. That fact should be borne in mind. What would the House have done if the Senate conferees had refused to recede from the Senate amendments? In that event the present picture might be entirely different. But the Senate conferees receded from the Senate amendments, and then the House conferees returned to the House and told the House, "This is what the Senate conferees have done. Now we want to to take a vote on the meat situation." The very arguments which are used here at this time were used then in the House of Representatives. The House was told "Here is what the Senate conferees did. Now the only thing for the House to do is to vote not to decontrol meat, livestock and livestock products, milk, poultry, and dairy products." I think that is the primary reason for the pending conference report.

Again I ask, Why does it happen that the Senate of the United States, which by 2 to 1 voted into the measure five amendments for decontrol, now has before it a conference report which deletes them from the bill or else emasculates them beyond recognition by those who wished to have them adopted? Why should not another effort be made to see to it that the Senate amendments are not receded from?

But, no, Mr. President; we are told that it is useless to do so because the House voted not to decontrol meat. But we must remember that the House voted that way after the Senate conferees receded from the Senate amendments in the conference.

The defense of the conference report is also made on the theory that there has been set up within the provisions of this so-called price-control bill the machinery for decontrol. Oh, Mr. President, just think of what the proponents have said they were going to do. I hope they do even one-half of what they have said they will do in respect to decontrol if the conference report is adopted. The statement has been made by the proponents of the measure, time and time again, that we can expect an early decontrol of livestock, dairy products, and poultry. Once again I hope that the distinguished majority leader will help us get these decontrols, because that is his interpretation and that is the basis on which this conference report is presented. Its advocates say they hope to have the conference report adopted on that basis.

To those who believe in such a defense, let me say that this is an administrative procedure; and, as I said on the floor of the Senate last Wednesday, if we are to judge the future by the past, the act will be interpreted by Chester Bowles as he sees fit. Certainly if we are to take the statement of the President at face value, there will be little chance, if any, of getting decontrols during the extension of the OPA Act.

The interpretation placed upon the Barkley-Bates amendment, the interpretation placed upon the Bankhead amendment, the interpretation placed upon the entire Stabilization Act by Chester Bowles time and time again, in the face of the provision that there should be no change in business practices—the provision was written into the act, Mr. President, that there should be no change in business practices—the interpretations which have been made by Mr. Bowles, in the face of that provision which is written into the act, should convince us all, because of the violations and the overriding thereof, that we in the Congress cannot expect decontrol of anything under Chester Bowles, if the OPA Act is extended.

While I admit that the machinery for such procedure is set up—and, Mr. President, what window dressing there is in this measure—yet, stripped of all its window dressing, the cold fact remains that this measure does not provide for the accomplishment of anything more than could be accomplished under the present act, if it were properly administered. I hope every Member of the Senate understands that fact. There is nothing in the pending measure which, even if properly administered, will give us anything more than we could have had under the act already on the statute books, if it had been properly administered. If it had been properly administered, we would not find ourselves in the present chaotic condition. Today conditions would be different if the present Stabilization Act had been administered as the Congress of the United States interpreted it. That one fact alone justifies a vote against the conference report.

Mr. President, all of us have to tell the American people, and I must tell the people of Nebraska when I go back home, if I tell them the truth, that this act will avail us no more than the one now on the statute books. In fact, the provisions of the pending measure legalize the cost absorption and profit-control program which Chester Bowles initiated without authority of Congress. Do not ever forget, Mr. President, that the pending measure provides for the extension, in the future, of the cost-absorption program upon the basis upon which it has been put into effect by Chester Bowles. It was never legalized by Congress. It is an invention of Chester Bowles. Now the pending measure, which we are asked to approve, condones the practice in which he has engaged during the past 4 years. Every cost-absorption requirement which has been imposed on any segment of industry is now to be legalized, for the first time, by Congress. The pending measure gives Chester Bowles the green light; it gives him the "go" sign by approving those practices, even though, as I have said, the Members of Congress, or at least I, have held them to be illegal. By the adoption of the pending conference report we shall condone profit control, and we shall say that Chester Bowles can decide how much he will take from the pockets of the dealers. We shall thus authorize that to be done. Before now we have contended that he had no right to do it. But the pending measure approves it and permits it, and under the pending measure he will be able to continue to apply the cost-absorption policies which have been imposed prior to 1946, for by this measure we shall be giving him the legal authority to do so. That is a fair statement. That is the proper interpretation. Just as sure as anyone goes to Chester Bowles to obtain relief, the first thing he will tell them is that this is the correct interpretation of the act.

Mr. President, we now serve notice upon the American people that we approve the black-market operations of Chester Bowles. We sanction what he has done for the past 4 years, because we extend the act on practically the same basis, without the restrictions. We tell the American people that even though 80 percent of the meat is black marketed and sold through racketeers, we condone it. There is no dispute about it. The fact has not been disputed by anyone. We condone it. We say to the country that we believe in that kind of practice. We say that that is what the American people should tolerate.

Mr. President, I do not have time to read into the RECORD everything which I should like to have the RECORD show, and I shall therefore ask that certain matters be placed in the RECORD without reading them. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point as part of my remarks a portion of a statement of Royal C. Stephens, from page 1159 of the hearings, which gives a picture of what I have been talking about.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. Chairman, I am informed that since Congress had indicated they are going to relieve the American people from a lot of unfair rulings by the National Price Administration, just last week Mr. Louis H. Budd, Jr., OPA administrator of Sussex County Price Control Board since 1942, resigned his position, effective within a week, at the conference of OPA officials held at Newark, N. J., when Mr. Budd was told by the State OPA officials that under a new ruling he would be expected to produce a minimum of 15 docket cases every month. "Docket cases" is the OPA term used for violations. Mr. Budd informed that the national office "has selected a minimum of 15 docket cases per month as an arbitrary figure below which a board should not fall and still be able to justify its existence."

I now request your committee to subpena Mr. Louis H. Budd, Jr., of 24 Church Street, Sussex County, N. J., who last week resigned as OPA administrator of the Sussex County Price Control Board which is located at Newton, N. J., and request him to tell your committee of some of the unfair and un-American and unconstitutional rulings of the National Price Administration, and at the same time request Mr. Paul Porter, OPA Administrator, and Mr. Chester Bowles, the former OPA Administrator, to be present and listen to Mr. Louis H. Budd reveal some practical information that will make them more efficient in handling OPA affairs.

In conclusion, I wish to submit for the record a letter from Mr. Harold B. Simmons, a Democratic justice of the peace, and a veteran of World War No. 1, from Bryan Township, Sussex County, N. J., to the Newark Evening News under the date of Saturday, April 27, 1946, that expresses the feelings of the American citizens of Sussex County over Mr. Louis H. Budd resigning as administrator of the price control board of Sussex County, N. J.

Very truly yours,

ROYAL C. STEPHENS.

NETCONG, N. J.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point as part of my remarks a memorandum in the form of a synopsis of black-market operations in meat from 1942 to the present date.

There being no objection, the memorandum was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MEMORANDUM ON LIVESTOCK AND MEAT SITUATION

THE BLACK MARKET

Prior to 1942 approximately 1,500 meat packers produced all the meat entering domestic commercial channels. In 1945 Federal slaughter licenses were issued to more than 26,000 slaughterers. In February 1946 subsidy payments were made to approximately 12,000 of them.

The 14,000 who do not apply for subsidies, and many other slaughterers are operating in the black market. They have moved in and taken over a large percentage of the production and distribution of meat.

A large percentage of the livestock marketed is sold at prices in excess of legal ceiling prices. When the black market finishes buying there are relatively few head left to be purchased at legal prices. The result is that all law-abiding slaughterers have been forced to close or curtail drastically their operations.

The margin between legal livestock prices and wholesale meat ceilings is such that an efficient packer cannot recover all of his costs if he sells the carcass as dressed meat. It is obvious that the meat of all animals purchased in excess of legal prices is sold to the retailer or consumer at illegal prices.

Most retail dealers, if they wish to stay in business, must pay illegal wholesale prices for a large percentage of their meat. The result is that more than 83 percent of the retail stores from coast to coast, and from border to border are selling meat above ceiling prices and making overcharges at the rate of $1,250,000,000 annually.

Many black-market slaughterers are killing and dressing livestock in uninspected plants, in barns, sheds, and fields lacking adequate refrigeration or other sanitary requirements. They are grading their own meat, and are selling upgraded, contaminated, and in some instances diseased meat. A large percentage of black-market meat, under Federal inspection standards, is wholly unfit for human consumption.

The black market wastes meat, hides, bones, offal, and grease worth many millions of dollars annually. Either the farmer or consumer must absorb this loss.

Huge quantities of valuable glands and other materials, the sole source of raw materials for many pharmaceutical products, are destroyed by black-market slaughterers. The principal pharmaceutical companies who produce these medicines inform us that stocks are being depleted. On April 10, 1946, Eli Lilly & Co., in a telegram filed with the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, said:

"If situation continues much longer, someone must be prepared to accept responsibility for shortage of essential drugs such as insulin and other important drugs such as bile, pituitaries, thyroid, and perhaps antianemic preparations. Our current procurement is very much short of minimum needs and appears to be getting worse right along."

The black market has caused widespread unemployment and drastic reduction of working hours in plants of law-abiding slaughterers. On April 5, 1946, the president and secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers Workmen of North America, A. F. of L., the long-time established union of packing house workers and meat cutters, sent a telegram to President Truman, Secretary Anderson, Messrs. Porter and Bowles complaining about this condition and urging that all controls be immediately removed from livestock and meat.

Prior to 1942 the livestock and meat business was a respectable business, conducted by honorable and law-abiding people. During the last 3 years the black market has grown steadily. In 1946, in a large percentage of the transactions, everyone, from the farmer who raised the animal to the consumer who purchased the meat, was a party to a violation of a Federal statute or regulation.

When you add to the $1,250,000,000 consumers are now paying in excess of ceiling prices the $750,000,000 paid in meat subsidies and the cost of administration of OPA, it is clear that the cost of maintaining the fiction "that the line is being held on meat" exceeds $2,000,000,000 annually, more than one-half of total Federal expenditures in 1929, and more than one-half of the proposed loan to Britain now being debated in Congress.

THE CAUSE OF THE BLACK MARKET

The nature of the livestock and meat business is such that it does not lend itself readily to price control. It was a very difficult problem, notwithstanding the established industry's full and complete cooperation with the Office of Price Administration.

There are serious doubts whether the Meat Division of the agency, if staffed with meat experts, could have held a rigid price line and avoided the black market.

Unfortunately, the OPA concentrated on "profit control" instead of "price control." Its first order rolled back meat prices and "froze" them at levels below other competitive food prices and below levels justified by livestock prices, the supply and demand, and the consumers' ability to pay. The consumer roll-back and the interjection of subsidies in 1943 imposed further pressure on "the meat price line."

From the inception of price control one or more species of livestock has been in a "price squeeze." Companies whose sole income was derived from the class of livestock in the "squeeze" were faced with the alternative of going "broke" or "black." This, and the unprecedented consumer purchasing power and his desire for meat, opened wide the gates for the black-market operator and invited him to enter the field. The extent of the response is demonstrated by the fact that in a 2-year period 26,000 new commercial slaughterers and more than a million farmers and retailers applied for and received licenses to slaughter livestock and sell meat.

Testimony before congressional committees, official reports, letters to Congress, speeches, and press releases by officials of the Office of Price Administration clearly establish the agency's full knowledge of the continuous existence of a growing black market in meat since shortly after the inception of price control.

In the early stages it is possible that the black market might have been restrained within reasonable bounds had the OPA eliminated the "squeeze" and established prices at reasonable levels which would have permitted all packers with average costs and efficiency to recover all of their costs and a reasonable margin of profit. Notwithstanding a direct mandate of Congress in 1945 (the Barkley-Bates amendment), the Office of Price Adminisration neglected or refused to change its faulty pricing policies, and, 1 year later, we now find a large percentage of the meat business firmly in the hands of the black market.

The OPA has used two different methods to eliminate or control the black market—(1) more controls and (2) well-publicized threats of prosecution—neither of which has been effective.

Controls have been added to controls until we now have a multitude of complicated, involved, and unworkable regulations, and an almost complete break-down of price control at all levels in the meat industry. Since May 11, 1942, in the Beef and Veal Division alone, 112 regulations and directives and more than 1,100 amendments have been issued. No single individual does or could understand all of these regulations, and many of them could not be complied with if understood.

Enforcement against the deliberate black-market operator has been wholly ineffective. The scattered prosecutions and nominal fines have been considered a minor annoyance and part of the cost of doing business. In spite of everything the OPA has been able to do, the black market has grown steadily.

It seems that the OPA has concentrated its enforcement activities against the legitimate operators. A review of the reported cases indicates that many of the prosecutions were for technical, unintentional, or unavoidable violations. The record shows that the meat packer who has observed the law and regulations has been forced to curtail his operations or discontinue his business.

Enforcement at the retail level has been left, in the main, to volunteer price panels. The futility of this amateur policing is demonstrated by the fact that five out of six retail stores are selling meat above ceiling prices.

It appears that the OPA has approximately 350 employees in its Meat Enforcement Division country-wide, one out of every five being a lawyer. This number is more than 100 less than the number of employees in the OPA's Information Section.

The Government figures, which show that a large percentage of livestock sold on public markets is sold at prices in excess of legal ceilings, necessarily mean that the meat is sold at illegal wholesale prices. This demonstrates how ineffective the OPA has been at curbing the black market at the slaughter and wholesale level.

THE REMEDY

It is the firm conviction of all segments of the industry—the rancher, the feeder, the packer, distributor, and retailer—that the only remedy is the immediate removal of subsidies and all price controls from livestock and edible meat products.

Full legitimate production is the only answer to both the inflation and the black-market problems. At this late date, an increase in livestock and meat ceilings will not get full legitimate production or eradicate the black market. At this late date, improvised regulations are not a remedy, nor can additional investigations bring about compliance with OPA regulations. Price control appears to have completely broken down, and effective enforcement is no longer possible.

Black-market operators cannot compete with legitimate commercial meat packers under a free economy. They are not interested in the meat business at the industry's normal profit margin. They are inefficient and wasteful operators. They will disappear from the market and go out of business if the legitimate meat packer is permitted to compete with them on even terms.

WHY CONGRESS SHOULD DECONTROL MEAT

After more than 3 years of an expanding black market it is obvious that if subsidies and price controls on livestock and meat are to be removed and the business returned to law-abiding and taxpaying citizens the Congress will have to do it.

Under the formula of the often-announced price decontrol policy the removal of controls on livestock and meat is long past due. Livestock on ranches and farms is in abundant supply. In fact, there is a larger potential domestic per capita supply of meat available than has ever been consumed in this country at any price. Also feed demands and a sound farm economy require an orderly liquidation of several million head of livestock, beginning now while the consumer is ready, able, and willing to buy the meat at fair prices.

Present inventory value of this surplus livestock represents cash, high wartime production costs, and future subsidy payments. Consumers, as indicated by black-market prices, want, and are able, to buy this extra meat. All that is needed is the removal of controls and the legitimate meat packers will buy, slaughter, and distribute it at fair competitive prices that will be a gain to the farmer and a saving to the consumer.

On the other hand, if the removal of subsidies and price controls is delayed until meat prices decline, the financial stability of many ranches and farms may be impaired.

WILL THE REMOVAL OF SUBSIDIES AND CONTROLS ON LIVESTOCK AND MEAT CAUSE RUN-AWAY INFLATION?

The public is now paying on the average, 20 percent more than legal retail ceilings for all the meat consumed, or $1,250,000,000 annually. Almost $750,000,000 is paid out of the United States Treasury annually as meat subsidies. Undoubtedly it costs several additional millions of dollars to administer the Livestock and Meat Division of the OPA.

Whether costs in excess of $2,000,000,000 annually above ceiling prices for meat is inflation is a moot question. We now have it.

Notwithstanding near record livestock numbers on ranches and farms we now have an acute shortage of meat in most large consuming centers caused by the black-market waste and maldistribution. Well informed, conservative people testified before the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry that unless controls are removed promptly the country will be faced with a meat famine during the next year.

Because of scarcity of meat in many consuming centers, and the black market's illegal overcharges, the consumer is overpaying an average of 20 percent above ceiling prices for inferior meat.

If the controls are removed and legitimate trade channels reopened there will be an abundance of meat in every retail store. Surely, the consumer will not pay legitimate operators as much per pound for meat in abundance as they now pay the black market for a short supply. In any event, the United States Treasury will save the $750,000,000 it is now paying out in subsidies and the costs of maintaining the meat section of the Office of Price Administration. Black-market waste will be recovered and the serious threat to the public health removed.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, in its publication the Livestock and Wool Situation, March–April 1946, is of the opinion that "if price ceilings on meat were removed, the average retail meat price in the second half of the year probably would be 15 to 20 percent above present reported levels, and somewhat higher than this for the better grades and more desirable cuts." (We understand that "present reported levels" are OPA retail ceiling prices.)

Discontinuance of subsidies and removal of controls from livestock and meat will not cause runaway inflation. In fact it will increase the return to the farmer for his livestock, increase the quality, and reduce the cost to the consumer.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, yesterday the distinguished minority leader asked some questions about hides. He asked why hides could not be obtained. During the afternoon, over the telegraphic news service, there came a new order issued after the inquiry of the Senator had been made on the floor of the Senate. Here is the story which came to us from the Chicago Journal of Commerce:

The Government tonight revoked all import controls on hides, skins, and leather and relaxed price ceilings to permit free competition for world supplies.

Both actions resulted from a decision of the combined hides, skins, and leather committee on which this country and 13 other nations are represented to dissolve. The decision was made tonight simultaneously with the scrapping of all previous rulings of the committee.

OPA announced that American importers now may figure their ceilings by adding a mark-up margin of 5 percent to the cost of skins as landed.

The action, while it will undoubtedly result in higher import prices for the hides and skins, OPA said, will have no immediate effect on prices for leather or leather goods because ceilings on the latter are not changed.

Today's ending of international distribution controls will mean that importers throughout the world will probably begin to compete for supplies, OPA said.

If American importers were bound by the dollar and cent ceilings that have formerly applied to some of the imported skins being priced today, they would not be able to match offering prices of buyers from other countries.

Apparently the OPA have consented to American tanners buying hides on world markets at higher prices and without ceilings, while the American cattle producer has the doubtful pleasure of selling his hides to American tanners on the basis of ceiling prices. It seems strange to us that the American tanner may pay whatever is required to buy South American hides, but is forced by OPA to pay a very low ceiling for American hides.

Mr. President, by the modification of the Lucas amendment, we afford little relief from the gestapo methods practiced by the OPA enforcement officials. I have already asked and received consent to have printed in the RECORD a certain portion of the testimony of Mr. Royal C. Stephens, which will be, I am sure, very illuminating on this subject.

Mr. President, I wish to read a telegram which has come from Kansas City, Mo. The telegram reads as follows:

We are today rejecting the following advertisement from Kansas Feeder:

I ask that Senators listen to this telegram. I repeat:

We are today rejecting the following advertisement from Kansas Feeder:

Mr. President, the feeder is the man who feeds cattle and gets them ready for sale. Some processor buys the cattle, kills them, and later the consuming public receives the meat. That is, it receives the meat if it can obtain it.

I continue reading from the telegram. It refers to an advertisement which has been rejected by the Kansas City Daily Drovers Telegram, one of the finest periodicals of its kind printed anywhere in the Middle West. I read:

We are today rejecting the following advertisement from Kansas feeder "For sale, 7 loads of choice fat cattle, weight 1,100 pounds. Having had to compete with Government black market in corn wish to get into contact with a black market meat operator."

Mr. President, do Senators know what that means? It means that the feeder, in order to feed his cattle, was required to pay a black market price for grain.

I continue reading from the telegram:

We are passing this information on to you with the idea of the thoughts of the man in the country fearful that it may be the development of a trend. You are at liberty to use.

That telegram is signed by Kansas City Daily Drovers Telegram. They would not accept the advertisement.

Mr. President, I wish to say with such force as I can, that today the cattle feeder is being forced into the black market in order to obtain grain to feed his cattle. Without it, he cannot do business. The price of grain runs all the way from $1.50 to $2.50 a bushel. It is necessary for a cattle feeder to find a black market operator in grain, or he cannot carry on his business.

Mr. President, in the extension of this act we tell the American businessman and the American public generally, that they are to be governed by executive orders issued by bureaucrats who never stood for an election. I wish that some of them had to stand for election in Nebraska.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, may I add also the State of Kansas?

Mr. WHERRY. Yes; the same is true with reference to the State of Kansas. Whatever is true, in that connection, in the State of Nebraska is true also throughout the Nation.

Literally, thousands upon thousands of orders are issued by the OPA, and they are misinterpreted, contradicted, and rescinded. It means something more than merely so many figures on paper when I tell you, Mr. President, that from March 14, 1936, to November 4, 1945, there were issued 107,138 directives, orders, grants, permissions, and prohibitions. To print them would require more than 62,000 pages and 93,000,000 words.

Since May 11, 1942, 112 regulations and directives, and more than 1,100 amendments have been issued. All of them affected the beef and veal division of the meat industry. No single operator can possibly understand all of the regulations, much less comply with them. How in the world is business of this country expected to proceed in an orderly fashion when it is required to interpret directives which even the bureaucrats themselves cannot interpret when they come before our committees? Time and time again bureaucrats have been asked to interpret this directive or that directive, and disagreements have been developed between the bureaucrats themselves with reference to the proper interpretation which should be applied. Time and time again there have been disagreements between the Department of Agriculture and the Office of Price Administration when ceilings should have been raised. Long ago I stated that the agency which is responsible for production should be responsible for prices. An agency which is responsible for production should know what is required in order to obtain production. But we do not have that kind of a situation in our administration. If the Department of Agriculture says that so much production of a certain commodity is required, the Office of Price Administration will often overrule it.

Mr. President, I believe that the Senate has the power to end price controls. The rejection of the conference report will have the effect of ending them.

At the beginning of my remarks I said that the time has grown too late to send the conference report back to the conference committee for further consideration. Once again, referring to the statement which was made by the distinguished Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY] that we are now making a choice between two evils, and he certainly spoke the truth as he saw it—either the present bill or no price control at all. I think the time has come when this country would be better off without any price control than to continue to operate under the present chaotic conditions.

I wanted to send the report back to the conferees, but I could not have that done.

I am never going to vote to condone cost absorption; I am never going to vote to continue black-market prices and regulations in this country. I base my position upon the following reasons:

First, because there is wholesale disrespect for law in this country. It is unnecessary to make a further statement on that point. Every housewife knows, every Member of the Senate knows that the only way food, clothing, and other necessities of life can be obtained is on the black market.

Secondly, because under the Bowles system we cannot get maximum production. It makes me laugh—if it were not so serious I would indulge in a good laugh—to hear this man Bowles continue to talk about production. The fact is we do not have production. There is not in the market places even the food we need, let alone the things we need to wear or the articles we need in our homes; indeed, under the Bowles system which is now in operation, there are not even homes enough where the people may live. The result has been absolute failure. I do not want it to continue for another year.

Third, because production can only be obtained by the elimination of price impediments. If we would remove price impediments then we would restore our legitimate markets and be able to carry on in the American way.

Now let me contrast production under the American way with production of other nations of the world under the totalitarian way.

What has our American system accomplished in peace? Under our liberal American system we have in 160 years achieved the greatest degree of personal, religious, and political liberty, the highest living levels, the highest wages, the best working conditions, the finest educational systems, the finest railroads, the most magnificent highways, the greatest airways, and the greatest array of luxuries ever achieved by any people in any period of time anywhere. But the subversionists now say, "Close your eyes to all that, the American system is a failure; we must have totalitarian control."

What has our American system accomplished in war? Not only have we achieved all these wonderful advantages and comforts of life in peace, but certainly we have proved the efficiency of the American system in war.

For 40 years the Japanese war lords drove their people to get ready for the struggle against the Occident. For 20 years Mussolini drove Italy, boot and spur, to get ready for the war he knew was coming. For 20 years Stalin forced the Russian people to intense sacrifices and efforts to get ready for the war he knew was to come. For 12 years Hitler and the Nazi ruffians drove the enslaved and terrorized German people day and night to prepare for the war he and his cohorts planned against civilization.

Now what about the American way? In just three short years, under our free Government, with our free industry, our free labor, our free agriculture, our free people of every religious faith, every political creed, every race and color united, cooperated and overcame that 40-year Japanese, that 20-year Italian, that 20-year Russian, and that 12-year German lead. Our production put us on an offensive basis in the greatest war of all time. Not only that, Mr. President, but we fought two wars at once—one in the Pacific, without any help from the Allies, and one in the Atlantic into which we poured billions of lend-lease—gift machines and munitions of war, and supplies.

We gave Russia more than $9,000,000,000 worth of war supplies, civilian foodstuffs, and clothing. We gave Britain more than $25,000,000,000 worth of the same kind of lend-lease supplies. In addition we poured billions of dollars worth of other machines and munitions and foodstuffs into other countries including China. And yet, these Communists would tell you our American system cannot defend itself in a modern world.

Lastly, we have got to decontrol some time if we are to keep the American way; otherwise, we have gone completely totalitarian. I think we should make a start now. The fear which some are trying to put into our hearts has no basis, because conditions are so chaotic now that they cannot become worse; under the free competitive system they can only become better.

The whole decontrol system boils down to one thing, namely, administration. I think there are those in the United States of America who, if they had the job, could do it in the American way, but apparently the administratior wants to continue with the program of Chester Bowles. That is the way it would deal with the economy of 140,000,000 American people.

I am now going to say something about political strategy. Let me say that I believe in the Republican Party and in its principles, and I think I can safely say that no one has been more loyal or worked harder for the Republican Party than have I; but some of our Republican strategists say this is a hot potato and that the thing to do is to let the administration settle its own bungling on OPA. They say that we must pass the bill as it is and let the President veto it; let him assume the responsibility. It is my judgment that the Congress has the responsibility, and that this responsibility is above partisan politics. I want the Senate to know that when it comes to an issue of this kind I place my Americanism above party loyalty and party politics. It is our job as Members of the United States Senate to do the best we can to provide legislation which will aid the American people to get back to an American economy. That is our responsibility. It transcends party responsibility. It cannot be shirked. It can not be shifted. When we of the Congress have done the best we can, we send it on to the President of the United States. Then and only then is it his job to handle the legislation as he sees fit.

But it seems to me that any legislative leadership on either side of the aisle that wants to transfer a hot potato to the President's lap, without taking action on it, is weak-kneed and spineless. It is not the kind of leadership the American people expect from the Senate of the United States, and especially from the minority party.

The Republican Party is already charged with a failure to decontrol livestock, dairy and dairy products, poultry and poultry products. Let me prove it. There have only been two votes in the House on the decontrol of meat; one was on the Wadsworth bill, which I have already mentioned. The other was taken after the Senate conferees had receded from their decontrol amendment. The Senator who cast the deciding vote which permitted the conference to recede from the Senate amendment was a Republican, and we are already being charged over the radio and in the press as the party responsible for the failure to decontrol meat.

Here is what Fulton Lewis, Jr., said last night about the recession from the Senate amendment:

> As one of the Republican members of the House-Senate Joint Conference Committee which was working out the final details of the OPA extension legislation, it was Senator TOBEY, a Republican, who swung with the Senate Democrats even when one of the Senate Democrats persisted in holding out against the President and decided the fateful issue of whether there should be a specific change or continued controls of meat and other commodities on the side that President Truman wanted. Senator TOBEY voted to strike out those provisions as Mr. Truman had requested.
> On top of that record on the part of Senator TOBEY, Mr. Truman's letter of yesterday did not sit well either with Republicans or Democrats.

I wish to say to my distinguished friend from New Hampshire that I think he has a perfect right to vote as he pleases on OPA extension. I know he feels conscientiously about its continuance, and he has the right to vote as he pleases; but I also wish to say in all fairness that I feel that as a Senate conferee he should not have receded from the amendment on the decontrol of meat, nor should any other Senator on the conference committee have receded, at least until after the House had taken a vote on that provision. I shall be of that opinion as long as I live, and I say that in all frankness and in all fairness as I make this statement on the floor of the Senate.

So, whether we like it or not, whether it is the wise political thing to do or not, the Republican Party is charged with that responsibility.

Mr. President, in conclusion I wish to say that now is the time to show leadership. The way to demonstrate leadership is not in talking the conference report to death. The way to show leadership is in voting. If we as a Republican Party are to perform the responsibilities imposed upon us, it is our job to defeat totalitarianism. That is what we were sent here for. Each and every one of us was elected on a platform obligating us to speak and to vote against totalitarian controls. We cannot remain faithful to our party, and certainly we cannot be faithful to our Government, if we vote to continue the totalitarian controls which are written into the provisions of the bill we are considering.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield.

Mr. AIKEN. Does not the Senator think any Senator can vote for the conference report——

Mr. WHERRY. I made that perfectly clear, and the question requires no answer. I said that if a Senator believed he could vote for the conference report, that was his prerogative, and he should do so.

Mr. AIKEN. I think any Senator could be perfectly true to his party and vote for the conference report.

Mr. WHERRY. I do not think one could be true to the platform of the National Republican Party, or the State platforms I know of, and now vote to continue totalitarian controls.

Mr. AIKEN. If being true to the party consists in taking orders from those who consider themselves party leaders——

Mr. WHERRY. I would rather take orders from those men than from Chester Bowles, as the Senator has been doing for the last 4 years.

Mr. AIKEN. The Senator is not telling the truth.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I shall not challenge those words. I could have the Senator taken off the floor for them. But I will say that anyone who supports Chester Bowles' program for 4 years supports totalitarian controls, and that is what the Senator has done. He voted for the extension of the act and he is going to vote for this conference report.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article by Wilbur J. Brons appearing in the Chicago Journal of Commerce under date of June 26, 1946, and entitled "OPA Extended Bill Gives Black Market New Lease on Life."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE ROUND TABLE

(By Wilbur J. Brons)

OPA EXTENDER BILL GIVES BLACK MARKET NEW LEASE ON LIFE

The final conference version of the OPA extension bi'l was bad news.

This hodgepodge of political conflict, confusion, and appeasement will postpone urgently needed economic adjustments for the better part of another 12 months. Delay in price relief will continue to plague producers in many lines. This will mean a further distortion of the production picture.

And if the conferees failed to bring distinction upon themselves for the measure as a whole, they flopped even more miserably when they decided at the last moment to keep meat and dairy products under OPA control. This was a pure gift to the black-market boys, who now buy most of the cattle and peddle most of the butter.

Monday, while the conferees were busily gumming up the works, 10,000 head of cattle and 2,000 hogs arrived at the Union Stockyards here. Of the 10,000 cattle, Swift & Co. was able to purchase five. Wilson & Co., Inc., got three. Armour & Co. got none. Most of the remainder of the 10,000 cattle went to eastern markets—to bidders who pay no attention to OPA regulations and have no need of Federal subsidies.

The details of the story have been told so many times they are hardly worth repeating. But the 14,000 slaughterers who did not apply for subsidy payments this year are only a fraction of the total slaughterers who sell black-market meat. How many are killing cattle without having gone through the formality of obtaining a license is anybody's guess, but it would have to be several times the number of licensed slaughterers to account for the steady decline in stockyard receipts.

As this is written, more than half of Chicago's retail butcher shops are closed. The majority of those still open are paying illegal prices for the meat they sell over their counters. That is the only way they can stay in business. The housewife who raises her eyebrows when she gets her bill for meat is soon dropped from the butcher's list of preferred customers.

The butter situation is almost identical. Reputable retailers are now handling about 16 percent of the volume they handled in 1941. If these retailers were able to get their proportionate share of available butter, they would be handling about 50 percent of their 1941 volume. About 50 percent of the butter produced today is moving to consumers through illegal channels, at an average price of about 80 cents a pound. In some communities, it is being peddled from door to door at prices ranging from $1 to $1.50 a pound.

As of January 1, this year, there were 889,000 fewer milk cows on farms than on January 1, 1945. Dairy herds are being liquidated at an alarming rate in the States which normally produce most of the farm-separated cream for butter manufacture. Exclusive of Government requirements, there will be only about 6 pounds of butter available this year for each man, woman, and child in the country.

Other aspects of the OPA compromise will be discussed from time to time. Despite Messrs. Bowles, Porter, Wallace, et al., there will be no "boom or bust" this year. Progressive price rises are, nevertheless, inevitable under the administration's present wage policy. Economists outside the administration are quite generally agreed that if there are any sharp price disturbances this summer, they will be in nondurable goods.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, this morning about 30 minutes after midnight, as we left the Senate Chamber and proceeded out into the street, the lightning was flashing, it was very humid, and as I got outside I heard a woman say, "What's the matter with our country?" It will be remembered that all last evening the galleries were filled, as they now are, with folks who are interested in their Government. But that one sentence, "What's the matter with our country?" struck me very forcibly. I remember that William Allen White once wrote an editorial on the subject, What's the Matter with Kansas? It was that editorial which precipitated him into the national arena where he gained recognition as a sane political thinker.

This morning I heard my distinguished friend the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS] praise the ability and integrity of the majority leader, and with every word of it I agree. I would characterize the majority leader as a great general, who usually, as the Senator from Oklahoma said, succeeds in getting his way.

But what is the matter with our country? As I saw my distinguished friend the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. O'DANIEL] proceed yesterday through 8 hours of debate with a smile on his lips, constantly the master of himself, I thought it was a good demonstration that we in the Senate, in the heat of debate, at least are keeping our heads. I marveled not only at the way the Senator from Texas handled himself, but at his physical ability and endurance, and his humor, interrupted, as he was, time and time again.

In that connection I compliment the other Members of the Senate, because feelings run deep on the subject we are considering, tremendously deep, and what is more, we are the target, as it were, of thousands of people throughout the country who also have felt the impact of this issue and have, as indicated by the thousands of telegrams the Senator from Texas received yesterday, expressed themselves about it.

Of course, frequently telegrams are the result of emotion, of fear, and for months previously many of the telegrams on this subject were nothing but channeled telegrams, as letters were channeled. Messages came in on printed postcards, indicating that Tom, Dick, and Harry were simply obeying the direction or the request of someone else. But the telegrams which have come recently are the result of individual thinking on this subject.

Of course, something else has caused the people to be more or less mentally upset. It has been the conflict on the radio. Fulton Lewis on one side, and several prominent commentators on the other, have precipitated into the minds of people who listen to the radio their individual concepts on the pending issue.

What is the matter with America? Nothing is the matter with America. Would we change a great public forum of 140,000,000 people, even though many of the expressions which have come to us indicate that they are not the result of thinking the problem through, but the result of impetuosity caused by the impact of somebody else's strong words? No; we would not change it. We would not have our thinking channeled, as took place in Germany, or as it is in Russia. Stalin told our negotiators that he could not understand why we permitted our newspapers and commentators to criticize public servants. In other words, there we have a frame of mind on the international scene in Russia which cannot comprehend one of the great rights of America—that is, the right of each individual to think a problem through—and, what is more, to express his convictions to his public servants. So, in that respect, I say there is nothing wrong with America.

As I proceeded home about 15 minutes later, at almost 1 o'clock this morning, I was accompanied by my good friend the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON], but the words of the woman's question rang constantly in my mind: "What is wrong with America?" So, prefatory to my remarks on the issue we are debating today, I noted down a few things I wanted to say on that most important subject.

Mr. President, there is nothing inherently wrong with America. In my opinion, there are a few people who have gone wrong in their thinking and who, as a consequence, because of their exalted position, have placed this country in the particular situation in which we now find it. What I mean to say is that a great deal of thinking has to be straightened out. We must get down to "brass tacks" and think every issue through if we truly want to put this, our beloved country, in a position where it will function as it should function. I say to the occupants of the galleries that it is not solely their public servants whose duty it is to make sure that the country will function properly. Each and every American citizen in this critical atomic age has the duty to see to it that the country functions properly.

Now, Mr. President, what must we do? We must get rid of the racketeers. What is a racketeer? A racketeer is one who wants to run the Nation or other people's business, not according to the law of the land, but according to what he says the law is. In other words, he puts himself above the law. He makes himself the legislative branch, the executive branch, and the judicial branch of the Government.

Mr. President, the racketeer mind is too much in evidence in this country. It is in evidence particularly, as has been shown on the Senate floor in the few days we have been discussing this measure, in pretty nearly every market of America in which citizens have to buy necessities of life. It is also in evidence in government administrative branches, as was clearly demonstrated earlier today by my good friend, the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], who said that the OPA, instead of recognizing that it is a creature and a servant of the legislative branch, openly, in a racketeering frame of mind determined what the law was, different from what the legislative branch of the Government said the law was. The result is what always happens when racketeers enter the picture—they mess things up. That is one reason why we are debating OPA today.

It has been said on innumerable occasions in this debate that if OPA had been administered according to the intent and the direction of Congress, there would not be the critical situation which prevails today. I think we can accept that statement as fact. Anyone who attempts to add or multiply contrary to the rules of mathematics, comes out wrong. If he says 2 times 2 equals 6, the result is wrong.

Anyone who violates the law of the land creates a condition which is not sound. Any administrator of the law of the land who violates the law, creates a balled-up condition, and that is what we are facing now.

What I wish to stress, Mr. President, and I repeat what I previously stated, is that a great deal of thinking has to be straightened out. What do we have to do first? First we must get rid of the racketeers; not simply the racketeers who are operating in the OPA black market but the racketeers of our fundamental American thinking. That word fundamental means something, and I hope that every school teacher who is helping to shape the young minds of tomorrow will understand and appreciate what fundamental American thinking is, because the youngsters of tomorrow are either going to accept the concepts of fundamental American thinking or they are going to accept the racketeer's concept of American thinking, and there are plenty of those who are racketeering the fundamentals of America.

Second. There is not any question that we have to have greater efficiency in government. We must get rid of excess bureaucrats and stop riotous spending.

Third. There is not any question that we have to balance our budget. In saying that I am replying to the lady's question: "What is the matter with our country?" The budget can be balanced. It must be done. But we will have to stop appropriating millions and billions of dollars for public improvements, most of which have no business being in the picture at this time. What do I mean by that? Senators know that every dollar we spend in public improvements competes with private enterprise and the needs of our people, which now run into the billions of dollars—yes, Mr. President, into the billions of dollars' worth of goods required for everyday living.

Fourth. We must go to work and produce. That means that the workers of America, and management and particularly the labor leaders, must acquire a different slant on their obligation to the Nation.

England is exporting more today than she has ever exported in her history. In Britain, workmen know there is only one answer to their problem, and that is work and more work. With millions of their homes destroyed by war and their industry damage, the people of England went to work after VE-day, and worked as one team.

Recently we were privileged to have in this body a delegation from Britain. They were legislators, leaders of the labor government in Britain. They stood on the Senate floor in front of the desk of the President of the Senate, and we passed in front of them and shook their hands. It was my privilege to become pretty well acquainted with them. They were more like us than are many others from Britain whom I have heretofore met. I got close to them. I talked with them.

What did they say? They said that there was only one answer, and that was work. Further, they said that they had no particular faith in a number of our great labor leaders. Mind you, with millions of their houses destroyed and many of their factories gone, they went to work, and today England is exporting more goods than ever before in her history.

Furthermore, they said, "We learned long ago that the way to get production is not to make it worth while for anyone to remain idle." That is another thing which we must learn.

What is the matter with America? Nothing is inherently wrong with America. We are a growing nation of 140,000,000. Our land is the garden spot of the earth. Not one home has been destroyed, not one factory blown to pieces. Our railroads, our highways, our farms, and our cities are all ready to go. But I was informed today that there is no meat to serve in the Senate restaurant. A few days ago I was informed by the chef that the restaurant had run out of oatmeal, and could not buy any more. Some of us have been trying to buy common white cotton shirts.

What is the matter with America? Britain can answer that. We must get rid of the communistic-minded folks who consciously or unconsciously are throwing monkey wrenches into our economy. We must get rid of those who want everyone with means, energy, and inventive genius liquidated so that they can apply their remedies. We must get rid of those who pretend to believe that money is a curse, but are always looking for it. The Master said that it was the love of money that was the root of all evil, meaning that when a man violates the first commandment and lusts after money or anything else, to the point where he forgets that man is something more than mere physique, that is the root of all evil.

What is the matter with America? I repeat that there is nothing wrong with America, but there is something wrong with some of us. The OPA picture is an illustration. Everyone agrees that there is something wrong in the set-up. I remember a story about two darkies. One of them was buying a mule from the other. The first one said, "Mose, am dat mule sound?" The other replied, "Sure dat mule am sound." The first one asked him, "Do you guarantee dat mule is sound?" The other replied, "Sure; I guarantees dat mule is sound." The first one said, "I will buy him." The next day the man who had bought the mule noticed the mule in the pasture. He was running around and butting his head into every tree and fence post. So he decided that the mule was not sound, but that he was blind. He went to the darky from whom he had bought the mule and said, "Did you guarantee dat mule as being sound?" The other replied, "I sure did." The first one said, "Well, look at him butting his head into that tree." The other man said, "Boss, dat mule am sound, only he just don't give a damn." [Laughter.]

That story illustrates a condition of mind which we find in this country. The Senator from Oklahoma illustrated it today by pointing out two laws with respect to which the OPA "didn't give a damn." It failed utterly to follow the legislative mandate. That is what makes things rotten. It is the racketeer mind. It is not merely the man who slaughters a cow and disposes of the meat in violation of OPA prices. It is the OPA itself, which violates the mandate of the legislative branch. The OPA officials set themselves up as overlords.

I am talking about fundamentals. I have met many fine men in the OPA organization. I could give the names of 6 or 10 of them who have been very cooperative, who were distressed because of the complicated machinery in that organization, and who literally cried because of their inability to get things done. When I showed them that month after month went by without any heed being given to a critical business situation, they admitted it. I asked, "What can be done?" The answer was "We do not know. We have tried to pry things loose."

I have a great deal of respect, and in some cases affection, for some of the men upon whom I have called in OPA. They have helped me to find the solution to many problems. As I say, I have met many cooperative men in that organization who were disgusted with the mechanics of it, who realized the inequity of the set-up, who have seen injustice done, and who have admitted the injustice. Those men have seen loafers on the job constantly coming in late in the morning, men who, when we are working 80 hours a week, cannot be found on Saturday. The is partially the responsibility of the President, who after VJ-day said to the workers downtown that they should have a 5-day week. In this challenging period when we are working for production, when we are trying to harness the tremendous evil forces resulting from the war, we find these synthetic people in the Government saying by their acts and deeds, "Let things go." The result is the situation in which we find ourselves today. The men of whom I speak have worked diligently, but they have been unable to get results because of the ineptitude of the administrative organization.

What is wrong with America? Nothing; but we must get rid of some of the fake medicine men, many of whom have harassed the economy of this Nation for more than a decade, and are interfering with our really getting under way.

I could amplify that statement by citing a thousand examples in my own State, which is 50 percent industrial and 50 percent agricultural. Business after business has been damaged and injured and workmen have been put out of jobs because of OPA. In wartime we could overlook OPA's mistakes, but now there is no further need for such action on the part of Americans. Time and time again I have seen how prewar industry failed to get a necessary and just increase. But some new, favored son who opened up an industry 10 or 15 miles away got an increase of 10 percent or in some cases 50 percent for a product and thus the old industry was put out of business, or seriously injured.

So, Mr. President, we must get rid of the racketeer mind, the fake-medicine mind. I remember the old fake-medicine guy. When I was a boy he used to come around, and the lumberjacks would gather around him. He would hold up a bottle of medicine and tell them that the medicine in that bottle would cure everything from gray hair and toothache and stomach ache to consumption and cancer. He would tell his story, and he would get all the crowd mesmerized. His chant was, "$1 a bottle, six bottles for $5!" I have seen those people, mesmerized by the very magic and dramatics of his voice, pay their hard-earned dollars which they had to work 10 days in the woods to earn.

What was that medicine? When I was older I had it analyzed once by a brother-in-law of mine who was a druggist. He said, "Counting the bottle, the whole thing costs about 5 cents. It is made up of a little sarsaparilla, some roots, a little brown sugar, and water." But it fooled those people, and enabled the medicine man to take in a lot of money. The worst thing about it was that the racketeer tactics of the medicine man planted in the minds of those who listened to him many ideas about diseases which they never had.

So today the medicine men in Government and out of Government who harass our economy must be taken care of. You and I in the Congress must take care of them.

Another thing we must do is to get rid of a lot of the synthetic-thinking, wild-eyed professors who are teaching our youth in some of our great educational institutions. I wish I had time to tell the Senate about the parents who come to my office and tell of the impact which such professors have on their children.

An impact of the same sort took place here in this city yesterday. Some Senators may have read in the newspaper that the PAC held an educational institute in Washington yesterday. I was privileged to be classified there as one of those whom the PAC does not like. If I were running for office this year, that would bring me 50,000 more votes in my State. The people know about the PAC.

Mr. President, let me refer to an incident which I related on the floor of the Senate not very long ago. A group of them—17 of them—headed by one of the CIO leaders from Milwaukee, came into my office, some 5 or 6 months ago. They laid before me a paper on which were listed some 11 or 12 bills. They said, "We came down here to demand that you vote for these bills."

I lined those men up around my office. I said to the leader, "Have you read these bills?"

He said, "No."

Then, to one after another of them, I said, "Have you read these bills?"

In each case the answer was, "No."

I said to them, Well, I shall let you in on a little secret: Neither have I. Only one of those bills is before my committee. Now, gentlemen, I will give you 30 minutes to talk, if you want to talk that long. First, I will talk 10 minutes to you. But after I have talked 10 minutes, you will probably not have anything to say.

I do not know who sent you down here or who is paying your expenses. But just think what you are doing. You come here and tell me to commit myself on legislation which is not yet born, legislation which you have not yet read. Don't you know that a bill may go into a committee looking like a dove, and may come out looking like a jackass?

They did not know that.

I said then, "Gentlemen, those measures may go into a committee in the way in which they are framed now, but the committee may amend them to such an extent that when the committee reports them they will not be recognized as bearing any semblance to the bills which were sent to the committee." I said to them, "I remember that last year one of the distinguished Members of the Senate, Senator RUSSELL, of Georgia, stated on the floor of the Senate that he would have to vote against his own bill because of the fact that the committee had amended it to such a great extent." So I said to them, "Now don't you understand how ridiculous it is to tell a Senator what he should do when you do not know what you are talking about?"

The delegation's leader said, "Well, you listen to the chamber of commerce."

It so happened that my secretary was present at that time, so I said to him, "Have you seen any representative of the National Chamber of Commerce around here."

He replied, "No."

I said to them, "Well, gentlemen, I recall that twice since I have been here, representatives of the chamber of commerce have come to this office. But instead of demanding that I do certain things, they suggest what they think should be done. They know better than to demand." I said, "Wouldn't this be a terrible country if 17 men could tell a United States Senator what he should do? How long do you think the great laws on the statute books which protect the rights of labor would remain intact if that were the case?"

Then one of the men said, "Well, Senator, we think you are antilabor."

I said, "Wait a minute. Where did you get that notion?"

They did not answer.

I said, "I will tell you where you got it. Last fall I ran for office, as you know. I suppose that none of you voted for me; but that is all right, and you have the right of petition, and I am ready to listen, any time, and I am ready to receive letters."

As a matter of fact, Mr. President, on the average I receive 300 communications a day, the year round.

I said to those men, "Gentlemen, I am ready to receive your petition, but I will tell you something. A year ago last fall when I ran for office, I went to the northern part of Wisconsin, where workmen had worked with me in the sawmills for 15 cents an hour. Can any of you say you ever worked 11 hours a day for 15 cents an hour?"

They could not say that.

"All right," I said, "then do not say that I am antilabor. But I will tell you something. The Friday before the election, the stewards of the CIO throughout the State called their unions together, and said to the men, 'There is one guy we have got to get; that is Senator WILEY.'"

Mr. President, that is what this newspaper says the PAC again stated yesterday.

I said, "Some of the workmen in Eau Claire and La Crosse and in other places, after they had learned who that 'guy' was—and I was the guy—said, 'What is the matter with WILEY?' The answer was, 'He does not take orders.'"

Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to get that, because it shows the racketeering mind in action again.

The answer was, "He does not take orders." That is the point, Mr. President.

If a man does not take orders from this outfit, they are out to get him. What a wonderful and safe Nation this would be if each and every one of the 96 Members of the Senate took orders. What kind of a country would we have? "He does not take orders." That is one of the demands of this racketeering outfit which we will get rid of if we take the proper action. If we take a little political action on our own part, if we start to live straight, act straight, and think straight, we will not permit any individual, group of individuals, or combination of individuals to tell us—by "tell us" I mean command us—what to do.

I recall the statement of a Britisher which was about as follows: "I would think there was something wrong with my son if he were not a Socialist before arriving at his twenty-fifth birthday. But, if he continued that way after he was 25, I would think he was crazy."

Mr. President, I would not go that far because the term "socialism" means one thing to one man and something else to another. However, I was speaking of the impact of some of the so-called educated leaders—as they believe they are—on the formative minds of the youth of America. Such so-called leaders are striving to give the impression that the political life and the economic life of Russia are superior to ours. That kind of propaganda is impressed on the young formative mind, delicately attuned to receive impressions and ideas, be they right or wrong. Those leaders plant their poisonous seed.

What is wrong with America? Nothing. However, there is something wrong with some persons in America. Yes, Mr. President, some of us, including the businessman, the farmer, and the sober, sane, thinking workingmen of America—and, thank God, they are becoming more and more numerous and are beginning to realize that some labor leaders have sold the rank and file down the river—must understand that it is necessary to get down to brass tacks and do some work in order to combat all subversive forces and all kinds of synthetic thinking.

Mr. President, I invite attention to the fact that yesterday, at a PAC conference, my name was mentioned as one of those whom the PAC has sworn to defeat. I welcome the challenge. I do not like to indulge in personal references, but when I was a young man I was a scrapper. For three terms as a district attorney, I filled the jails and prisons with murderers and rapists of that time. The record still stands. Since then, I have mellowed somewhat, but when I observe the way some people in this country are raping the American concept, I am somehow or other renewed in my youth, like the eagle, and am ready for another fight. So I say the challenge is made to all Americans in open debate to meet the racketeers of American values.

I repeat, in talking with the English labor delegates who were here a few days ago, one of them said, "We do not have much time for some of your labor leaders. We know that the only answer for putting the Nation back on its feet is work." Another statement which the same gentleman made was this: "We found out long ago that it is unsound economics to pay folks to loaf."

What is wrong with America? There are too many loafers. Yes; there are those who would legislate out of existence the men who build and create, and put the loafers into running business and government. Who taught such nonsense as "Get all you can for nothing—to hell with the Government—the less you work the better—lend and spend?" Who made possible the chiseler, the grafter, and the racketeer? Who in this period set the example for a 40-hour week; who crippled production by suggesting a 25-cent-an-hour increase; who sold the synthetic idea that this wage could be paid by management without price relief? Who catered to the labor leaders and the PAC through the years until we are in the fix we are now in?

Mr. President, in 1932 Governor Roosevelt, of New York, campaigning for the Presidency, made this statement:

> Let me propose a text which, in my opinion, expresses a sentiment that is widely held this year. It is presented so clearly, so distinctly, and so admirably that I would not change a word of it, even though it was spoken 12 years ago. Coming from a great figure in our national life, it deserves serious consideration; and coming from a great Republican, it deserves particularly consideration from Republicans: "For one reason or another even a wisely led political party, given a long enough tenure of office, finally fails to express any longer the will of the people; and when it does so fail to express the will of the people, it ceases to be an effective instrument of government. It is far better for such a political party—and certainly better for the state—that it should be relegated to the role of the critic and that the opposing political party should assume the reins of government. This condition appears to have arrived in America."

In this statement he answered, What is the matter with our country?

Mr. President, I believe that in this quotation of ex-President Roosevelt we have the answer to the question, What is wrong with our country?

Every good business, after a number of years, changes its auditor, so as to have a double check on his business. This Government needs a check on what is going on.

In my own State, as I have said, we are 50-percent industrial and 50-percent agricultural. We have lived through the OPA regimentation of businessmen and farmers.

I believe the best indication how the milk producers of my State feel on the subject is expressed in a letter signed by Charles W. Holman, secretary of the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, and I ask that the letter be printed in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MCCLELLAN in the chair). Is there objection?

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEAR SENATOR WILEY: The most serious defect in the conference committee bill is the elimination of the McFarland amendments which appeared in the Senate bill. Those amendments were designed to remove controls over livestock, dairy and poultry products, because price controls on these commodities had broken down and were drastically curtailing production. To leave these commodities under price controls is to assure continued black markets, increasing shortages, and continued distress among farmers.

Section 11 of the committee bill would not only continue control policies which are destroying dairy production but would aggravate their effect. Under this language it would be possible to establish maximum prices on agricultural products which would return to the farmer less than his present returns. Furthermore, the section pemits stabilization agencies to continue in effect maladjusted prices between localities and various products within the dairy industry. Existing provisions of law requiring grade, location, and seasonal differential have not prevented these maladjustments in the past and there is no reason to expect them to do so now. This bill, if enacted as presently drawn, will prove a disservice not only to the dairymen of the Nation who have been struggling to maintain adequate production of milk and other dairy products, but will deprive the consumers of much needed dairy foods.

Section 11 of the bill establishes the calendar year of 1941 as a base period from which to measure cost increases in production of agricultural commodities. In 1941 dairy prices were in a violently unbalanced state. The lend-lease program was demanding enormous quantities of cheese and evaporated milk. Government prices for these products were high. Consequently, diversion of milk to cheese and evaporated milk resulted in all-time record production of these products at the expense of other dairy products, mainly butter. If maximum prices for dairy products were based on the price prevailing in 1941, the chaotic shifting of producers between plants and of plants from the production of other dairy products to production of evaporated milk and cheese which occurred in 1941 would be repeated.

No one knows what method OPA would use in calculating increases in production costs. A common method of estimating approximately the increases in United States average production costs is based on an index of costs in which feed prices are given a weight of 50 percent, farm wage rates 25 percent, and all other production costs 25 percent. This index has increased 83 percent from 1941 to May 1946. Applying this percentage increase to the 1941 average prices gives an estimate of the increase in costs of milk production to May 1946. Some prices calculated by this method are shown in the following table, in comparison with the approximate actual annual returns to farmers including subsidies:

Product	Approximate price required by sec. 11	Approximate actual annual return [1]
Whole milk, United States average dollars per hundredweight	3.98	4.48
Butterfat, United States average dollars per pound	.625	.815
Condensery milk, United States average dollars per hundredweight	3.31	3.78
Whole milk, New York State do	[2] 4.27	4.65

[1] 1945 annual average price plus current subsidies on an annual average basis, plus allowance for price increases effective in June 1946.

[2] Costs of dairy farming in New York increased 81 percent according to Cornell University calculations.

To a degree, calculated costs may be irrelevant in setting farm price ceilings. Milk prices may cover calculated costs but still be so low that other farm products pay the farmer more for his labor. Such conditions were important in the 8- to 10-percent decline in cow numbers in important butter-producing States last year. By allowing prices to reflect demand, production of farm products will be increased, and so balanced as to overcome the most acute shortages which now prevail.

The various decontrol provisions of the committee bill will be no help to the dairy farmer. Stabilization agencies have priced dairy products so low that production in the foreseeable future cannot possibly satisfy demand. Thus we may never get out from under price controls. In sum, policies will continue which on one hand will further reduce dairy production and on the other will so inflate demand that controls will not be lifted.

Sincerely yours,

CHARLES W. HOLMAN,
Secretary, National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, may I be informed as to how much time I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin has 12 minutes more.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, decontrol of dairy products and livestock was and is proposed as the solution for unsatisfactory conditions which price control has brought about in the dairy and livestock industries. The conditions I refer to are the break-down in distribution of meat and dairy products, the diminution of dairy production, and the great incubus of subsidies which current theories of price control have placed upon the Nation.

It has been 4 years since Congress first authorized the application of price controls. Four years ago we had entered a vast and grim war. The Government took requisitioning and allocation powers to marshal all our resources as quickly as possible for that war. Price controls were established to buffer the economic impact of arbitrary controls over the flow of resources. After 4 years we find that too rigid price controls have had secondary effects, like the first effects of allocation, which seem to demand the contiuation of price control. But too rigid price control itself proves inadequate to solve its own problems, and must be reinforced again by allocation and rationing, long after the original need for such controls has passed. Thus, a vicious circle has been started, which must be broken.

It seems reasonable to undertake the relaxation of price control on classes of products which show no ills other than those ascribable to price control itself. This the price control agencies themselves have refused to do. The facts of the situation have been fully developed in hearings before both Houses of Congress.

Two industries in particular, the dairy and livestock industries, are in chaos at the present moment. Price control has abrogated economic laws which always have caused these complex industries to maintain a fine balance in production and distribution. As a consequence of arbitrary pricing policies, conditions have arisen which the Office of Economic Stabilization asserts require quotas and limitations even more rigid than those which were needed for successful prosecution of the war. These added restrictions inevitably will further stifle production and thus intensify the one problem which we are assured requires the extension of price control.

I should like to recount in some detail the evidence which influences me to believe that less, rather than more, price control is needed on dairy products.

Mr. President, I had a friend who several months ago was engaged in the milk-producing business. He is a man somewhat over 80 years of age, and he spends his winters in Florida, but his home is in a little town of about 700 people in the neighborhood of 40 miles from where I live. I received a letter from him stating, "I notice that in Wisconsin you cannot get any butter, and that you cannot get any butter in the Senate". Parenthetically, I might say I do not know how long it has been since I last saw any butter in the Senate restaurant. This man said further, "In Florida we can get plenty of it if we are willing to pay $1.25 a pound." Think of that, $1.25 a pound for butter—black market. That illustrates how OPA does not and cannot regulate.

Price controls were applied to fluid milk and cream in May 1942, and to butter, cheese, and evaporated milk in October 1942. That year this country reached a peak production of 119,000,000,000 pounds of milk. Thereafter, dairy production subsided. Actual milk production was lower for the next 2 years than in 1942. In 1945 a substantial decline in milk cow numbers set in, offset for the time being by heavier production per cow which increased total milk production by 3,000,000,000 pounds over 1942. Thus, the effect of price control has been to contract the dairy industry. Contrast this with the 12.5-billion pound increase in milk production during the 3 years before price control.

After the close of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee hearings last month the Office of Price Administration issued a statement with reference to the dairy problem. Therein it cited the increase from 1941 to 1945 as occurring under price control. From 1941 to 1942, a period partly free from any price control and wholly before price control achieved its "hold the line" rigidity, the increase in 1 year exceeded the total increase in 3 years from 1942 to 1945.

The full extent to which dairying has been retarded under price control is shown by production trends in the extensive deficit areas. Down the Pacific coast, across the South, and up the Atlantic coast the war brought revolutionary shifts in demand. In the South, particularly, demand for fluid milk outstripped what had been a rapidly growing local supply of milk. In State after State prewar production trends were reversed downward due to a refusal of OPA to make adjustments based on local conditions.

The Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry found that repeatedly local price relief which would have increased production was denied on the simple ground of "hold the line." OPA has taken the position that local cost increases have nothing to do with local price increases. The cumulative effect of such a policy pursued in market after market has been to aggravate the national shortage of milk for all purposes.

Nowhere is there an indication that OPA will change this policy if price control is continued on dairy products. All the evidence is to the contrary. In announcing an enlarged dairy subsidy program on April 15, Mr. Bowles said, "Since early this year special local price relief has been provided in a number of fluid milk market areas. To the extent that relief was given in anticipation of the increases announced today, corresponding reductions in milk prices will be made in those areas. Additional increases in particular markets to offset cost increases will not be needed." In the program embodied in the May 29 directive, the Office of Economic Stabilization canceled all of the local recognition previously granted in New Mexico and Arizona, and half of that granted in four other areas.

Another aspect of this selective discrimination, is the discrimination against butter which has forced thousands of dairymen out of production. In vast areas, particularly in the tier of States from Oklahoma through North Dakota, dairymen have no markets for anything but farm-separated cream. The ceiling on butter puts a ceiling on this cream. In these States milk cow numbers were reduced 8 to 10 percent.

Think of it, when the world was hungering for our products, when we needed them more and more, the OPA program caused an 8- to 10-percent reduction in the number of cows.

The current dairy programs do not fully correct the severe penalty which producers of farm-separated cream have carried ever since 1941. Regardless of diversion problems, which I shall discuss in a moment, such a penalty on at least 50 percent of the dairy farmers of the country should be removed.

Mr. President, I have spoken many times on the floor of the Senate in relation to the cheese situation in the State of Wisconsin. I demonstrated that because of OPA's inept approach to the problem this great State of mine, which produced up to 56 percent of the total production of Cheddar cheese of the Nation, felt the impact of maladministration.

Flagrant mistreatment was also accorded the evaporated milk industry and the casein industry. The butter and livestock ceilings must be removed together. I know no way to accomplish that result unless it be assurance from Secretary Anderson and from Mr. Bowles that that will be done. But we have no such assurance. If the past foreshadows the future, then we will see a continuation of these crippling activities and to me that means serious damage not only to my State but to the Nation.

WHY DAIRY PRODUCTS AND LIVESTOCK SHOULD BE DECONTROLLED

Decontrol of dairy products and livestock was and is proposed as the solution for unsatisfactory conditions which price control has brought about in the dairy and livestock industries. The conditions I refer to are the break-downs in distribution of meat and dairy products, the diminution of dairy production, and the great incubus of subsidies which current theories of price control have placed upon the Nation.

It has been 4 years since Congress first authorized the application of price controls. Four years ago we had entered a vast and grim war. The Government took requisitioning and allocation powers to marshal all our resources as quickly as possible for that war. Price controls were established to buffer the economic impact of arbitrary controls over the flow of resources. After 4 years we find that too rigid price controls have had secondary effects, like the first effects of allocation, which seem to demand the continuation of price control. But too rigid price control itself proves inadequate to solve its own problems, and must be reinforced again by allocation and rationing, long after the original need for such controls has passed. Thus, a vicious circle has been generated, which must be broken.

It seems reasonable to undertake the relaxation of price control on classes of products which show no ills other than those ascribable to price control itself. This the price control agencies themselves have refused to do. The facts of the situation have been fully developed in hearings before both Houses of Congress.

Two industries in particular, the dairy and livestock industries, are in chaos at the present moment. Price control has abrogated economic laws which always have caused these complex industries to maintain a fine balance in production and distribution. As a consequence of aribitrary pricing policies, conditions have arisen which the Office of Economic Stabilization asserts require quotas and limitations even more rigid than those which were needed for successful prosecution of the war. These added restrictions inevitably will further stifle production and thus intensify the one problem which we are assured requires the extension of price control.

Raising dairy prices to offset and permit the removal of subsidies is no more than should be done in any event. It has been the consensus of dairy industry witnesses that the over-all rise in dairy prices upon complete removal of controls would only approximate the effect of removing subsidies. The prices of various dairy products would settle down in somewhat different relationships to each other than under present ceilings, but this would have a salutary effect on consumption and production. With dairymen free to bargain for fluid-milk prices suited to the needs of their local areas, and freed of the onus of the subsidy program, we would see a stop to liquidation of dairy herds and a turn toward the more abundant production of dairy products.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, last evening, in the debates upon OPA, the Senator from Illinois was engaged in a colloquy with the distinguished Senator from Texas [Mr. O'DANIEL], and during that debate the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY] also had something to say which I am going to read into the RECORD at this time.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. WHITE. Will the Senator indicate what page of the RECORD he is reading from?

Mr. LUCAS. I am reading from page 7661 of the RECORD. The distinguished Senator from Nebraska said this:

Mr. WHERRY. Why did the Senator from Illinois enter into Nebraska and get into Nebraska politics when I ran against the Honorable Senator George Norris? The Senator from Illinois made broadcast recordings which were sent to Nebraska and used in an attempt to defeat me. Dozens of records, containing speeches against me were sent out there by the Senator from Illinois. Drew Pearson wrote articles against me. The Senator from Illinois joined in attacking me. Why did the Senator get into that campaign? And in view of his having gotten into that campaign, why criticize the Senator from Texas for speaking against the Senator from Illinois in the Illinois campaign in 1944?

The Senator from Nebraska further said in that connection:

I have been looking for a chance to say this ever since I came to the Senate.

Later on in the colloquy I requested the distinguished Senator from Texas to yield in order that I might answer the able Senator from Nebraska, but due to the parliamentary situation the Senator from Texas could not yield.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. WILLIS. What is the page from which the Senator is reading?

Mr. LUCAS. From page 7661 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of yesterday.

Mr. President, I want to take this opportunity of denying categorically some of these unusual statements. First, I want to say that I never entered into Nebraska politics when Senator WHERRY ran against Senator Norris—an independent—and a Democrat, whose name I have forgotten.

I want to deny categorically that I ever made a broadcast recording which was sent to Nebraska and used in an attempt to defeat Senator WHERRY.

I want to deny categorically that "dozens of records, containing speeches against me"—meaning Senator WHERRY—"were sent out there by the Senator from Illinois."

I want to deny categorically the inference that I joined with Drew Pearson in attacking the Senator from Nebraska.

I want to say definitely and unequivocally that I did not get into the Nebraska campaign in 1942. We had enough to do in Illinois at that time.

Now, Mr. President, it may be that the Senator from Nebraska was laboring under a misapprehension because of something that I said about the late Senator George Norris on August 17, 1942. I rose in the Senate at that time and made a statement, which can be found in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 88, part 5, Seventy-seventh Congress, second session, on page 6856. These are the words I spoke on the floor of the Senate at that time:

Mr. President, the able, distinguished, and eminent senior Senator from Nebraska, Mr. Norris, will soon complete 30 years of service as a Member of the United States Senate. His achievements over this long period of time in the field of sound progressive legislation are known to every student of government in the Nation.

The question which concerns the people of Nebraska, as well as the people of the Nation, is whether or not this elder statesman will become a candidate to succeed himself at the general election in November next. As one who is serving his first term in the United States Senate, it would be presumptuous upon the part of the Senator from Illinois to suggest a decision which should be made by this grand old man. But, Mr. President, his friends in Congress, as well as millions of other people in this country, hope that Senator George Norris, regardless of his age, will soon announce that he is a candidate for reelection.

Everyone knows that our Nation is imperiled. We need the eyes of vision, the voice of experience, and a flow of reason to help guide our legislative activities during the next 6 years to come. Oliver Goldsmith once said:

"I love everything that's old: old friends, old times, old manners, old books, old wine."

Another great writer said that—

"Age is not all decay; it is the ripening, the swelling, of the fresh life within, that withers and bursts the husks."

I see that my distinguished friend, the Senator from Nebraska, just came into the Chamber, and I will say to him that I am reading from a statement which I made on the floor of the Senate in August 1942. For his benefit I am going to reread that statement. I am sure the able Senator from Nebraska has been laboring under a misapprehension as to the part I am supposed to have taken in his campaign in 1942. I am now attempting to explain to the Senate, and in doing so I had just finished reading part of my statement.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. Yes.

Mr. WHERRY. I ask the Senator what he was reading? I understood him to say he was reading some of the speeches.

Mr. LUCAS. No, I am reading an address which I made on the floor of the Senate in 1942, which probably the Senator has never seen. I hoped by reading it at this time it would give the background for perhaps the Senator's misunderstanding of what I was supposed to have done in his campaign of 1942. I am going to read it again for the benefit of the Senator. I rose on the floor of the Senate on August 17, 1942, and said the following:

Mr. President, the able, distinguished, and eminent senior Senator from Nebraska, Mr. Norris, will soon complete 30 years of service as a Member of the United States Senate. His achievements over this long period of time in the field of sound progressive legislation are known by every student of government in the Nation.

The question which concerns the people of Nebraska, as well as the people of the Nation, is whether or not this elder statesman will become a candidate to succeed himself at the general election in November next. As one who is serving his first term in the United States Senate, it would be presumptuous upon the part of the Senator from Illinois to suggest a decision which should be made by this grand old man. But, Mr. President, his friends in Congress, as well as millions of other people in this country, hope that Senator George Norris, regardless of his age, will soon announce that he is a candidate for reelection.

Everyone knows that our Nation is imperiled. We need the eyes of vision, the voice of experience, and a flow of reason to help guide our legislative activities during the next 6 years to come. Oliver Goldsmith once said:

"I love everything that's old: old friends, old times, old manners, old books, old wine."

Another great writer said that—

"Age is not all decay; it is the ripening, the swelling, of the fresh life within, that withers and bursts the husks."

Mr. President, there will be many husks to burst during the next 6 years, which will decide what course this Nation is to carve out for future generations to come.

Mr. President, in the Chicago Sun on Saturday last appeared an editorial about our distinguished colleague. It is entitled "The Grand Old Man." I ask unanimous consent that it be inserted in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

Then follows the editorial.

Mr. President, I do not believe that I am the only Member of the United States Senate who praised and eulogized the late George Norris. I have not carefully examined the RECORD, but I distinctly recall that a number of Members of this body praised the late George Norris for his great ability as a legislator and the progressive principles of government which he advocated throughout his career.

I do not know what happened after I made this speech on the floor of the Senate. It may be that some of George Norris' friends in Nebraska took this speech, or parts of it—which they had a right to do—and used it as a recording which was broadcast to the voters of the State of Nebraska. But I want my friend from Nebraska thoroughly to understand that I categorically deny the statements which he made last night. The Senator from Nebraska said:

The Senator from Illinois made broadcast recordings which were sent to Nebraska and used in an attempt to defeat me.

I will say to the Senator that I did not even know the distinguished Senator from Nebraska at that time. I never made a recording against him. I never caused any recordings to be sent to Nebraska at any time.

Furthermore, the Senator said:

Dozens of records, containing speeches against me, were sent out there by the Senator from Illinois.

A moment ago I made the explanation that we had a pretty busy campaign in Illinois in 1942, and I had all I could do to help defend the Democratic cause. We were unsuccessful in that campaign. I did not send dozens of speeches to Nebraska. I sent no speech at any time.

The Senator from Nebraska further stated:

Drew Pearson wrote articles against me.

The Senator from Nebraska further stated:

The Senator from Illinois joined in attacking me.

I do not think the Senator means that I joined with Drew Pearson in attacking him. If he does, of course, I categorically deny that charge.

The Senator from Nebraska continued:

Why did the Senator get into that campaign?

The thing that struck me was the statement which the Senator from Nebraska made later. He said:

I have been looking for a chance to say this ever since I came to the Senate.

In view of that statement, I thought that perhaps the Senator was laboring under a misapprehension as to my actual participation in his campaign. If the Senator from Nebraska can say that the speech which I made on the floor of the Senate in behalf of the late Senator George Norris was something which interfered with his campaign, then his conclusions are correct. But I want the Senate distinctly to understand that the Senator from Illinois never made a single recording, or a group of speeches to send into Nebraska. As to what might have been done with what I said on the floor of the Senate, which became a matter of public record, of course I do not know. I had absolutely nothing to do with it. I thought an explanation was due and I could not permit the record to stand as it is without saying these few words.

In conclusion, let me say that I take nothing back of what I said about the late Senator George Norris. When I came to the Senate from the House of Representatives I frequently counseled with George Norris. George Norris was my friend, and he was the friend of every Senator who sought counsel and advice from him. I always liked him. The people of my State always liked George Norris. When most of us who are now Members of the United States Senate shall have been forgotten, the name of George Norris will continue to shine on the pages of history. Many may disagree with his theory and philosophy of government, but his name will stand out as a beacon light to lead progressive citizens up the rugged paths of unselfish interest. This is the type of public service which has made America great.

Mr. President, that is all I care to say. In view of the remarks of the distinguished Senator from Nebraska last evening, I felt that I should make this explanation in justice to myself, in the hope that I might remove what seems to me to be a misapprehension that has been in the mind of the Senator from Nebraska ever since he has been in the Senate.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I sincerely thank the Senator for his explanation of the part which he took in that campaign. I appreciate the explanation. Let me say to the Senator that there is no further misapprehension. However, I owe the Senator an everlasting debt of gratitude, because it was those speeches which circulated through Nebraska which helped to elect me to the United States Senate.

Mr. LUCAS. I am very glad to have that reaction from my able friend. I am a little puzzled to know why he made the statement last night that he had been waiting for an opportunity to say certain things ever since he came to the Senate. I thought the Senator probably should have complimented me for helping to elect him, if he had taken the same position last night he assumed today.

Mr. WHERRY. If the Senator will permit me to do so, I shall be glad to come over and shake hands with him and tell him that I deeply appreciate the service which he rendered me in that campaign. Would the Senator like to shake hands with me? I shall be glad to shake hands with the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. Just a moment.

I am very happy to find the Senator from Nebraska in such a genial attitude, because I thought I detected just the opposite last night when he was charging me with sending speeches into Nebraska and making recordings in Illinois and sending them out to his State in 1942. It seemed to me that the Senator believes I had more or less conspired with someone to defeat a candidate for the Senate whom I did not even know at the time. Now that the Senator is convinced and everyone is happy, I am very glad to subside. I yield to my friend from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I was wondering whether the Senator's speeches which were sent to Nebraska were the same sort of speeches that I made in Vermont a few years ago when I was sent up there to make a speech in behalf of the Democratic candidate for the United States Senate, who was running against the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN]. I spoke in the Senator's home town, and I had a great many complimentary things to say about him, which he deserved. After the speechmaking was over the chairman of the Democratic campaign committee asked me whether I came up there to speak for Senator AUSTIN or his opponent. Perhaps the Senator from Illinois was paying a compliment to the Senator from Nebraska and it may have been misinterpreted.

VOTING RECORD OF SENATORS

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, our constituents are entitled to know how we voted on every issue that has come before us during the Seventy-ninth Congress. I therefore urge that the Senate publish a document containing a tabulation of the votes cast by every Member, together with a brief description of all of the measures voted on. Such a booklet should be published in a quantity large enough so that it could be available to every voter in the country. The Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress has all of these records readily available, and could compile their pamphlet within a few days.

The people of the United States are becoming more aware of the political responsibilities which inhere in citizenship in a democracy. They are taking greater interest in politics and they are becoming increasingly informed upon the measures which come before us. Politics is no longer the private game of clubhouse hangers-on, ward heelers, office seekers, and big-business lobbyists. Ordinary citizens are beginning to realize that the measures we pass here affect them just as much as they affect big business. Consumers are learning of the impact of legislation upon their grocery baskets. They will learn even more when price controls are suddenly removed or drastically weakened. For the past decade women's clubs have given more and more attention to politics and their members are among our best informed citizens. All of these people are vitally interested in knowing the voting records of their Senators. They have a right to know them. I therefore urge that the Senate make the voting records of its Members available to the public as soon as possible, and to this end I ask unanimous consent to submit a resolution and ask that it be appropriately referred.

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 295), submitted by Mr. TAYLOR, was received and referred to the Committee on Printing, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be directed to compile and to publish within 3 weeks after the close of the present session of Congress a tabulation of the voting record of its Members during the Seventy-ninth Congress on all roll-call votes, together with brief descriptions of the issues voted upon. For the purpose of easy readibility and quick reference, each Member's votes shall be gathered in one place. The Superintendent of Documents shall sell copies at cost, and shall print sufficient copies so that a supply is on hand at all times until the end of 1946.

EXTENSION OF PRICE CONTROL AND STABILIZATION ACTS OF 1942—CONFERENCE REPORT

The Senate resumed consideration of the conference report on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6042) to amend the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, as amended, and the Stabilization Act of 1942, as amended, and for other purposes.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I shall vote for the conference report on the OPA. My reason for doing so, however, is not because I approve the conference report, but because I think we should get the whole thing before the President at the earliest possible time. When this measure reaches the President, I think he should determine whether, in effect, it does away with all price controls and will allow the cost of living to rise sky high and will open the floodgates of inflation. I think the pending measure will do that. In my opinion the President should veto it. The time has come to stop fooling the people. If certain Members of Congress are willing to take action as will bring about the high cost of living which prevailed after the last war, with the same ruinous effect on all, except perhaps the very rich, and followed by a depression similar to the one which occurred after the inflation following the last war, they have a right to do so. But the people also have a right to know who did it, and to pass judgment in November upon those who did it.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MYERS in the chair). Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. MORSE. I wish to say to the Senator from Florida that I, too, think the President of the United States should veto the conference report. But I intend to support the President of the United States to that end by voting my convictions and in doing that I shall vote against the conference report. If the Senator favors a veto then I say logic, consistency, and support of the President dictate his vote against the bill.

Mr. PEPPER. I thank the able Senator from Oregon for saying that, and I shall comment upon his suggestion at the close of the brief statement which I wish to present first.

When certain Members of Congress set out to assure profits to all producers and processors and manufacturers, they forgot what they were doing to the masses of the people of America. According to a survey recently announced by the Federal Reserve Board today, two out of every five American families have savings of less than $40. I wish to repeat that statement, Mr. President: Two out of every five American families today, as revealed by the Federal Reserve Board, pursuant to a survey made by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, have less than $40 in liquid savings. That means that in cash, in bonds, or in other liquid assets they have $40 or less. That situation applies to two out of every five American families. Their savings are about 1 percent of the total liquid assets in the country. Those figures are not mine. They are given out with the approval of the Federal Reserve Board, in connection with a study to ascertain who has the savings in the United States.

Two-thirds of the families of the United States make less than $40 a week, which is just a little more than $2,000 a year. Mr. President, what is the size of the average family in the United States? It is about four. The average family has four members. Two-thirds of the families in the United States make less than $2,000 a year with which to care for the average family of four members. They are the so-called rich, who are said to be clamoring for a chance to pay high prices, according to the opinions of certain gentlemen who speak on this measure. What will happen to those families when inflation comes?

Mr. President, the overwhelming majority of the children of the United States live in the homes of the poor. When the cost of living rises, their standard of living and their health care go down. If the President vetoes this measure, as I hope he will, then he should ask the Congress for a joint resolution continuing the OPA as it is until February 1, 1947.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. Assuming that the Congress did not follow that recommendation, then where would we be?

Mr. PEPPER. Does the Senator refer to the continuing resolution?

Mr. LUCAS. Yes.

Mr. PEPPER. If the President were to veto the measure now pending, and if he then requested the Congress to pass a continuing joint resolution—and it would be my expectation that he would ask the able majority leader of the Senate and the able majority leader of the House of Representatives to introduce such a resolution, or else he would ask the chairmen of the appropriate committees in the House and the Senate to do so—then it would be up to the Congress to determine whether it would pass the joint resolution continuing the OPA as it is until February 1, 1947, at the President's request and for the reasons given by the President.

If the Congress were to fail to do so—and I wish to answer my able friend the Senator from Illinois in two ways—first, a record would be made of those in Congress who were willing to stand behind the President and were willing to stand behind the people on such a clear-cut issue as that.

As the able Senator from Idaho [Mr. TAYLOR] has pointed out, the American people are entitled to know our record in this body. Then the people of the United States would know who favor inflation, who favor bringing back the high cost of living which existed after the last war, and who are willing to stand by the President and the Government and the people in this crisis which threatens their very security and their very existence.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I ask the Senator to permit me to make one further statement in response to the question asked by the Senator from Illinois.

If, however, the Congress were to persist in that attitude, and still were not to pass any continuing joint resolution at all, then we would have no OPA, we would have unbridled inflation, and we would have an incalculable increase in the cost of living, just as we shall have under the pending measure, if it becomes law. But the advantage would be that the American people would know who gave them that bitter medicine and who tried to spare them from its iniquitous effects.

As the situation is today, we would accomplish the same economic result if we adopted the pending conference report and if it became law, yet the responsibility is so diffused and so confused that the people can hardly tell who has been responsible for bringing this evil in their lives perhaps for many years to come.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me once more?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield, first, to the Senator from Oregon, to whom I have promised to yield. I ask the Senator from Illinois to wait for a few minutes.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, does the Senator from Florida agree that if the Congress made the record which I think is alluded to in the question put to him by the Senator from Illinois, the knowledge on the part of the American people as to who was responsible for the inflation which will flow from this bill would in no way alleviate their conditions insofar as their suffering from such inflation? It would be a rather empty satisfaction, would it not, for them to have merely the knowledge of who made the record that inflicted inflation cruelties upon them. Frankly, I am at a loss to understand the illogical position of the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. It might be of little benefit to them insofar as changing the situation would be concerned. But I dare say that their discomfiture would not last longer than the early days of next year, because if, in the November elections, the people disapproved of the action of Congress in opening the floodgates of inflation, the new Congress that would be elected could not get to Washington fast enough to pass effective price-control legislation.

Mr. MORSE. Will the Senator answer this question, please: From a parliamentary standpoint, is it not the obligation of the Senate to make certain that it has exhausted every possibility of getting a better bill, before it takes final action?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes; I think so. I say that I think we have exhausted all such possibilities, and I say that the bill now before us is the best bill we shall be able to get from this Congress, unless the President takes this issue to the American people and asks for a decision upon a clear-cut issue.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator permit several questions in relation to that conclusion?

Mr. PEPPER. I gladly yield.

Mr. MORSE. I am sure that the Senator from Florida recalls that the other day, the Chair ruled that, from a parliamentary standpoint, the only way by which the Senate could get the pending measure back to conference would be, first, by rejecting the conference report. Then we would be in a position to request a further conference. Did the Senator from Florida hear that ruling?

Mr. PEPPER. I did, and of course, that is the parliamentary procedure.

Mr. MORSE. Let us assume that we are able to defeat the conference report, and let us assume that the bill goes to a further conference. Does the Senator from Florida think that the result of such conference could be in any other direction, if we are to have any bill at all, than in the direction of a bill more nearly like the original Senate bill than the pending bill?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I say to the Senator from Oregon that, in my opinion, in view of the bill on which the conferees on the part of both Houses had to work, the result in the form of the pending conference report is better than we had a right to expect. The bill as passed by the Senate and the bill as passed by the House of Representatives were so bad that there was no leeway for a committee on conference to bring out a good bill and submit it to the Senate and to the House. That leads me to believe that even if the Senate rejects the pending conference report and orders the measure to be sent to a further conference, we shall never get out of conference, on the basis of the bill as passed by the Senate and the bill as passed by the House, a better conference report than the one which we now have before us.

Mr. MORSE. But if we reject the pending measure, is it not true that thereby we shall serve notice on the conferees that they must bring from the further conference a better bill, if they hope to have it enacted into law?

Mr. PEPPER. But if they do not bring back a better bill, we shall be back where we are today. After all, in the conference the conferees debated the measure for days. After that has happened, and after the measure has been fought out in the committees and in the Senate and in the House, and after it has become obvious what the philosophy and attitude of both bodies are, I do not see how it is possible to expect to receive from any further conference which might consider the matter any better measure than the one now before us.

Mr. MORSE. If they do not bring back a better bill, will they not have made exactly the same record which the Senator from Florida has pointed out he believes will be made if the President vetoes the bill and the Congress does not then take any action on the basis of the veto? The same record will be made in either case, except under the procedure which I have suggested we would put squarely up to the conferees, on reconsideration, the question of submitting to the two Houses a better bill.

Mr. PEPPER. Yes; but the able Senator from Oregon is overlooking the time element which is involved. It is now 3 o'clock Friday afternoon. The Price Control Act will expire midnight next Sunday. So, at best, there is only the time which remains between now and midnight next Sunday for anything to be done to save price control for the people of the United States. If the conference report comes back to the Senate and is again debated, there will be further delay in making an appropriate adjustment before price control lapses entirely. But if, this afternoon, we agree to the conference report and let the bill go to the White House this evening, the President, who will be anticipating its arrival and will have in the meantime made a study of the questions involved and advised with his counselors, will have all night tonight and tomorrow to determine what he wishes to do, and the Congress will have an opportunity later, including Sunday, if necessary, to consider a continuing resolution. In an emergency there is no reason why the Congress should not sit on Sunday. In that case the issue would be clearly presented of whether we want price control to continue until next February. At that time a new Congress will be in session.

I agree with the Senator from Oregon that, if I believed it was possible to get from the conference not a better bill but one comparable to what we now have, I would be in favor of returning the bill to conference. But I ask Senators to take into consideration the time element, and the fact that the other House has already acted, and that the conference committee could not meet unless the House agreed to another conference. I ask Senators also to consider the uncertainty with reference to whether the House would agree to another conference, and the time which would be involved in getting the conferees together. It seems to me that if we were to follow such procedure there would be no prospect of extending the present act. I am sure that the Senator from Oregon and I, as we usually do, have the same end in view. We only differ with reference to the best way to reach the end. The question is one of allowing this Congress to decide whether it will do away with price control. I am not quarreling with the Senators who take the point of view that it would be better not to have price control. However, I believe that it would be terrible to do away with price control at any time during the next few months. But we should let the Congress decide squarely whether we will kill the Price Control Act or extend it. I believe that the method which I have suggested, namely, that of adopting the conference report this afternoon, allowing it to go to the White House, giving the President the opportunity to send a message of recommendation back to us tomorrow, and allowing us the rest of the day and Sunday, if necessary, to consider the matter, would be the best method to follow.

Mr. MORSE. I thank the Senator for permitting me to interrupt him. I have not at all overlooked the time element which is involved, but I have a point of view in regard to the time element which is exactly opposite to that of the Senator from Florida. I believe that it is necessary to consider the time element from the standpoint of how long it will take to put this bill into any form of effective administration. I assert that it will never be effectively administered. I believe that a hiatus period of a few days would help and not hinder the situation.

With all due respect to the Senator from Florida, I believe that a vote for the conference report would be a vote against a Presidential veto. I believe that the Senator from Florida is "passing the buck" to the President, and I think we should now support the President's position by voting against the bill, and thereby demonstrating to him that the margin between those who favor it and those who oppose it is very small.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I know how earnestly the able Senator from Oregon feels. I admit that there is an honest difference of opinion with reference to what is the better method to follow in achieving the result which both of us wish to attain. I believe that the method which I have suggested is a better method than the one which has been suggested by the Senator from Oregon, although I do not quarrel at all with the sentiment expressed by the able Senator from Oregon. If we send the bill back to conference at this time and the House of Representatives does not agree to a new conference, the act will expire at midnight next Sunday and we will not have any legislation at all on the subject. The President would still have to make some recommendation to the Congress, or we would have to pass a continuing resolution, and that much more time would be consumed in arriving at the same place.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, the Senator from Florida wants the President to veto the bill and request Congress to pass a resolution for the continuance until February of next year of the OPA Act as it now appears on the statute books?

Mr. PEPPER. That is correct.

Mr. LUCAS. From a parliamentary angle, I may say that there is nothing, I believe, which would prevent any Senator from offering amendments to such a resolution when it came before the Senate. So, what I fear is that we would find ourselves in the same position in which we now are. If the Senate should agree, as the Senator has suggested, to take a straight-out vote upon the question of whether we shall continue or not continue the OPA Act, of course, that could be done. But I fear that when the resolution gets here and amendments which have been offered heretofore to the OPA bill are again offered to the resolution, we will find ourselves in the same position we are in now. The country ought to know definitely whether we are in favor of continuing the OPA, or whether we are opposed to it. There is no doubt that the amendments now contained in the bill are crippling in character. As the Senator from Oregon said a moment ago, if I understood him correctly, this act cannot be effectively administered within the life of the act.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I agree with what the Senator said in the last part of his remarks, and I agree with reference to the possibility of what could happen if a resolution such as the one I have described were presented. However, we know very well, Mr. President, that what we say on the floor of the Senate is not nearly so clear in connection with a matter of this kind as what the President of the United States would say. He has the vantage point of his great office. I repeat that what we might say would not be so effective and clear as what the President might say. We can debate this matter. Some have said that the pending bill practically destroys price control. Others say that it does not. However, I believe that if the President of the United States, backed up by his advisers, were to tell the American people that we might just as well not have price control as to have this bill, and that the time had come for the Congress to make a decision as to whether or not we shall have price control, and he vetoed the bill in furtherance of that policy and asked the Congress either to pass a continuing resolution preserving price control or to kill it and let the people know what we have done, we would face a different issue than the one we face this afternoon.

Mr. President, not all our people are as familiar with the parliamentary situation in Congress as are we. We know that we do not have the power to amend the conference report on the Senate floor. There may be persons in the galleries and throughout the country who wonder why, if the bill is not a proper bill, we do not amend it here in the Senate. We cannot do that. Under the rules of the Senate and of the House of Representatives, we must adopt the conference report in toto or reject it in toto. We must accept it or have nothing. We do not have any power to amend it.

A little while ago there was a bill before the Senate with reference to which at least 17 Senators expressed themselves. I offered a substitute amendment proposing to continue the present price-control law until February 1 of next year.

There was a record vote, and 17 of us voted at that time, even for a simple continuing provision. But a majority of the Senate chose to adopt the bill which the Senate did pass at that time. That bill went to conference with the House of Representatives, and there the conferees considered the Senate bill and a bill which the House had passed some time ago.

Senators will remember and the country will remember, that when the House bill was passed, it was emblazoned on the headlines of nearly every paper in the country that the crippling amendments of the House of Representatives had, for all practical purposes, destroyed price control in the United States. It was stated that the same effect attached to the bill passed by the United States Senate. So when the conferees met they had to deal with two bills, each of which had been properly castigated, in my opinion, as to all practical purposes destroying price control.

I think the conference is to be complimented for having brought back as good a conference report as it has, taking into consideration the bills with which the conference had to work in the consideration of the measures.

Mr. President, I believe that we might just as well have no price control at all as to have the bill which would become the law if this conference report should be agreed to by the Senate as it has been adopted by the House of Representatives.

What does it do? It guarantees, in the Taft amendment, that every producer, which means anyone who grows or makes anything anywhere in the country and every processor and every manufacturer, and that includes practically all the creative people in this country, practically all those who put goods and commodities into the channels of trade, shall be guaranteed the price he got between October 1 and October 15, 1941, plus all industry-wide increases which have occurred between October 15, 1941, and the present time.

Mr. President, what will that mean? It will mean that in the automobile business, for example, the man who sells raw materials will be able to get a great mark-up on his raw materials. It means that the man who processes will get a mark-up on his processing service, and, finally, when many things come together in a given part of an automobile, the price of the whole part will have been increased, and when that part becomes a part of a larger part, then the larger part will get an increase in price. Eventually all these parts which have had increases will become the whole automobile, and goodness knows—in fact, no one has been able to estimate—what the total increase in the price of the finished product will be when all these lesser increases all down the line have been granted by the OPA.

Mr. President, not only is that allowed, but there is no real, practical standard which is defined; it is practically left to the OPA to ask a man what he thinks he is entitled to, and they have little discretion except to give him what he demands as his price increases. As I have said, no one has been able to tell how much that is going to add to the cost of food, to the cost of wearing apparel, to the cost of practically every kind of goods the American people use.

Mr. President, if we are to have that kind of a law, it means for all practical purposes no price control, because I do not believe prices would be substantially higher without such a law than they would be with such a law upon the statute books of the country.

We will destroy the law of supply and demand if we enact legislation of that sort, we will guarantee to the people that they will not have low prices, and we will guarantee to every producer, processor, and manufacturer that he will get the largest profits, in my opinion, he could expect to get.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. CAPEHART. What would be the opposite of the plan the Senator just described, under which each manufacturer, producer, or processor would make a profit? What would be the opposite to that?

Mr. PEPPER. The opposite would be the plan we are now superseding, and I will say to the Senator from Indiana that I admit readily that there are many defects and there are many hardships under the plan we presently have. There are some producers, there are some processors, there are some manufacturers, who are undoubtedly bearing very heavy onerous burdens, but when we deal with public matters in most cases we have to balance interests between the harm we do and the good we do, and I say to the Senator that the burden that is being suffered by the producers, the processors, and the manufacturers today, under the present law, in my opinion is far less dangerous and less onerous and less obnoxious than the burden the consuming public—taking into consideration the fact that most of them are poor people—would have to bear if we assured the profits this bill guarantees to the producers, the processors, and the manufacturers.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I gladly yield.

Mr. CAPEHART. If I understand the present OPA law correctly—and I believe I do—it provides that every manufacturer and processor is entitled to a reasonable profit, and that no maximum price shall be fixed that does not show a reasonable profit. What is the difference between the present law and the one the Senator has just described? I am certain that the Senator is not advocating that anyone in America handling merchandise shall manufacture or process or produce at a loss.

Mr. PEPPER. Neither does the OPA, as I understand the administration of it, expect people to sell things at a loss, generally speaking. There may be cases where, under past regulations, they may not let a man make a profit on a particular article if he manufactures more than one; they will not make him take a loss on any part of his production, but if he is making cost of production on a given article, we will say article A, and if his over-all profit position is reasonably satisfactory, they will not give him a profit on article A. I realize that there are some disadvantages about that, but if it is a question of keeping a manufacturer from making a profit on article A when his over-all profit position is fairly satisfactory, or raising the cost of living to the masses of the people, with all that brings about, I prefer the former policy, and that is the policy that is now in effect.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, if I remember correctly, the so-called Taft amendment merely provides that the manufacturer shall be given the same mark-up or profit he was receiving on October 1, 1941, and if he was receiving no profit or had no mark-up at that time, he likewise would get no mark-up at this time.

I have listened to a good deal of talk about businessmen handling certain items without any profit, and I rather suspect they have done so in the past, not intentionally, but unintentionally. I should like to ask the able Senator what percentage of the business in America, either today or 5 years ago or 10 years ago, has been handled at a loss. I do not suppose the Senator can answer the question; I am certain I cannot.

Mr. PEPPER. I do not know.

Mr. CAPEHART. Let us say it was 10 percent, which I am certain is 10 times too high, but I am willing to use 10 percent as the figure. Let us say it is 10 percent, or 10 times too high. What particular disadvantage is that going to be, or what material effect is that going to have upon prices, 10 percent, or 5 percent, or 1 percent, or 2 percent, or whatever it may be? In other words, we are talking about the small end of our economy. On the floor of the Senate we are prone to use the exception to try to prove the rule. We are trying to take a very small percentage of our business, of our national economy, and say, "If you permit that 5 percent to make a little profit, prices are going sky high," when there is not any basis for the statement. It is a small percentage of our economy, and means nothing, in the net result, on whether we have inflation or whether we have stable prices.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the Senator has a right to his opinion about that matter. I do not care about the opinion that has been expressed on this floor by Mr. Chester Bowles or Mr. Paul Porter. I know there are no more devoted public servants in this country than those two men. I think they are able, are competent, are devoted to the public service. I attach great consideration and great respect to the figures they give to the Congress and to the country about what the effect of these various proposals would be upon the cost of living. I know what they have said. I have seen their public statements, I have talked with them personally. I know they feel that for all practical purposes we might just as well have no price control at all as to have perhaps the legislation that is contemplated by the conference report. But I do know, Mr. President, that if the Senator from Ohio and others who placed this amendment in the bill had not thought that the amendment was going to add to the profit of the producers and the processors and the manufacturers over what they are now getting they would not have put it in the measure.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. HAWKES. I know the Senator from Florida wants to be fair in giving the reasons why the amendment under discussion was placed in the bill. As the authors of it have told me—and I believe they are accurate because my whole experience in business bears out their statement—their reasons were to create production on the theory that production cannot be created unless there is some profit. They wanted to give a reasonable profit to stimulate production.

I want to tell the Senator from Florida, if he will permit me——

Mr. PEPPER. I want to say one thing before the Senator goes further. I did not suggest that there was any sinister motive behind the proposal.

Mr. HAWKES. I realize that the Senator does not think there is.

Mr. PEPPER. But the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART] raised the question as to whether this amendment would add any more profit to the producers and processors and the manufacturers. I was merely saying that if the authors of the amendment had not thought it would, obviously they would not have put it in the measure.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAWKES. Will the Senator pardon me a moment. I am not criticizing what the Senator from Florida is saying. I am merely trying to enlarge upon it and to show that we are all seeking to obtain production. I think the Senator from Florida will agree that I am just as much interested in seeing that the ordinary men and women of this country—I have been one of them all my life—get the things they need on a fair basis as is any other Member of the Senate. It is only a question of difference of opinion as to the way to get those things.

If the Senator from Florida will permit me to make one other remark, I will say to him, and all my other colleagues in the Senate, that we are not going to cure the difficulties of the present situation without passing through a period in which we are going to be tried. We are going to have some injustices, hardships, and unfairness. There is no question about that. We are not going to get from where we are to where we want to go without some trouble no matter what course we choose to follow.

I want to tell the Senator a very interesting little story of a real happening, which, from my point of view, is justification for voting for the amendment of the Senator from Ohio. A few weeks ago seven little boys about 10 years old were sitting in my living room and I wanted one of them to do an errand which was a little difficult to perform. I said to the boys, "Which one of you boys will go to the store and get a big package and bring it up to the house?" Not one of them moved. They looked at each other, and each one was hoping that someone else would say he would do the job. Finally I thought I would try a little experiment. I said, "Which one of you boys will go to the store and get this package if I give you a quarter for doing so?" Everyone of them sprang to his feet. That was an illustration of what is the mainspring behind production. That is what we are trying to do to get production. That is what I am hoping we will accomplish.

Mr. PEPPER. I will say to the able Senator from New Jersey, for whom he knows I have the greatest admiration and the warmest affection, that if he were a hungry man and had but a quarter with which to buy what he needed to eat, he could not have given the boy a quarter to go to the store for him, no matter how much of an incentive that quarter might have been to that boy.

Mr. HAWKES. I may say to the Senator that he is talking about one thing and I am talking about another. I am talking about the mainspring that impels people to produce, and production is the only answer to this situation; that is all.

Mr. PEPPER. I thoroughly respect the point of view of the Senator, but what I am saying is, Mr. President, that we proceed on the assumption that the people can afford to pay the prices that will result in this production through the incentive motive. If the Senator will allow me just a moment more. I asked a while ago, "Who are the American people?" We hear some carelessly say from time to time, "Why, everyone has money." It is considered that money is just growing on trees, practically.

Mr. HAWKES. May I say to the Senator that I do not agree with that idea. That is not my thought.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator is too able and sound a businessman to believe any such thing.

Here, Mr. President, are the figures on savings carried out in a little more detail than I gave them a while ago, as reported by the Federal Reserve Board after making a study of the savings of the people of the Nation. As I said, two out of every five families in the United States have total savings, per family, in liquid assets, of less than $40. Those two families out of five families represent 40 percent of the families of the whole of the United States, and they have 1 percent of the savings of the whole people of the United States. Just think of that. The Federal Reserve Board wanted to see what was the distribution of our savings. It wanted to know: Where are all these savings that we are talking about, of the riches accumulated as the result of the war? Who has the riches that came out of the war? It was found that 40 percent of all the American people had 1 percent of the savings of the American people.

It was found that the top 10 percent had 60 percent of the savings. Think of that. The top 10 percent of the American people had 60 percent of the savings, or an average per family of $10,500.

Senators remember when Mr. Henry Ford, Jr., and some other businessmen said, "Let us take off all controls. In the long run we will be much better off without them." I do not blame Mr. Ford for taking that position. I do not blame the man who has $10,500 saved up for taking such a position. Perhaps he can weather the storm for 6 months or maybe for a year. Of course we know the storm will die down sometime. But I am talking about the period during which the storm is upon us. Mr. Ford has his millions, and the top 10 percent of our families have an average of $10,500. But 40 percent of the American people have but $40 for each family. How can a family weather much of an economic storm on $40—a family which averages four persons? Suppose the head of the family loses his job. Suppose his wages are cut. If prices go up and his wages are cut how long will that $40 last? If he has sickness in his family how long will the $40 last. That is what I am talking about, Mr. President. I am not talking about those who feel they do not need to have any controls, who would just turn everything loose and let the devil take the hindmost for about a year, and go on a buyers' strike; those who do not have to buy luxuries. But I am talking about the men and women and children of this country who have to buy food and have to buy clothes and have to buy houses in which to live, or rent houses, those who have to buy the essentials of life. I say that they do not have the money with which to weather the storm of inflation. When inflation comes to them, not only are their savings taken, but it has a direful effect on the health of their children. That is the reason, Mr. President, why I do not favor doing away with price control.

I stated that the top 10 percent of American families have 60 percent of the savings. The top 30 percent of American families have 87.5 percent of the total liquid assets or savings of the country. Ninety-two percent of the families of the United States have incomes of less than $3,000 a year. And, as I stated, two-thirds of the families of this country have incomes of less than $2,000 a year.

Mr. President, this amendment guarantees the profits of 1941 plus industry-wide cost increases to the producers and the processors and the manufacturers. I have before me some figures that come, I believe, from the Department of Commerce, and I am going to quote the figures. They give the profits of all corporations in 1936 to 1939, before taxes. They were $5,300,000,000. But in 1944 the same corporations, before taxes, made profits of $24,100,000,000, and in 1945 made profits estimated before taxes of $20,900,000,000. After taxes the profits of all corporations in the United States, from 1936 to 1939, were $3,900,000,000. In 1944 they were $9,800,000,000, nearly three times as much. In 1945 they were estimated at $9,100,000,000, approximately three times as much.

Nineteen hundred and thirty-six to 1939 was not such a bad period for the corporations of this country. They were not the best years in our history, but they were not the worst. Yet in 1945 the corporations were making nearly three times as much, after taxes, as they made between 1936 and 1939.

I am now going to give the figures of the profits of 2,152 leading industrial corporations. Before taxes, 1936 to 1939, they made $3,100,000,000. In 1944 they made $10,100,000,000. There was no report in 1945.

After taxes, in 1936–39, they made $2,600,000,000. In 1944, after taxes, they made $3,900,000,000. There was no report for 1945.

Now I give the return on net worth of 2,152 manufacturing corporations. That is the dividends, as it were. In 1936–39—I leave out the figures before taxes and simply speak of the figures after taxes—they made 8.2 percent. In 1944 they made 10 percent. There is no report for 1945.

Now, Mr. President, let me mention something else that these corporations have gotten. Under the carry-forward-carry-back tax law that Congress passed, if a big corporation does not make as much money in the first 2 years after the war as it made during the war, when it paid excess-profit taxes, it can draw back from the Federal Treasury some of the excess-profits taxes it paid in during the war. Mr. President, that means that billions of dollars are going to be drawn out of the Federal Treasury by the corporations of this country which they paid in in taxes during the war. At this point I should like to insert in the RECORD some profit data of nondurable manufacturing concerns and distributive trades in the first quarter of 1946 as compared with 1945.

Profits before and after taxes of 125 large corporations, first quarter of 1946

	Profits		Percentage change first quarter 1945
	Before taxes	After taxes	Before	After
100 nondurable manufacturing	$306,000,000	$192,000,000	−18	+23
25 miscellaneous services	70,000,000	40,000,000	+11	+80

Of the 25 miscellaneous service groups, 13 trade corporations earned $39,000,000 before taxes and $24,000,000 after taxes, or 61 and 166 percent respectively above the 1945 level. The increase in the profits after taxes for the nondurable manufacturing group and for the miscellaneous distributive services is due in part to the lowering of their taxes.

I wonder how much is going to be drawn out by the little taxpayers.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, how much time have I?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has until 3:36.

Mr. PEPPER. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. CAPEHART. Does not the Senator think the RECORD should show that corporations will not draw back any taxes unless they lose money, so as not to leave the impression that they are going to draw back this money, and in addition make billions of dollars? They will draw back money only if they lose money.

Mr. PEPPER. Is it not a fact that the carry-forward carry-back provision also permits them to draw back certain money in case their standard of earning falls below that of the base period?

Mr. CAPEHART. I understand that.

Mr. PEPPER. That does not mean that they must have a loss.

Mr. CAPEHART. I think we should correct the RECORD so as to show that they draw money only in case they lose money. In other words, they do not make profits in their normal operations and in addition draw money from previously paid excess-profits taxes. They draw back money only in case they lose money.

Does not the Senator also believe that the RECORD should show that while he is speaking of 2,500 of the large corporations of America, those which have monopolies to a greater or less extent, we should likewise protect the 3,000,000 small businessmen of America—the little corner grocery store, the little drug store, the little man in the pressing business, and the shoe-shine man? There are about 3,000,000 in that class.

Mr. PEPPER. Of course.

Mr. CAPEHART. The Senator is speaking about 2,500 corporations. We must protect the 3,000,000.

Mr. PEPPER. Of course, we want to protect the masses of the people; but primarily those who will profit from this amendment are the major production groups of the country, the big manufacturers, the big processors, and the big producers.

During the debate on the minimum-wage bill I pointed out that about 10 percent of the farmers of the country produced 54 percent of the agricultural output of all farmers. So, when there is an increase in the prices of farm products, primarily the benefit goes to about 10 percent of the farmers of the country, and not so much to the little fellow who is farming on the side of a hill.

Mr. President, I rose to say that I feel that for all practical purposes this bill destroys price control. I wish there were some way by which I could vote against the conference report, as I voted against the bill when it was before the Senate and open to amendment. At that time I offered a resolution continuing price control as it now exists until February 1, when the new Congress, from the people, will have a chance to act on the matter.

There is no way that I can get a better bill, the conference report which is now before the Senate not being open to amendment. If we kill it in the Senate, we kill price control altogether, without the executive branch of the Government having an opportunity to suggest any alternative to complete repeal of price control. Moreover, the House of Representatives has already acted upon the conference report. We have no assurance, on Friday afternoon, that the House could be persuaded to set aside its action in agreeing to the conference report so that the bill could be sent to a new conference.

For that reason, much as I disapprove of this measure, much as I think that in general it is giving to those who have and taking from those who have not, much as I think it will penalize the poor of America and add to the already swollen profits of the processors, the producers, and manufacturers, nevertheless, I shall vote for the conference report in the hope that it will get to the President at the earliest possible time, so that the President may have an early decision by his advisers as to what the effect of the measure will be.

If it does in substance kill price control, tomorrow he can send a message to Congress courageously vetoing it, as he courageously vetoed the Case bill because it was inimical to the public interest. Then he will call upon those who are going to stand by the public interest in this matter, as well as by him, to support in the Senate and in the House of Representatives a simple continuing resolution preserving price control, with all its defects and shortcomings, as it now is, until February 1. Then if the Congress, with that clear-cut issue presented to it by the Chief Magistrate, supported by factual argument, turns down the request of the President, the American people will know, as they have a right to know, who it is that has broken the dike, who it is that has stricken down the dam, who it is that has opened the floodgates and deluged them with the destructive effects of the high cost of living and inflation and set the stage for the inevitable depression to follow. (Manifestations of applause from the galleries.)

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. President, like the Senator from Florida, I feel that I owe it to myself to explain my vote on the conference report. I feel that the bill as it is presented to the Senate, with no opportunity for amendment, is so emasculated as to be utterly ineffective as price control. It has left only a few vestiges of price control.

I also feel that, having operated for 4 years on an all-out total war basis, we need more than a few months to make adjustments and permit prices to seek their normal level. Prices cannot reach their normal level until we are assured that production meets demand. Until that time arrives, the type of price control which is needed is a flexible price control which will operate until prices of various commodities become adjusted.

This is the only bill on which we can vote that has any reference to price control. I believe that as it is now organized the Office of Price Administration is not an office of price administration at all. It is merely a screen, a subterfuge behind which to hide in blaming an executive agency for what will inevitably happen in the future with rising prices.

However, in spite of that fact, because there still remains the possibility of holding an organization together that can be used in case of grave emergency—and I fear that such an emergency will come sooner than we think—in spite of my revulsion for the bill as drafted, and my feeling that it is a subterfuge, a legal fence or hedge behind which to hide during the coming inflation and the resulting deflation, I shall vote for that little subterfuge because it still maintains an organization that can be used when the situation becomes critical in the future. I shall support it with a clothespin on my nose, so to speak. Nevertheless, because it is a small step in the right direction—and it is such an infinitesimally small step I dislike to think of it—I shall support it, protesting to my conscience as I do so, but nevertheless endeavoring to hold together an organization which can be used for emergency purposes in the future when the situation becomes too stringent, as it may become when all controls are released.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, although I am anxious to reach a vote on the conference report, I wish to speak for a few minutes on this subject.

In the debate on the conference report there has been so much discussion on profits that I fear we have lost sight of the real reason why price control, and possibly rationing, are now necessary in the United States.

One year ago today we were engaged in the greatest war in history. Between 13,000,000 and 14,000,000 young Americans fought in that war. Nearly 300,000 of them died. Seven hundred thousand more came home wounded, sick, or injured in some way. The terrific impact of the war has been felt all over the world. We do not know how many millions of men died; probably we shall never know, but we know that the number was staggering.

We know that today perhaps 50,000,000 people are in ill health or crippled as the result of the war. We know that millions of homes throughout the world were destroyed. In White Russia the people destroyed their own homes in order to hold back the enemy. All over the rest of the world homes have been destroyed and broken, and families have been separated. The commerce of the world has been disrupted in almost every nation, our Nation being the most favored of all. Factories have been razed. Great electric plants have been destroyed. Finances have been exhausted, governments have toppled, and 400,000,000 people are faced with starvation.

We are living in a chaotic world, which is the inevitable aftermath of the great World War through which we have gone. The United States is trying to do what it can to restore the economy of the nations which were engaged in the war. We are trying to bring to the world everlasting peace.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. AIKFN. I yield.

Mr. PEPPPER. I am very much impressed with what the able Senator has said about the many fine men and women who lost their lives, their health, or their limbs in the public interest. So even if a few processors, producers, and manufacturers lose a little money by reason of our efforts to protect the public interest, their burden will not be comparable, will it, to the burden which our soldiers had to bear during the war in the public interest?

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, what the Senator has said is true. But today America is the only nation which can restore stable government to the other nations of the earth and can free their populations from the fear of starvation and hunger. When we find ourselves with a short supply of food because of the contributions we have made to the rest of the world, it is necessary that we use artificial means to keep prices here in the United States from getting completely out of hand.

But, Mr. President, shall the United States say to the rest of the world, "We will keep all our food and all our machines and all our technicians and equipment at home"? Shall we say to the rest of the world, "We will seize all the commerce of the world, because we now have the power to do it, and other nations do not have the power, either financially or in any other way?" Shall we say to them, "You must let your women and children go hungry. You must let millions of them starve or die of disease for want of care and medicines, and you can let the dictators rule in your countries"? because a starving country will invariably grasp at dictatorship if it is forced to do so. Shall we say to them, "You must do this while we in America will have the food and will be the best fed people in the world, and we will maintain the biggest and best military force the world ever saw, so that if you ever attempt to get any of our food, we will defeat you"?

No, Mr. President; I do not think that is the American way and I do not think that is what our people want us to do.

I think they want us to do all that it is possible to do to keep the hundreds of millions of people on this earth from starving. They want us to do all we possibly can do to restore sound and stable governments to the other nations of the world. They want us to do all that it is possible to do to restore commerce and industry to the world, and, above all else, they want us to do everything it is possible to do to build and maintain an organization for permanent peace. They want us to do this, even if it means that they will not have everything they want for themselves, even if it is necessary to have legal controls for a short time.

Mr. President, that is why this measure is before the Senate today. It is not here for us to discuss whether someone in business should make a profit of 16 percent or a profit of 18 percent. This measure is before the Senate because it is a means by which we hope to restore peace and prosperity to the world. We could have surpluses in the United States today if we wanted to have them. If we simply said, "We will not send our food and our materials to any other country in the world," we would not be talking about price control today. More likely we would be talking about support prices.

So this bill is before us. I do not think it is a good bill, but I think it is the best bill we are going to get, and I think it is infinitely better than no bill at all.

If the pending conference report is adopted, as I hope it will be, I realize that it will not prevent certain high prices from going higher. Undoubtedly, if the pending conference report is adopted, there will be more inflation than we have now; but if we adopt the conference report, although it is not all it should be, I think it will be sufficient to prevent complete collapse in this country because of high prices.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOEY in the chair). Does the Senator from Vermont yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. AIKEN. I shall conclude my remarks in just a moment.

Mr. MORSE. I wish to ask the Senator a question in regard to an agricultural matter.

Mr. AIKEN. Very well; I yield.

Mr. MORSE. I wish to say that the views of the Senator from Vermont on agricultural problems have a great deal of influence with the Senator from Oregon.

The following problem has been presented to me at a conference which I attended this afternoon, and I should like to have the views of the Senator from Vermont regarding it. It was pointed out to me that the recent interim report of the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry makes plain that one of the greatest defects of the OPA's pricing policies in regard to dairy products is the insistence of the OPA upon adjusting the producers' prices on a national average basis.

Mr. AIKEN. That is correct.

Mr. MORSE. The OPA does not consider, so I was told, cost increases in a particular area, but measures its adjustment solely by the national average increase in cash costs. Of course, as to the individual producer, that varies a great deal throughout the United States. His cost varies greatly, depending upon the particular section of the country in which he is located; and frequently as to an individual producer it is much higher than the national average.

This has worked a great hardship on dairymen in the Northwest, the South, the Northeast, and other areas where costs have risen higher than the national average. The OPA, by means of the national average cost device, is destroying the dairy industry in those areas by keeping prices to local producers below their costs.

In my section of the country, for example, the record is perfectly clear that a great many dairy herds have simply disappeared. The dairymen have gone out of business. At the same time, the OPA allows dealers to pay for milk coming from distant areas as much as $1.75 per hundredweight more than can be paid for local milk. For instance, I know of cases in Portland, Oreg., of milk being imported from Idaho and the purchasers of the milk being allowed to pay as much as $1.75 a hundredweight more for it than they could pay for the milk of local producers.

My question is this: In light of these facts, does subsection (f) of section 6, as contained in section 11 of the report, require the addition to the 1941 local price to producers of the amount of the average total cost increases in the particular locality since that time?

Mr. AIKEN. I have mislaid my copy of the report for the moment, but I say at once to the Senator from Oregon that I do not try to defend some of the actions of the OPA, and I think what he has said about that action and the orders in regard to the dairy industry is entirely true. In fact, sometimes the OPA has been so grievously wrong that there has been a very strong temptation to join those who say we should simply eliminate it.

But when I reach that point in my thinking, I also begin to think of the 30,000,000 people in this country who still do not really know how they are going to live through the next week, and I also think of conditions in the world and of the over-all situation, and then I come back to thinking that I must support the OPA.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

Mr. AIKEN. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. That particular subsection, as the Senator has said, provides that the maximum prices in the case of producers "shall be computed by adding such increase"—that is, the increase of cost—"to the average 1941 price for such agricultural commodity (with appropriate adjustments for grade, location, and seasonal differentials)."

It seems to me that with that clause in the bill and with the provision "as determined and announced by the Secretary of Agriculture," the Secretary of Agriculture would have authority to correct the situation which the Senator has described.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Ohio, because, as I am sure he knows, my purpose in raising this question is to lay a legislative basis for a judicial interpretation, if necessary; and in a moment I am going to put the question to the majority leader.

But in order to make certain that I correctly understand the response the Senator from Ohio has made, let me say that I understand it is his interpretation of this bill—and certainly he has had much to do with its drafting—that in the case suggested by me the wording of the act would permit the making of the adjustments which would alleviate the dairy problem I have mentioned.

Mr. TAFT. That is my opinion.

Mr. MORSE. Does the majority leader share that view?

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, I have only a few minutes more.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I must say that I was out of the Chamber at the time when the Senator made his remarks, and I do not clearly understand what he wishes to have an answer to.

Mr. MORSE. I shall wait until the Senator from Vermont concludes.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, I say to the Senator from Oregon that I myself am satisfied with the interpretation which has been made by the Senator from Ohio. Had he not made it as he did, I would have requested him to do so, because I knew he could make such an interpretation for the RECORD in much better language than I could.

Mr. President, in conclusion, I wish to say that if we are willing to tighten up our belts and dispense with some of the quantities of food which otherwise we would like to have, and if we are willing to do that for one more year, I think after 1 year we can dispense with price controls for good. Western Europe and north Africa and other parts of the world are producing more and are getting back into production. So I think if we continue these controls for one more year, thereafter we shall be able to get away from them. None of us likes these controls, and sometimes they become almost unbearable. I shall not say anything about the mistakes the OPA has made in the States, and how troublesome they have been to all of us, because everyone knows about that.

This bill is not perfect. It will not be perfect if it becomes law. But I think it is the best we can get, and I think we should do the best we can with the best we can get.

At a time such as this, I do not think there should be any talk by anyone about quitting his job merely because he cannot get the tools with which he would like to work. All during the recent war the farm people of America were not able to get the tools they wanted to have, but they worked their hardest with the tools they were able to get, and they produced crops in almost unbelievable amounts.

I have heard it said that the President may veto this bill if it goes to him in its present form. I think it would be most unwise for him to do so. If he vetoed the bill, I do not believe that he would be doing any good to himself, to his administration, or to his country. The bill is infinitely better than no bill at all, and I am satisfied that that is the only alternative before us.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. AIKEN. I yield.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Inasmuch as the bill contains a provision with reference to a decontrol board, and assuming that the board functions with any force whatsoever, under the intent of the law does the Senator not believe that the decontrols will increase from time to time within the year?

Mr. AIKEN. I believe so. I believe that the decontrols could start almost immediately, and I also believe that the success or failure of this law or any other law depends largely on how it is administered. I believe that if the bill is properly administered, control can be exercised over the goods and articles which need control, and that decontrol will take place as rapidly as possible with relation to those goods and products which should be decontrolled. In the meantime, if we have no controls at all there will be at least 30,000,000 people in this country, with no savings and with little income, who will be in almost immediate distress because of high prices. The separation pay of $200 or $300 which we gave to the veterans would mean almost nothing to them. Increases in prices would wipe out their money almost immediately. The men who would otherwise be building homes would have to postpone such building because they would not be able to afford to buy or build homes if there were no control over the prices to be charged for the homes, or the materials with which new homes are constructed. If there were no price-control law at all, Mr. President, there would be financial killings by speculators. I am not in favor of that. Another result might be political chaos. I know that there are those who favor, for one reason or another, political chaos and financial killings by speculators. I am not in favor of either, and I shall fight against them to the best of my ability. I am sure that most of the people of this country take the same position that I take with regard to that matter.

So, Mr. President, let us agree to the conference report. It is not what we want. I do not believe it is entirely satisfactory to any Member of the Senate. But it is the best we have, and we cannot take the risk of bringing about confusion which would inevitably follow the abrupt decontrol of goods and commodities.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I am sure that the Senator from Vermont and the junior Senator from Oregon are striving for the same objective.

Mr. AIKIN. I am sure that we want the same kind of a bill.

Mr. MORSE. I regret that I find myself in complete disagreement with the Senator in the approach which he is taking in meeting the parliamentary problem before the Senate.

Mr. President, I should like to ask the able majority leader a question in order to lay a legislative foundation for a subsequent judicial interpretation if necessary. Before the majority leader came into the Chamber I pointed out that one of the practices of the OPA, in establishing producers' costs in the dairy industry, had been to measure its adjustments on the basis of the national average cost, thereby resulting in a great deal of disparity and many injustices in certain sections of the country. Particularly in the Northeast, and in the Pacific Northwest dairy costs have been much higher than the national average, with the result that our dairymen have suffered greatly, and a great many dairy herds have been disposed of.

What I wish to know from the able majority leader is whether or not subsection (f) of section 11 will permit adding to the 1941 local price to producers the amount of the average total cost increases in the particular locality since that time.

To put the question in another form, I wish to know whether, under the subsection to which I have referred, it will be possible for OPA, if it succeeds in setting up any administration of this act, to take into account the disparities in cost of production as they exist in various sections of the country.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in order to answer the Senator's question consecutively, I wish to take time to read the section to which he has referred:

(f) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this section, in the case of any agricultural commodity, the base period shall be the calendar year 1941, and in lieu of computing the maximum prices required or permitted by this section by adding the increase in the weighted average of per unit costs to the base period prices of particular producers, such maximum prices shall be computed by adding such increase to the average 1941 price for such agricultural commodity.

Then, in parentheses, are the following words:

With appropriate adjustments for grade, location, and seasonal differentials.

The language then follows:

As determined and announced by the Secretary of Agriculture.

I have no doubt, and I believe it was the view of the members of the conference committee, that that language meant that differentials should be taken into consideration in respect to location. Otherwise there would have been no purpose in incorporating the word "location" in the language.

Therefore, Mr. President, my answer to the Senator's question is that the Secretary of Agriculture not only may but is practically directed to take those differentials into consideration in determining the items of cost.

Mr. MORSE. I thank the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, I do not know to what extent any view of mine might influence any judicial tribunal. But as one of the conferees who discussed the matter, and as a member of the committee which discussed it when the language was being drafted, I have no doubt that what I have stated was the intention of the conferees, and will, of course, be the intention of Congress if the law is enacted.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Kentucky for his statement, because I want to say that his views, as one who had charge of the bill on the floor, will have great influence in determining the congressional intent when the matter comes before the court.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, as one of the conferees I should like to endorse fully the interpretation just given by the senior Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, it seems to me that the chief objective of this country in preventing inflation, is to get production and more production. We need it now. One of the great problems with which we have been faced under the OPA regulations has been that of getting a price ceiling level which would encourage production. In the lumber industry, in the building industry generally, and in many other fields of activity we were not able to obtain production because there was a lack of a realistic price ceiling.

At the same time, Mr. President, I believe that all of us recognize a sense of responsibility, because this is one of the most important measures which have come before the Senate during the post-war period.

The bill, as has been pointed out already, is certainly not a perfect piece of legislation. Yet, I doubt very much whether legislation which comes out of this or any other legislative body is perfect, or at least would seem to be so to partisans on one side or the other.

Mr. President, I believe that it is urgently necessary that next Sunday should not come with no price control whatever. Not very long ago my able colleague from Delaware [Mr. TUNNELL] whom I see sitting across the aisle, and I were members of a subcommittee which made a 30,000-mile trip around the world, investigating the disposal of Army and Navy surplus property. In Asia and in Europe we had the opportunity to see some of the devastating effects of inflation and what it does to a Nation's economy and to its people.

I happen to have before me a little diary which I kept on that trip. During the time the Senator from Delaware and I were in Athens, Greece, we were furnished with certain figures. I believe that I should read them into the RECORD now because they show something which every person dealing with this subject must keep in mind.

First of all, the drachma rate of exchange amounted to 150 to the dollar in the prewar period.

The official rate at the time we were in Athens amounted to 500 to the dollar.

The semiofficial rate for payments to British troops and to UNRRA amounted to 3,000 to the dollar, and the black market rate was about 6,000 to the dollar.

What is even more important and more illuminating is the fact that during the war period Greece had, as we had in this country, a system of controls. Even under those controls food had risen 10 times over the prewar period, and wages had risen only six times over the prewar period.

A combination of businessmen in Greece—and, strange to say, the left-wing organizations in Greece—had gotten together and had forced the taking off of controls in that unhappy country. What resulted? Food hit figures 92 times the prewar figures, while wages went up only from 30 to 50 times the prewar figures. So the wage earner and the pensioner, was caught in the squeeze, prices rising far more rapidly than did income.

Mr. President, this country has much, and it has much to lose. It seems to me that at this time in our country's history we need, more than ever before, certainly equally as much as in the period during the war, the spirit of cooperation in order to meet this problem. The loss of production from strikes in the automotive, steel, and coal and kindred industries, has done more to place us in a critical situation, so far as inflation is concerned, than have the modifications which have been made in the pending bill.

It is an old American pastime to try to find a whipping boy or goat for some of our problems. I do not believe Mr. Chester Bowles or Mr. Paul Porter should be blamed for what has happened in the field of OPA regulations and their administration. In the dealings I have had with these two gentlemen I have found them to be conscientious public servants. With many of their policies I have disagreed, but that certainly does not mean that they are interested any less in the preservation of the American system. I feel certain that, according to their lights, they are just as much interested in maintaining the American system as is any man sitting on the floor of the Senate today.

However, it seems to me, Mr. President, that the hope of holding the line, in the sense that phrase has been sometimes used, was scuttled at the time the administration abandoned the wage control policies and abandoned rationing. I think at that time we lost all possibility of holding the line in the real sense of the word.

Recently the New York Times contained a very able editorial dealing with this situation. One problem with which we have been faced has been the squirrel-cage economics that some people seem to deal with these days. They entertain the belief that it is possible to increase costs and increase wages, and that it will not be necessary to increase prices. Of course, that is absurd.

This is what the New York Times had to say on Thursday, June 27. The editorial is a brief one, and I think it is quite apropos that it should be read into the RECORD at this time:

WAGE-PRICE RECORD

The myth that large wage increases could be granted without the need for price increases has been completely exploded by the events in the first half of 1946. The most recent evidence of the inadequacy of this theory is found in the 91-cents-a-ton increase in the ceiling price of anthracite coal, authorized to compensate producers for the wage increases recently granted. The record is replete with similar experiences in other industries:

Steel: A wage increase of 18½ cents an hour was accompanied by a price rise of $5 per ton, an amount equivalent to the entire wage increase.

Bituminous coal: An increase of 18½ cents an hour plus extras made necessary a rise of 40½ cents a ton in the price.

Meat: An increase of 16 cents an hour was accompanied by price increases equivalent to more than two-thirds of that amount.

Railroads: An increase of 16 cents an hour, later made 18½ cents an hour, led to the recently approved 3- to 6-percent rise in freight rates.

Automobiles: An 18½-cents-an-hour increase made necessary an increase of $16 to $60 a car for General Motors. In addition, a further rise of 5 percent has been permitted in order to compensate for the higher costs of steel and other parts which in turn had been caused by higher wages.

These instances are typical. Building materials, work clothing, textiles, and many other products could be added to the list. The full impact of these wage increases has not yet been felt. This is particularly true concerning the price increases permitted for coal, steel, and freight rates. Clearly, workers cannot benefit from wage increases which necessitate price increases and hence limit the rise in real earnings. The only fundamental basis for an expansion in real income is found in increased productivity. When wage increases are sharply in excess of those that can be paid out of production, the inevitable result will be higher prices.

Mr. President, I merely wish to say, in conclusion, that it seems to me that under the parliamentary situation with which we are faced, we have a choice of either passing the bill we are considering or ending up with no bill at all on Sunday evening. We have a clear duty and obligation to adopt the conference report.

It is true, as I pointed out before, that the legislation will not please all elements of our economic community. I believe it is the best legislation that can be achieved at this time. If, perchance, the Senate should not adopt the report, if new legislation could not be passed by Sunday night, and the country were left without any benefit of controls whatever, I believe a great multitude of our people would be very seriously hurt in the months ahead.

Many veterans have returned and are trying to get started in jobs or in business. There are many millions of people who are dependent upon fixed incomes, upon pensions, upon insurance policies. All of these have a vital stake in what we do here today.

Finally, Mr. President, I believe that there is an even greater reason for preserving the economic stability of America. I believe it is only by preserving a sound national economy and a solvent Federal Government that we can perform our full duty in helping to maintain the peace of the world.

Mr. TUNNELL. Mr. President, I had not intended to say anything on the conference report, but I think perhaps I should speak for a few minutes, and I promise not to take much of the time of the Senate.

I am very much disappointed in the conference report, as I suppose every other Senator is. I do not suppose it suits the conferees, so far as that goes. But in my particular State, and I dare say it is probably true in others, there is very great disappointment because of the poultry, meat, and dairy-products provision.

In Delaware we have been very hard hit by the OPA rulings as to poultry. I have tried my best, as have others, to secure relief. I remember the Senator from Georgia and I were together before representatives of the OPA with reference to a ruling on poultry. However, we received very little satisfaction as to what might be expected with reference to that particular item. I believe we were told that perhaps in August there would be an abundance of poultry anyway, and that then the ceiling would be raised, which does not help us at all. The poultry industry amounts to well up toward $100,000,000 a year in the area from which I come, and that of course strikes at the very root of the economy of so many of our people that they are disappointed.

What makes the situation very difficult for us is the way in which the problem now appears. We cannot vote for what we would like to vote for, and we cannot vote against what we would like to oppose. I suppose every Senator is receiving telegrams—I know I am—from people asking that we work for particular items, that we have this put in or that taken out, and we cannot do it. So we are faced with the problem, as I see it, of either taking the conference report or leaving it.

The Senator from California has told the Senate of some instances of inflation which we observed on our trip. I do not know what the Chinese dollar was worth in American money before the war. I do know that I picked out the cheapest breakfast in Shanghai that I could get, and it cast $240 in Chinese money. In France we were told that we could get a perfectly good 50-cent meal for $17.50. Wherever we went we found that prices had gone out of sight.

Mr. President, I am afraid of such a situation coming about in America, and I am apprehensive that it may result if we let go of all controls. There are those who say we should do away with all price controls. I do not know whether they take that position because they have a hatred of the agencies that have handled price control. I do not know whether they are wrong, or whether I am wrong. I think those in control of prices have had a hard task to perform, and that they have done a great work. I say that notwithstanding the fact that my particular section of the country has been hit about as hard as any other section of the United States by the rulings of OPA. I do not think the OPA made the rulings for the purpose of doing anyone an injury. I think, as a whole, that organization has done a great work for the American people. I do not have any feeling of antagonism toward either Mr. Bowles or Mr. Porter. I have great respect for both of them. If OPA is continued, I hope they will see the situation as it exists in the country today and will realize that there must be a relaxation of controls when supply overtakes demand.

In the last few months 365,000,000 pounds of poultry were in cold storage. That was a time when there should have been a relaxation of control. So far as I am able to judge, there is absolutely no excuse for an attempt to continue price controls when supply reaches, as it did in the case of poultry, a point where it is much higher than the demand. Whenever there can be a relaxation of controls I think it should be made gradually. I think the conferees have tried to bring about a possibility of gradual relaxation. Whether it will work out in practice I do not know. I can only say that so far as poultry is concerned in my section of the country considerable damage has been done. Many millions of pounds of poultry have been driven from the market, and I do not think there can be a return to a normal condition in any reasonable time. I hope those in control will see to it that this situation is not benefiting anyone. I believe the members of the conference committees had the right idea when they provided for a gradual relaxation of controls. If those in control of OPA will do what the conferees had in mind they should do, I believe benefits will result to the people.

Mr. President, I, for one, want no part of the responsibility for bringing about such conditions with respect to rising prices as I have attempted to describe. I will say, in addition to what was stated by the Senator from California, that while we were in Greece 3,500 drachma would buy one American dollar. The price was stabilized after that at 5,500 drachma to the dollar. We saw the state of inflation in that country where there was a scarcity of food. There was a scarcity, of course, of everything else, as Greece had been an invaded country, but food was what everyone had to buy. So the price of food has gone out of sight. Inflation was so great that it was impossible for men to support their families with the work of their hands. Therefore UNRRA had to support about 75 percent of the people of Greece at the time we were there. If I am wrong, and if the Senator from California has the exact figures, I wish he would correct me. As I remember, however, approximately 75 percent of the people of Greece were supported by UNRRA at that time. Shortage of crops, shortage of production, of manufactures, of everything, had led to the bidding up the price of everything the people needed, until the prices had risen so high that it was impossible for anyone by his hands to make sufficient money to support his family.

Mr. President, that is a condition which I fear in America. If such a condition should come upon us it would not only wipe out the savings of millions of people but it would put millions of others on some kind of an UNRRA, some kind of a charitable or philanthropic organization.

We are told that what we want and need is production. That is true; we do want and need production. I do not know whether adoption of this measure will increase production. I am of the opinion that in our impatience at conditions resulting from the war, we are inclined to abuse or criticize our public officials, and not take into consideration the fact that we have been in a long hard war, and that we are now paying a part of the penalty of such a war.

Mr. President, in spite of the fact that many of our people would like to have OPA wiped out, and take a chance on inflation, or bet on there being no inflation, so far as I am concerned—and I am speaking only my own opinion—I do not think I can afford to take any part of the responsibility for bringing on such conditions in America as the Senator from California and I found to exist in different parts of the world. Therefore, Mr. President, whether it be right or wrong, I have decided to vote for the report on the theory that it is the best plan we now have before us. We cannot vote for what we want. We cannot vote against what we do not want. We can only vote for or against what is before us. Therefore I shall vote for the report.

Mr. HUFFMAN. Mr. President, it is not my purpose to speak at length on this bill, but I do wish to make it perfectly clear that I do not consider the bill providing for the extension of the Emergency Price Control Act and the Stabilization Act as it comes to the Senate from conference, and upon which we are about to vote, the kind of a bill that the Senate should pass. While I fear that many features of the conference report are unworkable and cannot be successfully administered, still, considering the fact that the Price Control Act would completely expire at midnight on June 30, I am going to vote for the conference report. It is my considered conclusion that this course is far better than to take a chance on all controls collapsing suddenly at midnight on Sunday night.

Mr. President, the question of continuing price controls and the gradual lessening of them, as I see it, is indeed important to the economy of our country. Those who would remove controls entirely say that they are willing to take a chance and that they feel that prices, through the law of supply and demand, will soon seek their level and that we will not have dangerous inflation.

On the other hand, those who oppose such removal of price controls and favor the gradual lessening of them, a tapering off of them, and who want some price control retained, say that they will not take a chance on removing them or swiftly relaxing them as it might place us in a position of having run-away inflation.

So it is between these two forces that we have contention and disagreement, not only here in the Senate, but throughout the country. Adoption of the report provides the only hope possible for continued control at this time, unless the President should veto the measure, and it should be returned in time for Congress to reconsider it or take action otherwise on it before the expiration date. That might take place. However, I am not willing to take a chance on the country being left without some controls. For that reason I will vote to support the conference report.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. President, I have not changed by mind about how I shall vote on the conference report. I know that I shall not disappoint Senators when I say that I am not going to make a further speech. However, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks numerous telegrams which I have received concerning the OPA situation. As my friend from Texas [Mr. O'DANIEL] says, they constitute The Voice of the People.

There being no objection, the telegrams were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CINCINNATI, OHIO, June 27, 1946.
Hon. E. H. MOORE,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

We are wholesale carload distributors of lumber—have been for over 25 years. Under OPA regulations, we have been directly discriminated against and put out of business. Senate-House conference committee report on OPA of no benefit to ourselves or other direct mill shipping lumber. Wholesalers would appreciate your rejecting the report and instruct committee to renew efforts for revision of bill more in line with that passed by the Senate. Will appreciate this consideration as otherwise black market will continue grow bigger and bigger.

Mr. O'DANIEL. Mr. President, I had intended to make a speech against the conference report. I intended to do so yesterday. I had some notes prepared, but I started to read telegrams expressing the voice of the people, and I read so many of them that we ran short of time. We recessed a little after midnight last night. The speech which I have prepared, and did not have an opportunity to make yesterday, is so long that time would not permit me to make it now under the limitation of debate. I have conferred with our majority leader. I have told him that in order to expedite consideration of the conference report I would dispense with making my speech at this time if he thought it would be possible for me to obtain unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the telegrams which I did not have an opportunity to read on the floor of the Senate yesterday. It seems that the reading of those telegrams has caused a change of sentiment in some quarters. A rumor is now circulating to the effect that the President may veto the bill, which leads me to believe that he has looked at the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and has read what I said last night. If that happens, it will be simply another way of accomplishing what I wished to accomplish, because I wish to see the OPA eliminated, abolished, and done away with. I hope he will veto it, but I do not believe he will.

While reference has been made in some quarters to the effect that I have been engaged in a filibuster, the RECORD will disclose that there has been no filibuster. I have simply read into the RECORD telegrams from citizens of this Nation expressing their views about OPA and making some comments of my own on the conference report designed to extend the life of OPA. These telegrams can truly be considered as "the voice of the people."

There being no objection, the telegrams were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 28, 1946.

Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Try your best to keep talking until the OPA expires Sunday night. Abraham Lincoln freed the Negro slaves. Help us to free ourselves from the d—— blood-sucking leeches in Washington who want to artificially control our lives.

HOMER N. PANKEY.

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:

Sir, I think your actions on the OPA legislation are outrageous and a mockery to our system of government. Please do not go through with your intended filibuster.

HAROLD KLARMAN.

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

As a Texas lawyer with a lawyer father and family in Texas, I oppose your OPA stand and urge you to support OPA.

GERALD WEATHERLY.

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 28, 1946.
Hon. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

If your filibuster kills OPA the public will not forget O'DANIEL when they see their savings vanish in the consequent inflation.

PITTSBURGH, PA., June 28, 1946.
W. LEE SAPPY O'DANIEL,
United States Congress,
Washington, D. C.:

The eyes of Texas are upon you as well as 47 other foreign States. If you can secure an interpreter I would suggest you read Constitution and the American Bill of Rights during your filibuster as you indicate you need help. Please reply.

J. S. ANTONY ADAM YANKEE.

MIAMI, FLA., June 28, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

To a grand Governor from Texas we of the State of Florida are rooting for you. Don't stop talking.

Mrs. DAVID GEORGE.

CRESSON, TEX., June 28, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,

RUSK TEX., June 28, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL, OF TEXAS,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

You are performing the greatest public service of your career. Keep talking. You can expect bureaucrat parasite employees, their friends, and relatives to try to keep jobs, but unorganized and until yesterday unrepresented Americans will back you.

J. PERRIN WILLIS.

HOUSTON, TEX., June 28, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Thank God that not all of the Senate Members are selfish little men. That silly filibuster of yours in this humble man's opinion should make the free-enterprisers mighty happy.

E. J. STIDSTON.

ENID, OKLA., June 28, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., June 28, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
United States Senate:
For over 2 years my wife and I have been working practically day and night, working as much as 18 to 20 hours a day, in an effort to establish ourselves in an honest, reputable business. Our net returns have been but fair and our worries many, but we have kept doggedly to our work in the hope of someday having a well-established business. We have no desire to work as hard as we do and would like to limit ourselves to a 10-hour day, but this would mean hiring additional employees and would result in very little, if any, profit for our efforts, so to make some profit on the venture, we are forced to work these many hours each day. A little over 3 months ago the OPA director here ordered price ceilings for us that were asinine for this type of operation and evidently a complete lack of knowledge as to this type of business, and demonstrated a decided lack of even good business judgment. Were we to invoke the prices set forth, we would suffer a gross loss on sales. That is a loss on just the difference between income from sales and cost of sales and is before operating expenses, administered expenses, etc. Were we to adopt those prices, we would be in a position of "hot dog" vendor who bought his "hot dogs" for a dime and sold them for a nickel. He'd have a tremendous business and maybe have a lot of fun. But he wouldn't last very long. Similarly, we would last just about 2 weeks, at which time we would have been wiped out. When this was pointed out to the OPA, we were allowed some relief, in that the new prices would have wiped us out in about a month instead of in 2 weeks. The unfair price was again brought to the attention of the OPA and a new set of prices were given us. All of this, mind you, by pure guesswork and without business basis or justification. This final price ceiling is still silly for this type of operation, and we are now forced to operate in violation of the OPA and will continue to do so in an effort to scrape together by our combined 135 hours a week of hard labor, just the means of a fair living and the building of a small, honest business. Senator O'DANIEL, is this too much to ask? Isn't this the American way of life or has that way changed? Thanks a lot for starting your talk of enlightenment, for which you shall long be remembered and ever be highly regarded. We do hope and pray that you will continue your talk through Sunday midnight and a few hours beyond, just to play safe. You may be sure that every fair-minded American is with you in your fight to restore the American way of life to the American people. Please see the fight through to a finish. Thanks.
H. N. DIXON.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., June 28, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
United States Senate Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Texas is the largest State in the Union but Mr. O'DANIEL is not nearly as big as Texas or as large as the United States of America. The Senator pro tempore cannot and must not slaughter the Office of Price Administration, causing an unparalleled rise in food costs to the little people. Why cannot the Senator see that the small people need a control that his eminence is opposed to.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
DEAR SENATOR: Congratulations on your stand. We beg you to save us from the OPA. Stay on the people's side. Freedom from fear. There is more fear in this country now than ever in the history of the United States. Those in favor of OPA are in favor of higher prices. Do away with OPA, and competition will lower prices. The strikes caused by the unions and OPA control is causing a depression right now. Business is off. Do away with OPA and let merchandise come through. The war is over. OPA was a war measure. Surely they don't want to keep OPA until the next war. Do all you can to save us now. If OPA goes on, a depression will surely follow.

Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Floor, Capitol,
Washington, D. C.:
The American people have already liquidated OPA, only Chester Bowles and Members of Congress have not yet discovered the fact. We are at the cross roads. Do you gentlemen have the courage to vote to return us to free markets, a free economy with enough meat, butter, fats, clothing, for our people, and enough fuel oil for heat this winter or will you continue to vote the communicrats the power to ruin and destroy our country? The farmers, the women, the shopkeepers, the small business people don't want OPA. Can't you men realize that? Keep up the fight, Mr. O'DANIEL. Texans never have the reputation of being quitters. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senator,
Washington, D. C.:
You did your part trying to save country from Office of Price Administration un-American domination. Hope you keep on fighting for Americanism. OPA in present form gives New Deal Communist pay rollers opportunity to continue stifling production, life of Nation, and wresting long-established enterprises from legitimate owners and turning them over to thieving Communists and fellow travelers and profiting through operation of foreign-born black marketeers, and that, I believe, is the main thing OPA'ers wanted. Keep on fighting, for America is awakening and will some day throw the rascals out.

SIR: I hope that this message reaches you before you give out; and I might add we in Texas, after many, many years, are glad for a humble flour salesman with intestinal fortitude to fight another bureau. You will probably lose, but that shall not change our affection for you, because the writer is raising a family of one 17-year-old son, twin daughters, 15, and another cotton-top 10-year-old boy, and also the writer does not want, after educating these people, for them to become a part of a bureau set-up by our dear Government nor a potato-weighing, tire-inflating cog in any chain store or other chain who buys from the War Assets Administration on a 30-day credit and sells the merchandise, reinvests the money again, buys, reinvests the money from our dear Government, while the poor veteran must pay cash in advance before he gets the merchandise. You will probably be called another Huey P. Long, but there is one consolation: you have even the late President turned to Texas and allowed his picture to appear on a 25-foot billboard shaking the hand of a big dear friend to break the flour salesman out with all due respect to our past commander, God rest his soul. Our bureaucratic friend lost the race and the poor little flour salesman wound up in Washington. You don't know me; I don't know you. God bless your heart if you can kill one bureau. Like Jack the Giant Killer, they may hate you, but Texas loves you and respects you and elects you. Fight as long as you can, and we may add that if you want talking time, try to name the bureaus that have been set up by our puppet Government, plus Phillip Murray, plus John L. Lewis, and you can talk for 3 years by just naming the bureaus that have been set up for little Murph. You might add in your talk, since our dear bureaucrat Government hasn't thought of it, why they can't think of a bureau to establish a one-room apartment for GI Joe and the other fellows that can't find a place to stay for wife and kiddies. We stop now not to embarrass you, not to pay you homage, but to raise our kids in our American public schools to where they will not have to weigh potatoes, wipe a windshield, scrub a bathroom, or join the other bureaus or chain organizations that are gradually taking charge of our God-loving country.

PORTLAND, OREG., June 28, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

I am the president of Braun, Ray Bros. & Finley, wholesale lumbermen in Omaha, Nebr., and I am leaving tonight by plane for home thoroughly disheartened and disgusted with the situation in the producing district. There is no competition. Why should there be? The OPA price is the same to everyone and with the multitude of Government regulations there is no incentive for anyone to operate. Unquestionably the most healthy and most stimulating thing that could happen to American industry would be the elimination of the OPA. Western papers today carried a smear campaign against the lumber industry by the OPA officials and I naturally wonder why if they know these things about lumber companies they did not prosecute them long ago. Why wait until deadline day to create excitement that might result in a public demand for OPA's continuance? Let us hope this will be the final smear campaign and that with competition restored through the elimination of this Government monstrosity we may all go ahead, manufacture, distribute, and use the lumber and get somewhere. I sincerely hope that you carry out your intentions of filibustering and wish you lots of luck. If you doubt whether I know my business ask Senator HUGH BUTLER.

VICTORIA, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
We join with other interests in this area in urging you to use your influence with OPA for permission to ship western sugars into this area. The situation here is alarming and will get progressively worse unless we can obtain some western beet to relieve situation.
GROCE WEARDEN CO., INC.

OLNEY, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D.C.:
Congratulations on your stand on OPA. American business is for you.
W. W. PRICE.

TYLER, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Chamber,
Washington, D. C.:
Being in the poultry, egg, feed, hatchery business, I come in contact with most farmers in this area. OPA has created ill will among farmers and food producers. I can definitely see as long as OPA is in force farmers will only produce what they have to. This means shortages. You cannot fight inflation with low production. Low production with OPA and God's law of supplying demand means black markets. Black markets are handled by racketeers. Racketeers with big incomes are dangerous. Choose higher price through black market or legitimate channels. Through black market it will get worse. Through legitimate channels it will encourage production, competition, and fair prices.

HOUSTON, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
There is no question that the OPA is fostering the black market and other underhanded practices. It is actually causing inflation by retarding normal production. Anything that you and your friends in the Senate can do by filibuster or otherwise to kill this totally un-American agency will be appreciated by us and by thinking people everywhere.

SAM C. SUTTON.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Surely there are some who can and will help you in your stand against continuation of the OPA. Industry must be freed of the OPA's stranglehold and prices must be set by the law of supply and demand. The end of the OPA will bring simultaneously the end of the black market. Goods of all kinds will come out of hiding. Goods will cease to be moved from your back yard to ours and vice versa to create delusions of shortage. And most important, goods will cease to be hoarded by a Mr. or Mrs. America who now grossly overbuy and overpay because they live in constant fear that our Government will take something more away from them next week and because it is a thrill to have what the Jones are still trying to get. Thereby a large new 44.22 percent of our so-called short items will cease to be short almost immediately. Equipped as we are to produce, production will exceed demand very soon. The result will be low prices, abundant supply, and a drastic cut in the present great waste of material, especially food which is now spoiling due to holding over buying, etc. Can it be possible that we have only you in Washington who can see all this and have the courage to bring it to a fight? There are any number of American citizens like ourselves who could talk for days on just the OPA and its crippling effects on the whole world. Please make them all see the harm in OPA control, make their see the futility of OPA, make them understand you must succeed in your present endeavor. And you, Senator O'DANIEL, please accept our sincere thanks.

Have just finished reading preamble to abominable OPA legislation as reported in conference report. It reminds me of an alleged scientific analysis of the Aurora Borealis which might be offered as clarifying amendment as follows: When the molofigiastical temperature of the horizon becomes such as to coloracize the impruient indentations of the hemispheric anology thus affected, a rapid change takes place in the thorambumpter of the borax kerbustus, and the aquaverusale which can only be seen when it is visible. DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
It is encouraging to know that we have one Senator from Texas who feels free to speak for what he thinks is right. We are a small manufacturing concern employing about 100 people. We believe you are 100 percent correct in your effort to eliminate OPA. We sincerely believe that (1) OPA is the creator of black market; (2) OPA is driving all merchandise from regular channels of distribution; (3) our economy will adjust itself quicker and better under competitive conditions than it will by governmental regulation and interference. I would rather have the right to say I can't afford it than to have to say "Can you slip me a steak, Bud, for $4?" For the next time I should go back it would be six bucks, and so on. Wherein, then, is OPA with its huge appropriations for personnel and subsidies saving the taxpayer and consumer anything? We hope sincerely that you may be able to wage a victorious campaign against the adoption of the extension of this bill.
C. C. BINGHAM.

MIDLAND, TEX., June 27, 1946.

Senator O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
The OPA necessitated by war and unnecessary in peace in the interest of preservation of fourth-grade arithmetic should be entirely or almost so abolished. A Federal bureau that refers to bronze mines and prohibits the slaughter of female steers and operates on the theory that you are better off not to get a steak for a dollar than you are to get one for $1.50 has in my opinion overtried the patience of Johnny Q. Public. I hope you succeed in the fine fundamental endeavor you have undertaken.

Washington, D. C.:
The dairy farmers of America are back of you in your efforts to purge the Nation of OPA. They are mindful of the fact that the Senate attempted in its bill to remove price controls on dairy products. Because of the fact that the conferees struck from the bill these provisions for dairy decontrol, there now appears no other way than the course you have chosen to free our industry from the controls which are drying up dairy supplies and causing countless producers to drastically liquidate their herds.

DALLAS, TEX., June 28, 1946.
SENATORS OF UNITED STATES, VOTING ON OPA EXTENSION,
Care of Senator W. Lee O'Daniel,
Washington, D. C.:
Price stabilization as war emergency is a patriotic sacrifice and not worse than the slaughtering of our boys by our common enemy. Peacetime price stabilization by dictatorship is too costly to be practical for enforcement. Too many diversified methods of production make it impossible for one school of thought to apply one particularly selected method of application.

Peacetime OPA can only clog up our wheels of production to such an extent that our people must go naked and starve to death. By all means let the OPA (a wartime black-market experiment) die a natural death on June 30, 1946, and let America once more build up its economy on individual ambition and constructive initiative. Kill the OPA.

"Whereas in our opinion the OPA has created distrust and a hardship on the American farmer as shown on the late market reports and the working people of this country;

"Whereas sooner or later we will have to depend upon supply and demand to furnish food and fiber for our Nation; and

"Whereas in order to obtain a smooth leveling-off period for our Nation we believe that cost of production should be substituted for farm commodities in place of OPA price ceiling: Therefore be it

"Resolved, That members of the Michigan Farmers Guild are asking the Congress of the United States to discontinue OPA in any and all forms."

May the hosts of this great country give him a fitting funeral. May a spray of skunk cabbage adorn his bier, representative of his rotten methods. May the plot surrounding his grave be strewn with cockleburrs, puncture vine, and Canada thistle, that the ghost of the OPA may direct its movements with carefulness and concern. May a hedge of thorns and poison ivy cover the cemetery gate, a significant warning to anyone who may be tempted to extol the virtues of this giant or worship at his tomb. May the happy, trustworthy evergreens and the lilies of the valley grow miles away, that their purity and sanctity may not be contaminated by the stench of the burial place of the OPA, the dead representative of disloyalty, greed, deception, business bribery, special privilege, and hunger.

Home builders and realtors are for you and your fight against OPA 100 percent. Bowles has made black marketeers and bootleggers or failures out of building industries and subsidiaries. If you can kill OPA, you will have accomplished one of the greatest achievements in American history. Some examples of sabotage by Chester Bowles and his henchmen are as follows:

Veterans' housing is costing more than 50 percent above 1 year ago because materials cannot be produced profitably at OPA ceiling prices, therefore bootleggers are handling practically all materials for large operations. The veterans pay the bill. Of course this is a part of the Bowles-Wyatt program to pass the W-E-T bill and make public housing a permanent over-all dictatorship in the building industry. Plumbing supplies are selling for about double OPA ceiling price. Oak floorings the same. Asbestos materials are not available. Many industries are refusing to operate at a loss or to become outlaws. Their only alternative being to shut their plants down. More power to you.

Believe your position on OPA is in the interest of our Nation's welfare. Hope you can stand and fight it out.

WILLIAM D. MCBEE.

SEATTLE, WASH., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

Keep up the good work. My opinion is if you are successful in talking the OPA out of existence you will be doing the United States a fine service.

E. C. STONE,
Stimson Mill Co.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Ex-GI in business will be put out if OPA is retained. Keep up the fight.

ALEX WHITE,
Used Car Dealer.

PHOENIX, ARIZ., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senator from Texas,
Washington, D. C.:

By killing OPA you will save America and keep it honest and block Stalin's racket. Keep up the good work.

E. A. KLUSMEYER.

MILTON, PA., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:

Keep on. Talk OPA to death.

FRANK M. REBER.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

We admire you as you give the political bureaucrats heck.

R. D. MOREAU.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senator from Texas,
Washington, D. C.:

I heartily support your filibustering the OPA out of existence.

R. A. BURNETT.

BEAVER FALLS, PA., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Glad to know we have a real American Senator. Backing you 100 percent.
Mr. and Mrs. E. L. KOCH.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL:
Heartily approve your stand against OPA.
L. W. BALDING,
Hotel Brighton.

PITTSBURGH, PA., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL:
Every American should appreciate your efforts to end OPA before Bowles completely stabilizes the black market.
J. P. FLIPPEN.

WHITTIER, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Hon. Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:
Building industry confused and thwarted by inequitable and unsound economical directives of OPA. Vast numbers here convinced abolishment of OPA essential to progress of our country. May Divine guidance and strength be yours in the crucial hour.
CORIN SWAIN.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Liquidate the OPA. Do it now.
LES CROUCH.
GEORGE B. SANDERSON.

MOUNTAIN HOME, IDAHO, June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations for your fighting spirit. Cut red tape that is strangling livestock industry and business. Supply-demand competition will rebuild the Nation.
G. ANDREWS.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Care Senate Chamber,

"Pappy" hold on. Hold on. The welfare of our Nation is at stake. Hold on. May God give you strength.
PAUL D. YODER.

ROCK HILL, S. C., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Care Senate Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Representing 2,000 South Carolina farmers. We heartily endorse your stand against OPA and hope you hold out through Sunday.
FARMERS LEAGUE,
JOHN HINSON.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate Chamber,
Washington, D. C.:
Heartily commend your patriotic action in filibuster against OPA Gestapo.
M. A. REINER,
ARTHUR WALKER.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL, of Texas:
Time to live under American form of government; talk OPA to death.
CLARK SHERMAN,
Depauville, N. Y.

BAKERSFIELD, CALIF., June 72, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:
More power to you; please stage filibuster or anything else necessary to defeat this un-American OPA before we become bankrupt or land in an insane asylum.
Mrs. HAZEL K. DUNN.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senator from Texas,
Washington, D. C.:
We heartily support your filibustering the OPA out of existence.

Your sentiments are right as rain. The world will remember and thank you for the defeat of OPA and all that it stands for. Get in there and fight.
ART KELLY.

JACKSONVILLE, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Please register our strong opposition against the OPA. We recommend it be destroyed. We are all for you. Lots of luck.
B. A. King, E. E. Starkey, B. O. King, Homer Ragsdale, P. J. Pavletich, A. E. Lowe, Geo. Trezise, L. B. Kern, H. H. Holcomb, Sampson Bros. Grocery, A. J. Brazil Star Grocery and Market.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Capitol, Washington, D. C.
DEAR SENATOR: Hope you will go on fighting the OPA, as I believe it definitely is trying to put people out of business. Am a veteran of World War II, having just purchased my own business and am completely out if OPA continues their stupid restrictions in the restaurant lines. Hope you will be successful in your great fight.
PAUL BORCHERT.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Earnestly, I am convinced that we have to depend upon you alone to reestablish government by the people and for the people. Please have courage and faith in your gallant fight.
W. R. MCBEE.

ALICE, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:
We are for you 100 percent if you filibuster the OPA extension bill.
LESLIE COSTLEY, ROBERT M. FRANKS, J. H. DUNN, G. DUDLEY FITZSIMMONS, J. W. PORTER, J. A. GARCIA, N. G. NORTON.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, June 27, 1946.
Hon. Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Your intention to filibuster OPA deserves the support of every true-blooded American. The Bowle weevil has already done great damage to American industry. Bowles' high pressure advertising salesmanship has scared a lot of people, but a vast number of Americans want OPA liquidated. You can do a great national service to help kill it. It would be like releasing an avalanche of water on arid lands.
N. T. SHEPHERD CHAIR CO.
SALT LAKE CITY AND CHICAGO.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Hold the line. Kill that OPA.
BARNES ROOT BEER,
MR. BARNES.

MIDLAND, TEX., June 27, 1946.
W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senator, Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations on most patriotic and American gesture. Give them h——. We are behind you 100 percent.
WILLIS WHITE MOTOR CO.,
ROBERT K. WHITE.

HOUSTON, TEX., June 27, 1946.
W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
I am, as you seem to be, opposed to use of filibuster except in extreme cases. However, it is vitally important that this country return to free constitutional government. I urge that you use all honorable means to terminate OPA and all other Executive bureaus.
OTIS MEREDITY.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations on your stand; everybody here is for you. Major stronghold of OPA is on rent ceiling; think this should be sustained in modified form. Suggest, if possible, transfer of rent regulations to local boards of respective states would meet with hearty approval both landlords and tenants.
JOHN M. DAWSON.

SAN ANGELO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D .C.:
Stay in there and pitch against OPA. We are with you.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Chamber,
Washington, D. C.:
DEAR SIR: Am backing you 100 percent in fight against OPA, as I believe it to be unfair and un-American.
MRS. ZELDA TRACY.

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Do away with OPA and other un-American agencies.
W. J. HEWITT.

AUSTIN, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.
DEAR FRIEND: I have seven houses under construction now. They are needed badly by the owners of which I can't finish at this time due to the OPA. Do what you can to let the OPA die a natural death. We are backing you sincerely.
H. J. WIMBERLY.

OLNEY, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Congratulate your stand of you and associates. Can defeat OPA as it now operates you will be doing our country and all true Americans great service. The quota system especially vicious and detrimental to livestock industry and consumers. It should be eliminated immediately in livestock industry and many others.
ART L. WAGONER.

HOUSTON, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
The Senate, Washington, D. C.:
I am unqualifiedly opposed to executive bureaus. Therefore, do all you can to abolish the OPA.
Miss W. A. PETTIT.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Your stand regard the OPA bill is greatly appreciated and is the best news we have heard in a long time. This is to show our appreciation and we are behind you 100 percent.
MIMMO MOTOR CO.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations on your able leadership and best wishes for complete success and victory in your current battle which will well serve friends throughout the Nation. Our Texas people are proud of you.
GEORGE F. ROZELLE.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
As an ex-GI trying to stay in business I will be forced out if OPA is continued in its present form. Let 'em have it, Senator. We're for you.
JOHN AYERS, Used Cars.

FORT WORTH, TEX., June 27, 1946.
W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
We are all waiting and hoping that you really carry through. More power to you.
G. W. HOLDEN.
CLEVE THOMPSON.
FRANK DAVIS.
M. SNOW.
B. D. GARRISON.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
As a representative of Texas we are proud of you, as you are the only representative we have with the guts to speak his own sentiments.
FREEMAN MOTOR CO.,
223 West Sixth Street.

TYLER, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:
I am in favor of abolishing the OPA entirely and hope you will work to that end.
R. L. PEVETO.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Your filibuster has my wholehearted approval. Keep up your fight against the OPA and all other Government restrictions on business.
BERT FIELDS.

BEAUMONT, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Speak until OPA is dead. I wish I could help you speak. I would read the Constitution over and over again to my audience. I vote for you.
NELLSON CARTER.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946
Hon. Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Heartily favor your proposed filibuster opposing OPA. Full-time production without Government manipulation will soon cure our economic ills.
W. N. BARRICK,
Barrick Cattle Co.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Heartiest congratulations on being one of the real Americans in the Senate. Stick to your guns and block price controls on food. OPA propaganda against you but the people are back of you.
ADAM F. EBY.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D .C.:
OPA is unfair, unjust, inequitable, dishonest, and un-American. It is the cause of black market and unethical practices. Makes bread, meat, butter, sugar, and necessities of life scarce. Soup lines and hunger will prevail if OPA continues. OPA is unconstitutional—down with the OPA.
W. A. ASKEW.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Your Texas friends endorse your stand against OPA and bureaucracy.
FELIX DEVANS,
Texas Bank Building.

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 27, 1946.
Senator "PAPPY" O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Kill OPA with filibuster, if necessary. Congratulations on your stand. Let's get back to the American way of life.
J. R. HANSHAW.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Capitol, Washington, D. C.:
Stay in there and pitch. Let's get rid of this big chunk of bureaucracy right now.
R. C. KAY.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
You have my full support in your filibuster against the OPA and all other Government restrictions. You are doing your country a great service.
JOHN R. BLACK.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Good luck, we need more men like you in the Senate. Hope you succeed.
KARSTEN & SONS.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Sincerely hope other Senators support your fight for American rights.
C. L. GOPPERT.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
More power to you as you take the floor this afternoon on behalf of the taxpayers of Texas, as we are backing you to the last minute.
J. O. FREEMAN.

INDEPENDENCE, MO., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations to you, also Senators WHERRY, BRIDGES, and MOORE, upon your statement to prevent passage of OPA extension bill. The American form of government is what we sent our boys to die for. Stand firm on your present convictions. Supply and demand will clarify the situation if given a chance and not throttled by the OPA.
MYLES A. and LILLIAN LARSON.

HOUSTON, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:
Urgently recommend strong filibuster or any other tactics necessary to relieve the oil industry of the burden of the OPA.
ALFRED C. GLASSELL, Jr.,
Director of the Texas Independent Royalty Owner and Producers Association.

LITTLEFIELD, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,

WEYMOUTH, MASS., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Roy V. Nelson, building contractor, father of three sons, one a returned veteran, why do I agree with your filibuster? I hate black market. Number one supply and demand will adjust prices.
P. S.: I need a new hat and suit, so does my father and three sons; we will not buy at present price level.
ROY V. NELSON.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL OF TEXAS,
Washington, D. C.:
Kill OPA; let's return honesty.
WILLIAM A. SARGENT.

TULSA, OKLA., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations on fight against OPA. Hope you kill it.
W. O. MORSE.
C. P. ALLEN.
D. W. FARNHAM.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Filibuster till Sunday midnight. I am for you.
A MISSISSIPPI-BORN TEXAN.

EUGENE, OREG., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C. :
True Americans tired of Stalin. OPA nightmare.
H. W. HALL.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
As a Texas oil producer I am sure you are right. Go ahead.
W. W. HOLMES.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:
I am back of you 100 percent in your fight against OPA, as I consider it un-American and believe it to be pressure politics.
Mrs. M. J. POOLE.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C:
The businessmen in the Panhandle of Texas admire a man with the guts to speak his sentiments. Power to you.
W. M. TRUMAN.

WEST PALM BEACH, FLA., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Democrat From Texas,
Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations. Keep filibuster going. Let's all be Americans once more.
MARY L. CROSBY.

LONGVIEW, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Shortening $30 a case because OPA won't turn it loose. Sugar, all you want at $27 a hundred. Kill OPA and we will get normal prices. If shortening is not loosened up soon I will have to close my doors. I fought in this war for freedom and Japan and Germany have it and we do without or pay black-market prices on account of OPA.
HOLLYWOOD CAFE,
J. D. MONTGOMERY.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Heartily endorse and appreciate your efforts against OPA.
T. B. TIMBES.

TACOMA, WASH., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Having lived 25 years in Texas I firmly believe you are the man to talk the OPA to death. It has convicted itself and does not deserve to live. Since VJ-day it has lived upon borrowed time.
GEORGE B. FRANKLIN.

DENVER, COLO., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. L. O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.
DEAR SENATOR: Your OPA fight is worthy.
PAUL L. CLARK.

AMARILLO, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
We are proud of you as a layman, also as a representative of Texas, in doing your best to protect the taxpayers against a bunch of political bureaucrats who are wanting nothing but a job.
Mrs. WM. FREEMAN.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Today's Dallas News intimates that you intend to conduct a filibuster against the OPA compromise bill. I thoroughly endorse such an idea and hope you succeed in such undertaking. Legitimate dealers in building materials are being put out of business by black-market practices and will have to close their doors unless the whole set-up now functioning is discarded.
LYON GRAY LUMBER CO.,
W. B. MARSH, President.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
United States Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
I want to commend you for your ardent efforts to abolish the OPA. No one realizes the fallacies of price regulation better than do we independent oil producers. It applies likewise to all other businesses and industries. I wish to personally urge that you continue in your valiant fight. Kindest personal regards.
P. N. WIGGINS, Jr.

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL., June 27, 1946.
Hon. Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Thank God we still have men who remember American democracy. Congratulations on your proposed filibuster. Maybe you can save us.
COUCH SUPER MARKET,
E. T. COUCH, Jr.

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Things the so rotten they stink. Central Council of America, War Dads, of St. Louis, went on record 100 percent to have FBI investigate the OPA.
UNCLE BILL FLORI CARONDELET,
CHAPTER 89.

ATLANTA, GA., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Kill Office Price Administration. Restore freedom. Become America's greatest benefactor.
J. E. FAVER.

FRESNO, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
If you filibuster until the OPA dies a much-deserved death, come out to California and rest for a month. Our home is yours for as long as you wish.
Mr. and Mrs. GEORGE A. FRANCIS.

FALLS CITY, NEBR., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL, of Texas,
Washington, D. C.:
Good work, Senator. Best of luck from Nebraska.
FRED H. SCHOCK.

SEATTLE, WASH., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Start filibuster. Keep it up. We're with you.
CLAUDE MCREYNOLDS.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., June 27, 1946.
"PAPPY" O'DANIEL,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:
Cancel OPA; carry filibuster through; good luck.
JIMMY LITTLE.

ARLINGTON, OREG., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations on your stand opposing the continuation of the OPA. It is gratifying that there are Members of Congress who vote intelligently.
H. F. KJAERBYE.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:
Americans need no foreign controls. OPA dictatorial, extravagant, unconstitutional. Kill it if possible. God bless you.
HELEN COURTOIS, E. BUCHANAN, and IMOGENE KRAMER.

SIOUX FALLS, S. DAK., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Admire your OPA stand. God gave us freedom; let us keep it.
GRANGE GROCERY.

ALHAMBRA, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Backing you in your fight against the OPA and for our freedom again.
BLANCHE MCFARLAND,
Teacher.

ATCHISON, KANS., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:
God bless you in your fight to eliminate the bureau that calls the American businessman a crook. We are behind you in your fight to eliminate this bottleneck to production.
CLANCY P. MILLER,
President, Miller Chevrolet Auto Co.

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
United States Senator from Texas,
Senate Office Building,

We are wiring Senators and Congressmen to support you in your patriotic battle to exterminate OPA. More power to you.
E. H. PRINGLE.

CARTHAGE, MO., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations for your fight on OPA issue. Regardless of OPA propaganda to the contrary, the public is convinced OPA retards recovery; also disgusted with regimentation. May I salute for you for your courageous stand.
WALTER OTT.

GALLATIN, TENN., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations on your filibuster proceedings. One hundred percent for you.
HOGINS MARKET.

PHOENIX, ARIZ., June 27, 1946.
Senator LEE O'DANIEL,

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 27, 1946.
Hon. Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
I thank God we do have a few real Americans left. Buck Fulford is my name. I own and operate two fried-chicken places in the city of New Orleans—fine dressed poultry places. At the present time it is almost impossible to keep my places going, due to the fact that the OPA has retarded production of spring chickens to such an extent that what is produced are consumed in the black-market channels.

Now, Senator O'DANIEL, last September I invested several thousand dollars to put in a poultry-buying place and dressing plant at Giddings, Tex., just 40 miles from Austin. You have been there many a time.

Senator O'DANIEL, I have talked with the farmers of that section and have tried to get them to raise fryers for me. They have all the equipment for raising fryers, brooders, and everything necessary for raising fryers. The only reason that they are not producing fryers today is that they cannot produce them for 28 cents per pound with the high cost of feed.

Senator O'DANIEL, you know those good old people in Texas. Good Baptist, good Methodist. You know many of them will not violate any law. Therefore, those few which are taking chances of producing are getting 34 cents per pound, whereas if it were possible for all of them to be producing we would have more poultry on the market than we could consume at reasonable prices. Senator TAFT knows me. He has been in one of my places of business in New Orleans. I'm sending a copy of this letter to Senator TAFT. If the OPA does not die June 30, then our real America cannot survive. Thank God we have two real Americans left in the Senate.

Sincerely yours,
BUCK FULFORD.

Hon. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Something over 100,000,000 people are beginning to stoop, sneak, badger, and bluff to get sugar, soap, sirup, clothing, feed, lumber, radios, nails, autos, flour, bread, butter, cheese, meat, or anything else they want and should have. Should black or free markets prevail? These are the people of what was and we believe is the finest Nation on earth. The most enlightened, aggressive, upstanding, and compassionate. Consider coffee up, butter up, cheese up, bread up, beer up. Where is the held line? Consider no lumber, no autos, no sugar, no radios, no meat, no soap. Where is production? Gobs of these people know the death of OPA on Sunday is just another of the Bowles' crowd's propaganda scares to mislead the Nation's thinking people. They know Congress can reenact or relegislate whenever they see fit to so do or feel it necessary for the national welfare. Does someone or anyone think America must be kept in or returned to swaddling clothes? And if so what group of bureaucrats consider themselves competent to be pappy to us all? If we must die let us die fighting. Gentlemen, don't give up the ship.
E. L. DICKSON.

The OPA has forced black market and law violations on this country until there is now absolute disregard of all lawful authority with reference to all things including rents, food, oil, and lumber that OPA pretends to control. The propaganda put out by Bowles, Porter, et al., spending public moneys therefor, are the most nefarious, outrageous misrepresentations and lies the world has ever seen, including Goebbels. Hon. Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
The unorganized masses of our people who are hesitant to communicate with you and other Senators are praying that your eloquence may convince enough of your brother Senators that OPA must be ended June 30 to preserve the American ways of life, and so that the smaller businessmen and producers of the necessities of life can continue their work and business and so that the larger producers of all needed necessities and other desired commodities will be produced in volume to provide the necessities and needs of our people. This OPA is destroying and corrupting all official and private life to a far greater degree than did national prohibition, and if OPA is continued, unemployment on a large scale is inevitable. LOS ANGELES, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Census Bureau Special Housing Report, series H-46, No. 1, May 16, 1946, comparing November 1945 with April 1940, shows increase in number of occupied dwellings of about 8 percent, mainly in towns and cities, against National Conference Board figures showing population increase including armed forces overseas of no more than 6.3 percent.
Average size of occupied dwelling increased slightly from 4.78 to 4.85 rooms per dwelling.
Average number of occupants per dwelling declined from 3.29 to 3.06, resulting in increase in number of rooms per person from 1.45 to 1.58, or 9 percent.
The report also shows, page 10, an increase of 30 percent in number of occupied dwelling units inhabited by only six persons and 22-percent increase in number occupied by only two persons against a decrease of 13.4 percent in number of dwellings occupied by six persons—a decrease of 24.1 percent in those occupied by seven persons and 33.1 percent occupied by eight or more persons.

Official figures also show that new homes were built since 1940 faster than population increased, including armed forces overseas.

None of the above figures and comparisons includes trailers and garages as dwellings, although the people in them are counted in population figures. Therefore they are overconservative in showing increase of homes over population.

These figures show conclusively how rent control has caused the housing shortage by keeping rents down while individual and family incomes rose, permitting spreading out by more fortunate occupants.

This causes great hardship, especially for returning servicemen, newly married couples, and lower-income persons who cannot afford to buy homes yet may be forced to change residences to get jobs or promotions.

Evasions of rent controls are rampant with illegal rentals at exorbitant levels to cover added risks.

Reconversion is greatly impeded by resulting immobilizing of workers. Social, political, and economic discontent and family difficulties are increased.

Investment in housing is impeded, yet residential sales values are inflated by difficulty of obtaining rentals.

This situation will continue as long as rent controls are effective in keeping rents below supply-and-demand level in free markets.

Removal of rent controls would result in gradual rise of 15 to 25 percent in average rentals or 3 to 5 percent in cost of living.

But it would relieve inflation pressure on other consumers' goods, especially in durable lines. It would bring rents into accord with renters' ability and willingness to pay, secure more efficient use of housing facilities by removing artificial advantage which controls now give to single person and small-family renters.

It would be especially beneficial to returning veterans who cannot or should not buy homes especially at present prices.

If it caused only one in eight of households now having two persons or less to accept one person from six-person dwellings, a normal 5-percent vacancy condition would be created. This amount would be greater than could be built in 2 years of building at the highest rate ever recorded in this country, namely that of 1925, and a rate far above any that can be expected within at least the coming year.

Following telegram sent today to Senators CORDON and MORSE: "Front page morning papers smeared with OPA diatribe directed to a small group of 40 out of more than 4,000 western lumber manufacturers and wholesalers, including Roseburg Lumber and Tony Lausmann, Medford. Charges filed by an OPA jackanapes named Golub and charges include practices permitted in OPA regulations at that time. How much longer are you going to be sucked in by OPA dictum and propaganda? When do you intend to throw out this OPA rabble and return our country to "a government of the people, by the people, and for the people." Joint conference committee report on OPA leaves wholesale lumber distributors in less favorable position than present discriminatory regulations. We solicit and urge your support in rejecting this report for revision by committee. We feel that wholesale distributors should at least be allowed the percentage of trade commissions they received prior to OPA as mark-up on ceiling prices. Thank God for at least one United States Senator with the courage to risk the ire of the CIO-PAC and of the petty bureaucrats who have flagrantly expended tax moneys to propagandize for the perpetuation of their jobs in which they find relief for their sadistic tendencies by ordering citizens to produce and sell and rent without profit. I wish there were more who had the courage. You are eternally right. OPA is not just part bad. It is the sole cause of our economic stagnation and the greatest injustice among its crimes is its insistence that property owners whos operational expenses have doubled must still charge only 1941 rents unless they can show approaching bankruptcy. Rent control is no less evil than other OPA schemes to take one man's property and give it to others under the guise of law.

A. L. JUNEAU.

BOSTON, MASS., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Congratulations on your determination, as reported in the Boston newspapers, to defend America against the continuation of the OPA, which has Europeanized America to a point where we have a meat famine, a housing famine, a butter famine, a shirt famine, and one has to violate the law in order to buy a pound of butter or a loaf of bread. Friends and foes of OPA alike can find nothing to point to as causing these famines in everyday things, in our splendidly productive country, except the OPA itself.

Up here, the OPA benefits only the rich. People with money to give need only pay small amounts, under present ceiling prices, to purchase the products of working people who have only their labor to sell. And working people with only their labor to sell find they can only receive small amounts in prices for their products, under OPA ceilings, from purchasers who have the money to spend. Under price ceilings, people pay high in labor for the money they get for their products, and people pay low in money for the other fellow's labor and products. Meanwhile, the working people, managers and purchasers, are flypapered down and shortages result because nobody can do anything without the say-so of some nonproducer in Washington.

The Puritan magistrates in the Massachusetts Bay Colony at the time of King Charles II tried price ceilings on men's labor and products, but the plain people revolted and Massachusetts went ahead again.

Wouldn't it be wonderful to get back to a free, prosperous, and secure America and regain freedom to make our own prices and wages and to produce the ordinary things for our houses and tables in a plentiful, economical way and send the OPA back to the tomb of Hitler and Mussolini, who were the first to bring totalitarian wage and price control on us in this generation?

Everybody here is for the removal of OPA except those who have been poisoned by the prattle of paid radio propagandists peddling perfidious bureaucrats' paralyzing policies.

National Committeeman from Massachusetts on American Democratic National Committee.

YAKIMA, WASH., June 27, 1946.

Senator W. L. O'DANIEL,
Senate building, Washington, D. C.:

Since packers' meat prices were rolled back the end of 1942 by OPA, also due to three times former expense of labor and enormous losses from inefficient labor, also due to double the expense of hay, feed, pastures, and supplies, we have been forced to reduce our sheep and lamb operation by several thousand head. We also have a lot of sows just farrowing. Due to low OPA ceiling on pork and lard, and high cost of feed, labor, and pasture, we expect to kill and plow under 70 of these young pigs, unless relief offered from OPA. Understand most hog raisers throughout country contemplate doing the same. It is useless to start these pigs out with economic waste to finish them staring us in the face. We also have several hundred head high-quality Hereford cows, calves, and steers we expect to liquidate with our sheep and hogs unless unjust OPA ceilings are removed. If removed there is more than ample live meat supply in this country, especially beef, to regulate itself on a slightly higher basis. While so far we have always operated legitimately, if we are forced to go out of livestock business to save from as much loss as possible, we shall probably have to contact black-market operators and become criminals.

Press dispatches indicate you are waging a mighty battle against price-control extension. More power to you. However if price control is extended, lumbermen will appreciate your influence to insure for wholesalers and distributors the same protection Taft amendments provide for manufacturers and processors. The Wherry, Capehart, and Wolcott amendment made this provision but Senate-House conferees were indefinite. Unless corrected by allowing wholesalers and distributors their historic margins this segment of industry faces disaster. Your interest in our cause will be much appreciated.

LEGISLATION COMMITTEE, THE CINCINNATI LUMBERMEN'S CLUB.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:

Stick to it and kill the OPA. Only increased production and corresponding taxation can stop inflation. People must go to work and produce goods to make business or go hungry. We cannot get farm equipment.

W. R. O'BRIEN.
ST. JOE, MICH.

COLUMBUS, GA., June 28, 1946.
W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senator,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Apparently the black market is operated by the OPA. It seems that since OPA came into power certain people would buy stock in such things as shoes, sugar, or wheat, then have the OPA announce the product to be rationed at some definite date. Results are that millions of people have purchased unnecessary commodities. If anyone tells you that prices are in line with what they claim that person is either misinformed or lying. Honest merchants with quality merchandise are forced out of business. Cheap, chiseling wartime factories are permitted to flood the markets at enormous prices. The OPA has taken competition out of business and is encouraging our people to be dishonest. Humbly suggest you either discontinue OPA or replace them with men who will and can handle situation like it should be done. The OPA price on dime-store shirts originally sold $1.19, now $4.95; handkerchiefs were 5 cents, now 25 cents; beer, 10 cents, now 25 cents; automobiles, $100, now $600. Since everything is out of their control, why pay half million people our good money to promote dishonesty?

Regards.

CLARENCE WEEKS.

I think and believe you do. OPA headquarters most business antitrust enforcement. If you can stay awake, you should lead America to freedom. Excuse me, but all of you should be running the Government, not business. You have taken us to capital or labor; better back off from both—remember Germany. OPA closed plenty business places. Last ruling closing 300,000 retail lumber yards account 60 percent manufacturing going retail. Thirty percent advance for manufacturing. American and business housing bridled by local retail lumber yards now out thinking they could still get job done. Doubtful about OPA doing if spending five billion, and might be good example most businesses.

Senator O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
In spite of the fact we were already paying our janitress double the amount another janitor received for like services in same block, OPA rent control ordered us to increase her wages $3 a week, retroactive to last October. This is beyond their jurisdiction but they did it, showing if you give them an inch they will take a mile to cut our throats. At 103 Louisa Street, Peoria, less than a block from church, fine stores, transportation, etc., we recently finished a nice living apartment, all painted and stained, new linoleum cemented to floor, good furniture, furnished all utilities, including water for toilet and other uses, gas and electricity paid for by us and we charge a veteran and his family only $7 a week rent, but rent director ordered us down to $4. This is only two of the many abuses handed us. Life is almost unbearable. We appreciate your effort to end OPA. May God help you. Read this on the floor if you wish.

Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:
You have the profound respect, admiration, and sympathy of millions of Americans. They, too, are tragically aware that constitutional government is on trial. The sacred traditions of free men and the intellectual integrity of their public servants should transcend in importance any and all considerations of unenforceable price control. It is inconceivable that Congress will knowingly condone a continuation of the inexcusable and disgraceful abuse of administrative power which has characterized OPA since its inception. The letters "OPA" have of late taken on a new significance more accurately defined as "obnoxious political appeasement," calculated to exploit the political support of the less fortunate by appealing to their frugality. It is an edifying spectacle to find a man who alone is determined to stand by principle as against political expediency. No one can question your sincerity and integrity.

GUNTERSVILLE, ALA., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Talk a week; that will be one time you are talking for the common man.
M. F. ELROD,
Commander, Post No. 8, American Legion.

MIAMI, FLA., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Dear Senator, we the people of the United States should all appreciate the great service you are trying to render us, and I assure you many do. May the good Lord give you strength to carry it through to victory. O'DANIEL for President should be our motto.
J. FRANCIS WILLIAMS.

CANTON, OHIO, June 27, 1946.
Hon. Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Every Senator, deep in his heart, knows you speak the truth about OPA. You are the only Senator with courage enough to stand on your hind feet and speak the truth. If you could defeat OPA bodily you would be the biggest man in America. More power to you.
C. S. BOLENDER.

BRENTWOOD, MO., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. L. O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Your lone fight for our constitutional rights has given me the first ray of hope that the American flag may again proudly wave over the land of the free and the home of the brave.
MRS. I. R. GAERTNER.

PORTLAND, OREG., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
I have been in the business of publishing lumber market information here for 25 years. If you wish to confirm this suggest you call Congressman ELLSWORTH who is well acquainted with me and my business. What I want to say is this: OPA has turned loose a propaganda program here in the Northwest today wherein they are trying to create the impression that the Northwest lumber industry, as a whole, has been violating major provisions of OPA ceilings and that their attitude in general has resulted in holding down the production of lumber which could otherwise be going to GI's for home building. Nothing could be further from the truth. I have made a careful study of the propaganda issued today and I am convinced that making liberal allowance there is not over 1 percent of the alleged charges which they make that have any foundation whatever, or could be prosecuted to a successful conclusion. They have purposely selected well known concerns and announced that they are suing them for triple damages on imaginary violations which they know do not exist. The facts are the OPA with its duplicity of complicated and impractical rulings has our lumber industry in such a position that the OPA itself is today the greatest encumbrance to a maximum output of timber products of all kinds. I note in Washington press report today you are considering taking steps necessary to allow this measure to die Sunday night. May I say to you as one American citizen to another that you could perform no greater service for your country as a whole.
C. C. CROW,
Editor and Publisher, Crows Pacific Coast Lumber Digest.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Have talked to lots of Dallas people today, and they are proud of your stand against the OPA. Do hope you can filibuster the darn nuisance out of existence.
The WHOLE DAVIS FAMILY (OF SIX)
HENRY R. DAVIS.

SALEM, OREG., June 27, 1946.
Senator O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Keep up the fight for freedom. America needs it.
E. W. HARLAND.

TUCSON, ARIZ., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations on your courageous fight against the most warped and unfair bureaucrat of them all. If you kill the OPA, you will be the most popular man in Arizona as well as in Texas.
BOB BARBER,
Native Texan and Practicing Attorney and Present Member of the State Legislature of Arizona, Tucson, Ariz.

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 27, 1946.
Hon. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Thank God, there are a few Americans left with some guts. More power to your effort to let the oppressive OPA die.
E. G. BECK.

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations on your filibuster. A careful canvass of some 600 of our wholesale customers scattered throughout 30 States indicates that they and their thousands of customers feel very strongly that all controls on meat, poultry, and dairy products should be removed as soon as possible and hope that some bill can be put through removing those controls.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senator from Texas,
Washington, D. C.:
Congratulations and more power to you and all associated with you in your filibuster against the OPA, the most un-American monstrosity ever fostered upon the American people. A 68-year-old American citizen born and raised in America with no group nor union affiliation takes his hat off to you. Keep talking until the Bowles' gang hoists the white flag.
J. J. HORSELY.

DETROIT, MICH., June 27, 1946.
Hon. W. LEE O'DANIEL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:
Hurrah. Kill OPA if for no other reason just to prove that all the dire things predicted by the administration will not happen. The American people have forgotten how to be free. Make them self-reliant in spite of themselves by ousting the whole OPA set-up.
EDWARD N. MARCUS.

DALLAS, TEX., June 27, 1946.
Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,

We are for you in your fight against the OPA and all other organizations which deprive the people of their freedom. Any help we can be to you we will do so.
J. A. PITMAN.

DANVILLE, VA., June 27, 1946.
LEE O'DANIEL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:
Your opinions of OPA are shared by producers, livestock raisers, as well as the informed public of this section of Virginia and North Carolina. Unless controls are removed from produce, livestock, poultry, and dairy products, production will continue to decrease. This is my opinion from contact with a large part of the producers of the Piedmont section of Virginia and North Carolina.

HOUSTON, TEX., June 27, 1946.
W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Senator from Texas, Washington, D. C.:
The OPA is no doubt wrecking this great country and I appreciate the fact that you are fighting bureaucracy, but I am afraid if you filibuster against the OPA bill now before the Senate, and succeed in letting the bill die at the end of the month, that Congress will, in retaliation, write a more unjust bill than the one now being acted upon. I sincerely hope you will consider this matter in every way before taking action.
H. R. CULLENOPA.

SAN BERNARDINO, CALIF., June 27, 1946.
W. LEE O'DANIEL,

Senator W. LEE O'DANIEL,
Washington, D. C.
MY DEAR COUNTRYMAN: If you can save America and the Constitution that stands for the right to competitive bargaining, the Bill of Rights, justice, and freedom for all, you will be the greatest emancipator since Abraham Lincoln. I am a persecuted property owner working 15 hours a day, so that OPA can keep one of their high salaried sympathizers in my low-priced 5-room apartment at $23 a month. All alone, I picketed the Broadway Emporium of the OPA protesting their putrid Nazi Bund but suffered their means of exploiting their ire against freedom of speech and the right to picket. If you can save America now you will save it for many years.

I am just one of the millions of freedom-loving citizens of the United States. I am weary of being hampered with OPA restrictions that blocks every effort I put forth trying to make an honest living for myself and children. Go to it and filibuster this giant monster out of existence and let America rise in a world of freedom once more. We fought the war to keep Hitler from coming into our country and let's fight the battle to drive him out.
E. H. HERTH.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, whether this bill becomes law or not, I feel that a large number of increases in prices will result from past policies of the administration. I therefore ask that there be printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks a list of some 500 price increases which have been granted since March 1, as some evidence of the fact that if this bill is followed by price increases, they cannot necessarily be attributed to any provisions of the bill. A list of 500 price increases was furnished to the House committee by the Price Administrator, and appears in the House committee hearings on the third deficiency appropriation bill, at page 811.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Price increases

Effective date	Commodity	Level of action	Amount of increase
Mar. 1, 1946	Automatic nonelectric temperature controls	All	5 percent over October 1941.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks numerous telegrams from my constituents in Colorado with respect to the pending measure.

There being no objection, the telegrams were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, COLO., June 25, 1946.
Hon. EDWIN C. JOHNSON,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

We the undersigned pledge our support of the mass meeting at Glenwood Springs, Colo., June 21 of the businessmen and the public. We wish to go on record as backing their resolution.

The resolution is as follows, to wit:

Be it resolved, That the OPA voted out June 30, 1946, OPA has outlived its usefullness, especially to food control.

The OPA has been and is unfair to the little businessman. Supply and demand has always controlled American business and will continue to do so if OPA is abolished.

"America controlled her own business for 150 years and will continue to do so when OPA is thrown out."

Tom E. Dever, C. E. Slim Marshall, Chas. J. Hopkins, L. E. Schinkle, L. E. Barrett, M. O. Colohan, Dorothy Olsen, Alta Olsen, Pay Ryan, E. F. Waters, E. A. Rowe, C. D. Stull, Hazel Meyers, John D. Vanderhoff, L. J. Wilson, Nell Keith, Johnnie Zupancis, Roy McCoy, Walter Hill, Anna Wilson, Floyd E. Wilson, Mary Shammo, Elmer L. Barrett, Ben Christman, Chas. Walls, P. J. Gallagher, Robert Young, Herbert L. Gardner, Cleo R. Huntley, R. E. Flood, Mrs. R. E. Overlin, R. E. Overlin, Earl S. Hart, W. E. Bryant, Francis W. Wilson, V. H. Frickey, W. F. Heberling, C. B. Rader, J. W. Sutherland.

DENVER, COLO., June 26, 1946.
Hon. EDWIN C. JOHNSON,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

According to reports the Senate will approve the OPA as passed by the House. Please put forth every effort to modify the regulations governing the slaughter of livestock and discontinue the rule governing cost compliance which is a big handicap to the packing industry and is the cause of the large packers being unable to operate as usual. If the cost compliance and quota regulations are discontinued it will in a very large measure do away with the black market that is such a detriment to the livestock industry. Any decrease in subsidy should be offset by like increase in ceiling prices of meat.

C. G. SMITH,
John Clay & Co., Stockyards.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., June 26, 1946.
Hon. ED C. JOHNSON,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

If OPA extension bill becomes law Holly's livestock feeding operations will suffer unless some changes are made in meat compliance regulations so as to permit the buyers of the larger meat packers competing on any livestock market with other buyers in purchase of fat cattle and lambs which we produce at our various feed yards. Under present regulations the larger packers are being forced out of the market. Our feeding operations are large enough that we have to depend principally on these large packers when we sell and if they are regulated out of the market we will be hard put to properly and efficiently conduct our feeding operations. It seems to us that the consuming public would also benefit through a continuation of the operation of the larger packers.

HOLLY SUGAR CORP.,
WILEY BLAIR, Jr., President.

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, COLO., June 24, 1946.
Senator Ed JOHNSON,
United States Senate Office Building:

Supporting 144 businessmen, Garfield County Organization for Elimination of OPA, we unanimously endorse this nonpartisan action individually and collectively and request you act accordingly.

GARFIELD COUNTY REPUBLICAN WOMAN'S CLUB.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 25, 1946.
Senator EDW. C. JOHNSON,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Under today's reported version on OPA bill you may be sure to see black markets increase spread and proper meat will not receive equitable distribution. Hope you can help straighten out the House thinking on this terrible situation. Regards.

HERBERT M. SONNERS.

HOTCHKISS, COLO., June 25, 1946.
Senator ED C. JOHNSON:

We favor rejection on final conference report on price-control bill unless it specifically recommends removal of price ceilings on dairy products.

NORTH FORK COOPERATIVE CREAMERY ASSOCIATION.

GREELEY, COLO., June 26, 1946.
Senator ED C. JOHNSON,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Beef settlement means continued restricted production and that we cannot feed. Suggest Bowles for "propaganda minister." Maybe he will furnish fertilizer for farms. We cannot produce without cost of production return.

FRANK B. DAVIS.

STERLING, COLO., June 26, 1946.
Senator EDWIN C. JOHNSON,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

We earnestly request your vote to resubmit price-control bill to conference committee with instructions to replace amendment to decontrol livestock, and meat. Conditions of our industry are rapidly getting worse, and after grass run of cattle public will be without beef. Feeding of cattle impossible under present conditions, and our greatest agricultural business is being ruined.

W. C. HARRIS GRAIN & CATTLE CO.
A. A. SMITH & CO.

DENVER, COLO., June 26, 1946.
Senator ED C. JOHNSON,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

Conditions make it impossible to operate unless beef controls are relaxed. Must close Friday, affecting 99 employees. We favor Senate amendment to OPA.

CAPITOL PACKING CO.

DENVER, COLO., June 28, 1946.
EDWIN C. JOHNSON, Democrat of Colorado,
Washington, D. C.:

Long of opinion OPA should terminate and let natural economic laws function. Believe many of our opinions have been reticent to speak up.

GEORGE W. MASTEN, Jr.
GEORGE C. HAHN.

CRIPPLE CREEK, COLO., June 27, 1946.
Hon. EDW. C. JOHNSON,
United States Senator,
Washington, D. C.:

May we earnestly ask you to use your every influence right and responsibility of your office in supporting Senator O'DANIEL in his stand relative to the OPA. We believe, as millions of other Americans do, that this branch of our unparalleled democratic Government should be stripped of its drastic powers at the earliest possible moment. We are sick, tired, and fed up, and thoroughly disgusted with what we honestly believe to be very much uncalled for Government regimentation in our daily American way of life. We also believe that the OPA is a farce from true Americanism grossly infringing on the rights and privileges of free-born, upright, loyal, and true citizens of the United States. May we, the undersigned residents of Teller County, count on and thank you for your usual fine judgment in making important decisions that concern your constituents, also for voicing and supporting our opinion this very important question. The following names are those of citizens engaged in each and every walk of life in Teller County, namely, miners, leasers, owners and operators, merchants, doctors, dentists, garage owners, mechanics, bookkeepers, stenographers, druggists, bankers, farmers, housewives, truckline operators, public officials, cafe and hotel owners, railroad employees, hospitals, school faculties, cattle and ranch owners. This communication is on file and signed in person by 203 Teller County citizens.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, I should like to make a brief statement to the effect that I intend to vote against approval of the conference report. I shall so vote because I am hopeful that the report will be defeated, although my judgment is that it will not be defeated. I wish to make my statement in order that the record may show that I am hoping to be able to vote to send the bill back to a new conference for consideration strictly along the lines of the decisions reached by the Senate in the amendments which went to conference.

I have spoken on the bill a number of times, so I shall not consume the time of the Senate at this moment, except to say that I have not yet satisfied myself that all controls should be taken off and the law completely killed. I still feel that there are certain things which must be controlled, such as rents, and probably some other things, but I cannot believe that the conference report properly represents the views of the Senate, when the amendment which I so strongly favored, decontrolling meats, poultry, and dairy products, was destroyed.

Many very able committees of farmers, packers, poultrymen, and groups of dairymen have come to my office and told me what the effect of price control on their products will be in the future. They have told me not only what the effects will be in the immediate future, but what the real effect will be in the future on dairy products, meat, and so forth—particularly on dairy products. They have told me what the effect will be a year or two from now, because of the course being followed by certain farmers and dairymen who, I can assure the Senate, are good American citizens. Those men are getting rid of their herds and their poultry, and the effects will not be felt by us for some time.

That is all I wish to say at this late hour, because I should like to have the conference report come to a vote. But I wish to have it understood that if I had my choice I would not vote to kill the bill entirely. However, I am not in favor of the conference report as it has been submitted to the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BARKLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, I shall detain the Senate for only about 30 seconds.

Today I received a letter from Mr. R. W. Peaslee, general manager of the Merrimack Farmers' Exchange, Inc., which does business with most of the farmers in my State of New Hampshire. While this is a personal letter, I wish to read one sentence therefrom, bearing on the action which we shall take this afternoon:

> If ceilings had been taken off meat and poultry products New England would have lost what little grain it is now getting.

I think that speaks for itself. It is expert testimony.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I should like to have the majority leader answer a question in regard to the bill which is now before the Senate in the form of a conference report. In relation to the conference report, on page 3, under subsection (A) at the bottom of the page, it is provided that—> an agricultural commodity shall be deemed to be in short supply unless the supply of such commodity equals or exceeds the requirements for such commodity for the current marketing season.

My question is this: Unlike most crops, dairy products are produced and marketed all through the year. Under such circumstances, is the full year to be considered as the marketing season for dairy products, under this act?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in reply to the Senator from Michigan, I think subsection (A) refers to agricultural commodities that have a seasonal marketing time. We all understand that fruits and even certain types of wheat at threshing time might be regarded as having a seasonal marketing time. But in the case of commodities or foods or products which are produced and consumed the year 'round, with slight variations, such as dairy products—milk, butter, and so forth—I think the marketing season would be the entire year, because there is no substantial variation between the production at different times in the year.

Mr. FERGUSON. That being true, if the estimated production for the year is sufficient to meet requirements—and let us take milk as an example—does the Senator believe that it should be decontrolled under this law?

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not think the Secretary would be required necessarily to take into consideration the supply for the entire year. If he found that the supply and demand were in balance during any substantial part of the year, he would be justified in decontrolling.

Mr. FERGUSON. Even though it were not for the whole year?

Mr. BARKLEY. Even though it were not for the whole year.

Mr. FERGUSON. I thank the Senator. I appreciate his answer as an interpretation of the language I have referred to.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, I understand that yesterday there was a colloquy, at a time when I was absent from the Chamber, as to bringing various commodities, agricultural and nonagricultural, into a state of balance, and as to what would happen at that time. It seems that there was some doubt as to the effect of price on the state of balance. Am I correct in saying that when the supply of a commodity, agricultural or nonagricultural, comes into balance with demand, it is eligible for decontrol, regardless of whether the price would go up if it continued in that state?

Mr. BARKLEY. That is my interpretation of the bill. As a matter of fact, the Senate eliminated a provision of the bill as reported from the committee which would have been entitled to a different interpretation.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. But as it is now written, I think the Senator is correct.

Mr. MILLIKIN. I should like to remind the distinguished Senator from Kentucky that it was eliminated in order to get rid of that very question.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is true.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, I wish to make a brief statement of my position on this question. I have found myself in a very difficult situation in connection with this measure. I feel that it has been weakened until I am very much afraid that it is not going to hold the price line even as it has been held in the past, and none of us contends that it has been held rigidly, by any means. However, as previous speakers have stated, the question is whether we shall have any price control or none at all. I cannot conscientiously open the floodgates of absolutely unchecked inflation upon the American people. So it is with very sincere misgivings as to the efficacy of the bill that I shall vote for it.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, after most careful deliberation, I have decided to vote for the conference report. In order to avoid any confusion or misunderstanding of my position, I wish briefly to express my reasons for so doing.

My position on effective price control and on the proposals in the pending bill are set forth in the minority report from the Banking and Currency Committee and in my remarks on the floor when the bill was here for consideration. That position is unchanged.

The bill which the Senate approved was far worse than that reported from the Banking and Currenc Committee, from the standpoint of effective price control and the sound economy of the country in the immediate and distant future. The Senate bill specifically decontrolled all meats, eggs, milk, petroleum, poultry, tobacco, and all the products thereof. The Senate also wrote into that bill the Taft amendment, which I opposed as the most potent inflationary device put forward in the entire congressional deliberations on this bill.

The Taft amendment is based on industry's largest profit margin in history, and would operate regardless of increased volume since 1941 or adequate total profits of the individual manufacturer. It would result in widespread price increases on countless thousands of products, with tremendous cumulative effect. It would impose an impossible administrative burden on the Office of Price Administration. It would launch labor on another round of wage demands and strikes to achieve them. It would bring price and cost uncertainties that would slow up rather than advance production. It would commit us to a spiral of price increases and wage increases that can be uttery disastrous to our postwar economy.

With all my heart, I hope that these results will not follow; that somehow the country may win through to an era of industrial peace and soaring prosperity. But the dangers that I see in the Taft amendment and the textile amendments are so great that I could not give the measure my approval when it was before the Senate.

The Senate went even further and wrote into the measure the Wherry amendment, which would have given every distributor, wholesaler, and retailer his current cost plus perwar mark-up, regardless of his present volume or present profits, and regardless of the basic objective to increase the production of goods in order to bring demand and requirements into effective balance.

As a conferee, I labored as diligently as I could to improve the measure and bring back a workable price-control law which Congress and the President would approve, and under which the country could enjoy greater production and continuing industrial peace. The conferees in my judgment brought back a bill which greatly improved on either the Senate or House version.

All the specific decontrols were eliminated. The Wherry amendment was substantially modified and the bill was improved in several other respects. I signed the report because it was the best we could get in conference, and because my vote was necessary in order that any conference report could be brought back to the Senate for its consideration. Similar reasons of necessity compel me to vote for the measure in order that some bill may go to the President for his consideration, in accordance with our historic and constitutional processes.

Voting against the conference report will be a substantial group favoring the specific decontrols, as well as those who frankly oppose continuance of any price control whatsoever beyond June 30 of this year. If I, and those who feel as I do about the pending measure, should aline our votes against the conference report, there is the immediate danger that the votes of those at either end of the proposition will combine to defeat it altogether. That would throw the entire matter back into conference, with further delay of congressional action and with the clear indication that the measure will be made even worse by writing in specific decontrols.

Mr. President, this is the 28th of June. All price control, all stabilization authority as to wages and prices, and all rent control, will expire on the 30th of June unless renewed by some congressional action and approved by the President or passed over his veto.

Those who declare that the measure does not go far enough in protecting price control appear to be divided into two groups: Some believe that Congress is confronted with the choice of this bill or no price control legislation at all; others still hope for a Presidential veto, sustained by Congress and followed by a simple continuing resolution. But, as a practical matter, the best way to further either course is to get this bill to the President just as quickly as we possibly can in these last few days that remain.

I do not pretend to know what action the President will take with regard to this measure.

In my judgment, a Presidential veto would be sustained. Thereafter, a continuing resolution would be in order. But at this moment, we have no choice but to send some bill, the best bill we could get in conference, to the President's desk for his consideration. For that reason and that reason alone I am voting for the conference report.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I merely wish to say a few words before the vote is taken. I realize that many Members of this Senate have been disturbed with reference to their duty in regard to this conference report, and I recognize that the choice which many of them are required to make is a very difficult one. But, Mr. President, the choice must be made. There is no alternative to making that choice. It might be a tragic choice if things turn out badly with respect to what we do here today.

This morning the President of the United States called to the White House the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the majority leader of the House, and the distinguished President pro tempore of the Senate and the majority leader of the Senate, to discuss this legislation. The President was very sincere in seeking our viewpoint with respect to it. Inasmuch as he authorized us to say what we had recommended, when we departed, and inasmuch as it is now a matter of public knowledge, there is no need to keep from the Members of this body what we urged him to do.

With all the force that we could command, in view of the situation which presents itself to us and to him, we urged him to sign the bill when it reached him, on the same ground that I urge that we adopt it here, because the choice is between this bill and nothing. To hope that a joint resolution continuing price controls after next Sunday will be adopted by the two Houses of Congress is an idle dream. We might as well understand that, because that is what it is. It cannot be done. If an attempt were made to do it by the introduction of a joint resolution, it would have to go to the Committees on Banking and Currency of the two Houses of Congress and be there considered, and subsequently be reported back to the two Houses of Congress; and every provision in the conference report now before us could be added to it, and in all likelihood would be added to it, and more, too, so that we would ultimately be confronted with the necessity of having to vote on a worse bill than this one is, even if it is as bad as its enemies describe it to be. If we could ever pass such a joint resolution—and it might require a week, or 2 weeks, or 3 weeks to get it to the President—he would be confronted with the same choice with which he is confronted at this time, and it might be an even worse choice; and in the meantime there would be no OPA law, and prices would go up without restraint. Not only would prices go up, but rents would go up in every city in the United States—not only the rents for ordinary tenants, but rents for veterans who seek quarters. If they could not pay such increased rents, they would be evicted; and if they were not evicted, in many cases they would be made the victims of unconscionable increases in rents.

Mr. President, I say to the Senate, as I said to the President, that if there were in this bill nothing except a provision for the control of rents for one more year, it would be worth voting for and worth signing. However, it does contain more than that. Under this bill, any possible increases in prices will not be so great as the increases would be if the bill were not enacted.

So I say that in voting on the conference report no Member of the Senate should vote under the delusion that if the bill is defeated, we can get another one. The choice is between this bill or nothing at all. It is a choice which we do not like to make, but we have to make it, because it is here before us.

I hope with all my heart that the Senate will adopt the conference report and that the President will sign it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The yeas and nays have been ordered. Those in favor of agreeing to the conference report will vote "yea" when their names are called, and those who are opposed will vote "nay."

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BRIDGES (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. MCCLELLAN (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. BUCK]. If he were present and voting he would vote "nay." If I were at liberty to vote, I would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HILL. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. BRIGGS], the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] are absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY] and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. MAYBANK] are necessarily absent.

The Senators from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO and Mr. EASTLAND], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCFARLAND], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY] are detained on public business.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are absent on official business, having been appointed to the commission on the part of the Senate to participate in the Philippine independence ceremonies.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] is absent on official business, attending the Paris meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers as an adviser to the Secretary of State. He has a general pair with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG].

I also announce that on this question the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY] is paired with the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY]. If present and voting, the Senator from Rhode Island would vote "yea" and the Senator from Montana would vote "nay."

I announce further that if present and voting, the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS] would vote "yea."

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator from Delaware [Mr. BUCK], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER], and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. YOUNG] would vote "nay" if present.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] and the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] have a general pair.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] is absent on official business attending the Paris meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers as an adviser to the Secretary of State.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Oregon [Mr. CORDON] is absent by leave of the Senate, being a member of a committee designated by the Senate to attend the atomic bombing at Bikini.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a member of the Special Committee on Atomic Energy.

The Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER] and the Senator from Nebraska [Mr, BUTLER] are absent on official business, being members of the commission appointed to attend the Philippine independence ceremonies.

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN], the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD], and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. YOUNG] are absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. BUCK] is necessarily absent.

The result was announced—yeas 47, nays 23, as follows:

YEAS—47

Aiken	Hoey	O'Mahoney
Andrews	Huffman	Overton
Barkley	Johnson, Colo.	Pepper
Burch	Kilgore	Radcliffe

So the conference report was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the motion for cloture which was filed yesterday in connection with the conference report on the price-control bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the motion is withdrawn.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, I have several speaking engagements during the next few days which I cannot very well avoid. I ask unanimous consent to be excused from the sessions of the Senate until July 9.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, leave is granted.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma obtained the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have asked the Senator from Oklahoma to yield to me so that I may make a statement.

Mr. President, it is the desire of the Committee on Appropriations that the Senate now take up, in their order, the appropriation bills on the calendar. They may have to go to conference. Therefore it is the desire of the committee that they be passed at once.

I believe that the committee on appropriations reported a bill today which may not yet have been printed on the calendar, and if we have time to dispose of it, I should like to have it disposed of today so that if it should become necessary, it may be sent to conference.

I have been asked with reference to a possible session tomorrow. Ordinarily if we could dispose of the appropriation bills we might avoid a session tomorrow, but in view of the situation which exists, or may exist in regard to the legislative business of the Senate, it seems obvious at this time that we must hold a session tomorrow.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the majority leader give some indication of his intentions with respect to a session of the Senate on July 4? A number of Senators have asked me whether there will be a session on that day.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the unfinished business which was temporarily laid aside is Senate bill 1850, the National Science Foundation bill. It is obvious that that bill will probably not be discussed until Monday. How long it will take to dispose of it, I do not know. It is not my purpose to ask the Senate to sit on July 4 unless it becomes absolutely necessary, and I cannot believe that it will. What will happen between July 4, which is on Thursday of next week, and the following Monday, I cannot say, but it will be necessary to hold a session of the Senate on Friday because we cannot recess from Wednesday over to Monday. Moreover, there may be matters which will demand the Senate's attention. However, at the present time it is not my purpose to ask the Senate to hold a session next Thursday, July 4.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield so that I may ask a question of the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. OVERTON. As the Senator from Kentucky will recall, I sought his advice with reference to when the rivers and harbors and flood-control bills will be taken up. I am in daily receipt of many inquiries, not only from persons throughout the United States who are interested, but from Members of the Senate who wish to know when the bills will be taken up. They will, I presume, go to conference after the Senate passes them. I should like to ask the majority leader to indicate the time when he believes the bills can be taken up.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it is impossible to indicate a day on which the bills will be taken up, because none of us can tell how long it will require to dispose of the unfinished business. A prediction has been made that the bill may be disposed of in 2 days, or possibly in only 1 day. We never know in the Senate how long it will take to dispose of a bill which is at all controversial. But as soon as it is possible for me to do so I shall be glad to cooperate with the Senator from Louisiana in bringing before the Senate the rivers and harbors and flood-control bills. If it is possible to do that before July 4, I shall be glad to do so, or as soon thereafter as the bills can be reached.

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT APPROPRIATION BILL, 1947

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 1620, House bill 6837, the Military Establishment appropriation bill for 1947.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be stated by title for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 6837) making appropriations for the Military Establishment for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, of course, if the appropriation bill for the Military Establishment is taken up, it will not displace the unfinished business before the Senate.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It is not my intention to displace the unfinished business. The Senator from Kentucky has already referred to the bill which is the unfinished business, and there is no intention on my part to displace it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Oklahoma that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 6837, the Military Establishment appropriation bill for 1947.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6837) making appropriations for the Military Establishment for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that it be read for amendment, and that the committee amendments be first considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT OF SECOND WAR POWERS ACT, 1942, AS AMENDED—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. O'MAHONEY submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5716) to amend the Second War Powers Act, 1942, as amended, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 2. Title XV of such Act, as amended, is amended by inserting at the end thereof a new section as follows:

" 'SEC. 1503. Nothing contained in this Act or any other Federal Act (except the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, as amended, the Stabilization Act of 1942, as amended, or the District of Columbia Emergency Rent Act, approved December 2, 1941, as amended), shall be construed to authorize the establishment by any officer or agency of the Government of maximum prices for any commodity or maximum rents for any housing accommodations.' "

And the House agree to the same.

JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
JAMES W. HUFFMAN,
HOMER FERGUSON,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

HATTON W. SUMNERS,
SAM HOBBS,
C. E. HANCOCK,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I ask that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator make a statement as to what is involved in the report?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I shall be very glad to do so. This is the conference report upon the Second War Powers Act.

The extension was voted in the House of Representatives earlier in the year, the bill came to the Senate, was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and was reported by the Committee on the Judiciary without dissent.

The bill was considered upon the floor of the Senate last Friday, an amendment was offered by the distinguished junior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. MOORE] which was accepted, and the bill went to conference between the two Houses upon that amendment.

The House conferees have agreed to the Senate amendment with a slight modification, which clarifies the effect of the amendment. The purpose of the amendment was to make certain that none of the war powers should be used for the purpose of carrying into effect any of the powers granted by the Price Control Act, the Stabilization Act, and the amendment in conference included the Emergency District of Columbia Rent Act. There is no dispute. The modifications made in conference were designed to make certain that the Senate amendment could not be interpreted to invalidate rent control in the District of Columbia under the Emergency Rent Act or in any State or city under any State law or local ordinance.

Mr. President, I move that the conference report be agreed to.

The motion was agreed to.

REGISTRATION OF TRADE MARKS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I call up the conference report on House bill 1654, to provide for the registration and protection of trade-marks used in commerce, to carry out the provisions of certain international conventions, and for other purposes.

(See conference report printed in RECORD of June 27, 1946, at p. 7635.)

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the report.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, this is the trade-mark bill which has passed the House of Representatives three times and the Senate twice. The report of the conferees is unanimous. I hope the report will be agreed to. Two of the other conferees, the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HAWKES], wish to make statements with reference to the agreement.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, the trade-mark bill is of such great importance that I have a feeling that a statement should be made to explain briefly and concisely the effect of the Senate amendments which, with slight modifications, have been accepted by the House conferees. I make this statement because in reading the RECORD of the proceedings in the House with regard to the bill, I felt that there might be some misinterpretation of the language which was employed by one of the Members of the House in attempting to explain the Senate amendment.

The statement of the managers on the part of the House, which was printed at length in the RECORD of the House proceedings in accordance with the rule, makes what I conceive to be a correct description of the effect of the amendment added by the Senate, making the use of a trade-mark to violate the antitrust laws a defense to a suit by the trade-mark registrant.

It should be remembered, in the first place, that this trade-mark bill is an attempt to perfect the system under which trade-marks are now registered in the United States.

The Constitution of the United States does not give Congress any original power with respect to trade-marks as it does with respect to patents and copyrights. The Constitution, as every Member of the Senate knows, prescribed that Congress should have the power to grant exclusive rights to the use of inventions for limited periods. The trade-mark is a right which is acquired under the common law, and is a permanent right.

The bill which came from the House upon several occasions undertook to provide that trade-marks under certain circumstances and conditions should be incontestable, but, in the view of Senators, did not contain sufficient safeguards against restraints of trade. The word "incontestable" is perfectly clear and understandable. After the period prescribed in the act a trade-mark should become incontestable.

It appeared, however, from the history of litigation in the United States, that trade-marks from time to time—not at all as a general practice, I want it understood, but only from time to time—have been used in the violation of the antitrust laws. It was also felt that under the language of the bill trade names could be used to prolong a patent monopoly after the expiration of a patent. One of the Senate amendments, agreed to with slight modification by the House, was intended to eliminate this possibility. I think it is effective for that purpose.

The trade-mark has come into existence under the common law for the purpose of protecting both the consumer and the producer. The trade-mark or trade name is designed to give notice to the public that the commodity to which it is attached is produced by a particular producer. Thereby the consumer knows that this particular producer is the one who has produced the material he seeks to buy.

There have been occasions, however, when trade-marks have been misused. There have been occasions when trade-marks have been used in connection with cartel agreements. There have been occasions when trade-marks have been used to restrain the trade and to the disadvantage of little business.

So it was provided by a Senate amendment that one of the defenses or defects which would make a trade-mark contestable even after this period was a showing that the trade-mark had been or was being used to violate the antitrust laws of the United States.

The Senate adopted the amendment. The amendment was changed in conference to make it perfectly clear that what was meant was that the trade-mark itself was being used to violate the antitrust laws.

It should be understood from the language of the law—and I shall read it now so that there can be no possible ground for misinterpretation—that the use of a mail to violate the antitrust laws is a defense to an infringement suit. Section 33 (b) provides:

If the right to use the registered mark has become incontestable under section 15 hereof, the certificate shall be conclusive evidence of the registrant's exclusive right to use the registered mark in commerce on or in connection with the goods or services specified in the certificate, subject to any conditions or limitations stated therein except when one of the following defenses or defects is established.

I emphasize that last clause:

except when one of the following defenses or defects is established.

Then seven defenses or defects are listed. They are as follows:

(1) That the registration or the incontestable right to use the mark was obtained fraudulently; or

(2) That the mark has been abandoned by the registrant; or

(3) That the registered mark has been assigned and is being used, by or with the permission of the assignee, so as to misrepresent the source of the goods or services in connection with which the mark is used; or

(4) That the use of the name, term, or device charged to be an infringement is a use, otherwise than as a trade or service mark, of the party's individual name in his own business, or of the individual name of anyone in privity with such party, or of a term or device which is descriptive of and used fairly and in good faith only to describe to users the goods or services of such party, or their geographic origin; or

(5) That the mark whose use by a party is charged as an infringement was adopted without knowledge of the registrant's prior use and has been continuously used by such party or those in privity with him from a date prior to the publication of the registered mark under subsection (a) or (c) of section 12 of this act: Provided, however, That this defense or defect shall apply only for the area in which such continuous prior use is proved.

(6) That the mark whose use is charged as an infringement was registered and used prior to the publication under subsection (a) or (c) of section 12 of this act of the registered mark of the registrant, and not abandoned: Provided, however, That this defense or defect shall apply only where the said mark has been published pursuant to subsection (c) of section 12 and shall apply only for the area in which the mark was used prior to the date of publication of the registrant's mark under subsection (a) or (c) of section 12 of this act.

(7) That the mark has been or is being used to violate the antitrust laws of the United States.

Mr. President, the point which I wish to make perfectly clear is that the use of such a mark to violate the antitrust laws, constitutes a defense in an infringement suit. The House managers so stated in their statement to the House.

Now I read from the statement of the House managers:

Amendment No. 28: This amendment provides that the use of a registered mark in violation of the antitrust laws shall constitute a defense to a suit by the registrant. The House recedes with an amendment substituting the words "to violate" for the words "in violation of". This amendment provides an additional defense to the conclusive evidence rule of a certificate of registration of a mark which has become incontestable under section 15. It does not and is not intended to enlarge, restrict, amend, or modify the substantive law of trade-marks, either as set out in other sections of this act or as heretofore applied by the courts. The amendment does not and is not intended to affect the validity of the mark nor affect the right of the registrant to continue use or enforce his rights in the mark. If it is established that a registrant has used or is using his registered mark, which has become incontestable, as the legal, causal, and efficient instrumentality to violate the antitrust laws of the United States, such registrant is denied the benefit of the rule that the certificate of registration is conclusive evidence of his exclusive right to use the mark. Under such circumstances, the certificate is only prima facie evidence of his exclusive right to use and he must be prepared to carry the additional burden of proof as though his mark had not become incontestable.

Here I emphasize the first sentence:

This amendment provides that the use of a registered mark in violation of the antitrust laws shall constitute a defense to a suit by the registrant.

I did not want the RECORD, Mr. President, before the approval of the conference report, to be susceptible of any misunderstanding. It is a matter of great importance to the consumers of the United States that they shall know that trade-marks are being used as it was intended under the common law that they should be used. By reason of the invention of the radio, the great improvement in communications, the invention of the airplane and the great improvement in travel, it is now possible for management in a central point to send goods all over the country, indeed, all over the world. And it is possible to abuse trade-marks. But it is of such great importance to the public of the United States that restraints of trade shall not be permitted, that the Senate insered this amendment to make it a defense to an infringement suit as well as to make it a ground of contestability if it should be shown that the registrant was using the mark itself to violate the antitrust law.

As the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HAWKES], one of the conferees, has well said in a notable speech which he made to a graduating class in New York State a week or so ago, those who seek equity must do equity; and when we seek the protection of the laws of the United States we must be prepared to do so with clean hands. The Senator from New Jersey has announced that principle, which is, of course, old in the law of equity, and to which we all subscribe.

The intent of Congress to protect the public from the abuse of trade-marks and trade names was demonstrated by the adoption of an amendment permitting the Federal Trade Commission to apply to cancel a mark. This proviso reads as follows:

Provided, That the Federal Trade Commission may apply to cancel on the grounds specified in subsections (c) and (d) of this section any mark registered on the principal register established by this act, and the prescribed fee shall not be required.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, the Senator from Wyoming suggested that I read the report. I think it is unnecessary to take the time of the Senate to do so, because I had printed in the RECORD a statement which will be found in the RECORD of June 27, on page 7636.

First, I should like to thank the Senator from Wyoming for his cooperation. I think he has made a very clear statement, and I am sure that he does not misunderstand what happened the other day when he was not on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Oh, certainly not.

Mr. HAWKES. There was no intention of doing anything contrary to the wishes of the Senator.

I should like to read into the RECORD the last paragraph of the statement I had printed in the RECORD yesterday. I should like to have it go into the RECORD as my statement at this point:

Although the words "used to violate the antitrust laws of the United States" are general in their nature, their meaning is clear. A registrant of a trade-mark might violate the antitrust laws by entering into an agreement to restrict output or to suppress competition and yet the use made by the registrant of his trade-mark in his business might have no legal, causal, or efficient relation to the violation of these laws. The relation of the trade-mark to these illegal acts might be purely physical or coincidental. If a trade-mark should be used as the legal, causal, and efficient intrumentality to effect a contract, agreement, or arrangement which violates the antitrust laws, then the actual use of the mark to carry out such a scheme would constitute a use in violation of the antitrust laws; but if the mark is in no true sense an essential legal element of the unlawful conduct, then the fact that the registrant may have violated the antitrust laws independently of the mark or its use would not bring paragraph (7) of paragraph (b) of section 33 into operation.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I might make a comment on what the Senator has said. I read the last sentence of his statement:

But if the mark is in no true sense an essential legal element of the unlawful conduct, then the fact that the registrant may have violated the antitrust laws independently of the mark or its use would bring paragraph (7) of paragraph (b) of section 33 into operation.

That is just shading it a little too much, as I pointed out to the Senator yesterday. Paragraph (7) was not intended, as I read it, to say, as the Senator has said in his statement, that the use of the trade-mark should be in itself the single, only, legal, causal, and efficient instrumentality which violates the law. In other words, what I want to make clear is that the use in the statement the Senator has read of the phrase

"an essential legal element of the unlawful conduct" should not be interpreted as so narrowing the effect of a trade-mark violation of the antitrust law that nevertheless the trade-mark owner could use the trade-mark in such violation, but if it were shown that some other act were the proximate cause of the violation, then the trade-mark should become incontestable. That is what we mean when we say, as I have quoted the Senator's words, that the holder of the trade-mark must come into court with clean hands.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, would my fellow conferees agree that the Senator from New Jersey is not saying that he is insisting that the trade-mark must be the sole and efficient cause? The Senator from New Jersey is not saying that the trade-mark must be used in the violation of the antitrust laws as the sole and efficient cause, but it must at least be one of the active, proximate causes in the violation.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That is correct.

Mr. HAWKES. I am thoroughly in agreement with that. In other words, the trade-mark, to have its incontestability removed, must have been a part of the process of violating the antitrust laws. The Senator from Wyoming agrees with that?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. There is no question about that.

Mr. HAWKES. I think we are all in agreement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. O'MAHONEY submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives announcing its action on certain amendments of the Senate to House bill 5990, which was read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U. S.,
June 27, 1946.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 67 to the bill (H. R. 5990) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, and concur therein;

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 71 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out and inserted by said amendment insert:

"SEC. 3. No part of any appropriation contained in this act shall be used to pay the salary or wages of any person who engages in a strike against the Government of the United States or the Government of the District of Columbia or who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States or the Government of the District of Columbia, or who advocates, or is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided, That for the purposes hereof an affidavit shall be considered prima facie evidence that the person making the affidavit has not contrary to the provisions of this section engaged in a strike against the Government of the United States or the Government of the District of Columbia, is not a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States or the Government of the District of Columbia, or that such person does not advocate, and is not a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided further, That any person who engages in a strike against the Government of the United States or the Government of the District of Columbia or who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States or the Government of the District of Columbia, or who advocates, or who is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence and accepts employment the salary or wages for which are paid from any appropriation contained in this act shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or both: Provided further, That the above penalty clause shall be in addition to, and not in substitution for, any other provisions of existing law."

That the House insist upon its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 1 to said bill.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate No. 71.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendment No. 1, request a further conference with the House of Representatives thereon, and that the Chair appoint the same conferees at the further conference.

The motion was agreed to; and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. O'MAHONEY, Mr. OVERTON, Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, Mr. CHAVEZ, Mr. HOEY, Mr. BALL, Mr. WILLIS, and Mr. FERGUSON conferees on the part of the Senate at the further conference.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT, 1947

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6837) making appropriations for the Military Establishment for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will proceed to state the committee amendments.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, before we begin consideration of the committee amendments I desire to make a brief statement with respect to what the bill does and what it means. I regret that the bill did not reach the Senate before last Monday. The Senate committee could not consider the bill until it reached this body. Hearings were started on Tuesday of this week, and they were held continuously until we had completed the repertoire of witnesses. Today is Friday, so we had only 4 days to consider a bill which calls for an appropriation of some $7,000,000. I now desire to make a brief statement to explain just what the bill provides.

In presenting for the consideration of the Senate the Military Establishment appropriation bill for fiscal year 1947, I will at the outset state the total amounts which have been involved in the consideration of this bill. The War Department budget estimates for fiscal year 1947, as submitted by the President to the Congress on May 6, 1946, totaled $7,246,335,200. On June 13, 1946, the President recommended certain adjustments in the budget estimates to eliminate funds for the care and handing of property subsequent to its declaration of surplus. These adjustments were contained in House Document 657 and called for a net decrease in the budget estimates of some $38,000,000, bringing the total submission to $7,208,207,429. As passed by the House, H. R. 6837 provided for a total appropriation of $7,091,034,700—a further decrease in the budget estimates of $117,172,729. The bill which I am presenting for your consideration today provides a total appropriation to the War Department of $7,595,449,868, which is an increase of $504,415,168 over the amount passed by the House.

This bill is based upon the assumption that Army strength will total 1,550,000 on July 1, 1946, and will decrease to 1,070,000 by the end of fiscal year 1947. An average strength of 1,279,000 has been used in computing requirements. Of this average strength, it is estimated that 596,000 will be in the United States and 683,000 will be overseas. General Eisenhower, the Chief of Staff, has assured us that this average strength of 1,279,000 is the minimum required to efficiently perform his many tasks during fiscal year 1947.

In the very limited time available for the consideration of this bill the committee heard the testimony of General Eisenhower, the Chief of Staff; General Richards, budget officer for the War Department; and a number of the chiefs of the several operating agencies of the War Department. Based upon this testimony, the committee concluded that H. R. 6837 as passed by the House would not be adequate to finance the carrying out of the heavy responsibilities which must be discharged by the War Department and the Army during the fiscal year 1947. It must be borne in mind that though actual hostilities have ceased, there remain many tasks which must be efficiently performed if we are to have any assurance that the victories which were won at so great a sacrifice of American manpower and matériel will result in the complete restoration of peace and orderly existence for the peoples of of the world.

In taking action upon this bill, the House reduced the budget estimates for "Government and relief in occupied areas" from a total of $500,000,000 to a total of $350,000,000. The Senate Appropriations Committee is of the opinion that the reduction of $150,000,000 would have international repercussions, would jeopardize our occupation forces, and would greatly handicap the performance of the responsibilities which the United States Government has undertaken in Japan, Germany, Korea, and Austria. The committee, therefore, has restored the House reduction in this appropriation.

Based upon the testimony of the Chief of Staff, the Commanding General of the Army Ground Forces, and the Chief of Engineers, the committee reached the conclusion that insufficient funds were included in H. R. 6837, as passed by the House, to provide minimum essential facilities for the operation of our Army both at home and in foreign areas. The committee requested and was given recommendations by the War Department as to additional funds required to provide these essential facilities. The bill now before the Senate for consideration provides an additional $100,000,000 for the construction of required facilities at our permanent overseas bases. The great majority of this money is required for housing for the military garrisons at these bases. Tents and flimsy shelter for housing our troops must be replaced promptly by more substantial structures. In addition, we have restored the House reduction of some $25,000,000 in this appropriation.

The testimony before our committee indicated that H. R. 6837 as passed by the House did not contain sufficient funds for the provision of housing and training facilities at our permanent posts in the United States. The committee has therefore added another $99,000,000 to the bill to provide these facilities. The Commanding General, Army Ground Forces, stated that this was one of the most pressing requirements in the Army today. It must be remembered that before the war we had facilities for an Army of only some 167,000. If these permanent posts in the United States are to be expected to perform their mission in the postwar Army, they must have adequate facilities.

Our committee has also provided an additional $50,000,000 for repairs and maintenance of the facilities which the Army now has. It has been the observation of several members of our committee, and perhaps some other Senators, that structures at our Army posts in this country are badly deteriorated. It is the opinion of our committee that it is unsound economy to allow these facilities to further deteriorate. It is further our opinion that the construction, repair, and maintenance of Army facilities can be executed at the present time probably more cheaply than at some future date.

In passing H. R. 6837, the House reduced the Budget estimates for the Ordnance Department by $12,719,000. The Chief of Ordnance explained to our committee that this reduction meant further delay in the renovation and storage of the huge quantities of ammunition which we now have on hand, and in the complete demilitarization of the obsolete and badly deteriorated ammunition. Delay in this important work will be dangerous. The ammunition will continue to deteriorate to the point where rehabilitation will be impossible, and there is the possibility of bad explosions with resultant loss of life and property. The committee has therefore restored the House reduction to this appropriation.

The Chief of Transportation informed our committee that the House reduction of some $49,000,000 in his appropriation would result in a lack of adequate transportation facilities for the movement of Army personnel on their return from overseas theaters and of their replacements. It might also mean the slowing up of the handling of this personnel. In addition, the committee's attention has been called to the fact that H. R. 6064, which is now in the status of an enrolled enactment awaiting the signature of the President, will require the return of many soldiers from overseas who have completed their term of service as specified in this act. This act also provides that any father who is in the service shall, upon his request after August 1, 1946, be released therefrom. The War Department anticipates that this requirement will throw a heavy additional burden on the already limited transportation facilities. Additional boats, crews, and facilities will have to be provided to carry out the provisions of this act.

In view of these considerations, the committee has restored to this appropriation $45,000,000 of the reduction made by the House. It is our opinion that the Transportation Corps will be able to provide adequate facilities with this additional amount.

The committee has made a number of other changes in this bill and has fully detailed them in its report. The above discussion covers the principal ones.

There is one change in the general provisions of this bill to which I should call attention. By language in section 4 the House has made the War Department appropriations available for the care, handling, and disposition of surplus property in overseas areas. The Chief of Staff and the Budget Officer for the War Department assured our committee that this bill does not contain any funds for the care and handling of property either at home or abroad after it has been declared surplus. It is therefore necessary that the language provision which was included in the bill by the House be deleted.

Mr. President, in order that this presentation may be somewhat more complete, I ask that there be printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks a list of the several appropriations which have been made by the Congress for the support of the Army, beginning with the year 1916 and ending with the year 1946. This list is found on page 101 of the hearings before the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Signal Corps—Signal Service of the Army," on page 24, line 18, after the word "thereof", to strike out "$100,000,000" and insert "$104,115,112."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Corps of Engineers—Engineer Service, Army," on page 30, line 5, after the word "thereof", to strike out "$350,000,000" and insert "$475,544,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 31, line 10, before the word "Provided", to strike out "$115,500,000" and insert "$215,500,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 32, line 19, after the word "for", to strike out "$300,000,000" and insert "$350,000,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 33, line 11, after "In all, Engineer Service, Army", to strike out "$765,500,000" and insert "$1,041,044,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Ordnance Department—Ordnance Service and Supplies, Army", on page 34, line 15, after the word "expenses", to strike out "$315,000,000" and insert "$327,719,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "National Board for Promotion of Rifle Practice, Army," on page 50, line 8, after the name "Secretary of War", to strike out "$167,000" and insert "$281,500."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Government and relief in occupied areas," on page 52, line 9, after the word "information", to insert "expenses incident to the operation of schools for American children"; and in line 17, after the word "accomplished", to strike out "$350,000,000" and insert "$500,000,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Atomic service," on page 53, line 11, after the word "appurtenances" to insert "the provision and operation of community facilities, including facilities for the housing, health, medical care, safety, schooling, welfare and recreation of atomic service personnel, to the extent and in the manner deemed necessary by the officer in charge for the proper conduct of atomic service activities"; and in line 22, after the figures "$375,000,000", to insert a comma and "to be available until expended."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Printing and binding, War Department," on page 56, line 19, after the word "law", to strike out "$10,000,000" and insert "$13,000,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, page 57, line 3, after the word "work", to insert "unless representatives of the employees are given the opportunity to check any such time studies as may affect the amount of work asked of them and to protest under the established grievance procedure any work requirements believed unreasonable."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

All in favor——

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, to that amendment I offer the following amendment: On page 57, in line 3, strike out all of the committee amendment beginning in line 3, down to and including the word "unreasonable," in line 7.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, the vote would come on agreeing to the committee amendment. It will not be necessary to move to strike it out.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I understand that, but I was not certain whether the Chair had put the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is now pending. The Senator from Washington will be heard.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I wish to speak against this committee amendment. It is similar to an amendment which was placed in the Navy appropriation bill. It is rather a back-door approach to a matter which has been a question for many years in the Army and Navy working establishments.

Last week, during the discussion of the naval appropriation bill, I stated to the Senate the history of the prohibition which has been included in all Army and Navy appropriation bills for approximately 30 years. Prior to 1916, both the Army and the Navy in their industrial establishments used what is known as a time-check system on their employees. It is also called the Taylor system or the Bedaux system. It is a speed-up system in which stop watches are used to check on the employees. Prior to 1916 the practice became so vicious and was abused to such an extent that the Senate by resolution created a committee to examine into the practice. That committee was headed by the late Senator Borah, of Idaho. It made a lengthy report to the Senate at that time, and the Senate unanimously agreed to place prohibitions against the use of time-check and stop-watch systems against the employees, and the Senate has consistently done so for 30 years.

Last year an attempt was made, I believe, by the Senator from Minnesota to change that custom and to strike out the prohibition, which has been included in these bills all these years. That attempt was defeated by the Senate.

This year the Senator from Minnesota and other Senators have placed in both the Navy and the Military Establishment appropriation bills what they claim to be a modification——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOEY in the chair). Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Oklahoma?

Mr. MAGNUSON. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Let me advise the Senator from Washington that since this amendment was proposed to this bill by the committee, the conferees on the naval appropriations bill have agreed to eliminate a corresponding provision from that bill. Because of that fact, I am not prepared to insist that the amendment remain in this bill.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I was about to remark that a similar amendment was acted upon by the Senate the other day. I supposed that the Senator from Minnesota favored it. Then the Senate voted, 28 to 27, on the question of the adoption of the amendment. But since that time the conferees on the Navy appropriation bill have eliminated the amendment.

So I hope the Senate will eliminate it from this bill. There is a great deal of difference between having a time-check system on Government employees and having it on private employees.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, I see no point in prolonging the argument, inasmuch as the chairman of the subcommittee is not going to insist on the amendment. I myself think that at this time in the session, inasmuch as the amendment did not stay in the Navy Department appropriation bill, there is not much point in adding it to this bill, although I certainly do not abandon my position, and in this particular case the Army asked for the amendment because the Army has certain operations in which time studies are very important.

I am not giving up the battle. Next year I shall renew it.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I thank the Senator from Minnesota. In view of his statement, I shall have nothing further to say.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MAGNUSON. I yield.

Mr. MEAD. I should like to point out, as has already been stated, that the conferees on the Navy Department appropriation bill have already agreed to eliminate such an amendment from that bill. I commend the Senator from Washington for bringing the matter to the attention of the Senate again. I hope that inasmuch as we have discussed the matter this year, such an amendment will not be contained in appropriation bills next year. It seems to me that we have decided both in the committee and here on the floor of the Senate that we do not want this system. So I hope the Army and the Navy will refrain from insisting upon having such an amendment included next year.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I, too, want to express my desire that the wishes of the Senator from New York and the Senator from Washington be carried out in the future, in respect to the Army and Navy appropriation bills.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 53, beginning in line 3.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next amendment reported by the committee.

The next amendment was, on page 67, after line 7, to insert the following new section:

SEC. 20. None of the funds appropriated in this act for the War Department and the Military Establishment for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, other than funds for which reimbursement is made hereunder, shall be available for any expenses (including the pay, allowances, and subsistence of military personnel) for care, upkeep, repair, handling, and assistance in the sale of any property, material, or equipment subsequent to the date of a declaration of surplus covering such property to a disposal agency, or, if procedures are prescribed whereby declarations of surplus are made at approximately the time of disposal or removal, subsequent to the date of notice by the owning agency to the disposal agency that property has been determined to be surplus and is subject to such procedures. With respect to all such expenses, disposal agencies shall provide reimbursement to the War Department, for credit to the appropriations from which such expenses would be normally paid: Provided, That advance payments based on the estimated expenses of the War Department may be made by any disposal agency: Provided further, That in lieu of ascertaining the direct expenses and the applicable portion of the indirect expenses, the War Department and the disposal agencies may agree on any basis for determining such expenses as will equitably accomplish the purpose of this section.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 68, after line 6, to insert the following new section:

SEC. 21. Not to exceed 10 percent of any of the appropriations for the Military Establishment for the fiscal year 1947 may be transferred with the approval of the Bureau of the Budget to any other of such appropriations, but no appropriation shall be increased more than 10 percent thereby.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 68, line 13, to change the section number from 20 to 22.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That completes the committee amendments.

The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. HART. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 27, in line 10, it is proposed to to strike out the period and insert the following: "Provided, That none of the funds appropriated to the Air Corps be expended in research in or procurement of rockets or guided missiles which come under the normal cognizance of the Ordnance Department."

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, this amendment was not presented to the committee; hence, it could not be considered there.

As chairman of the committee, I have no information regarding what effect the amendment will have upon the bill. Inasmuch as we have had only a short time to consider the bill, I am perfectly willing to accept the amendment and take it to conference. In the meantime we can look into it, and the conferees can pass upon it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HART].

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment.

If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass?

The bill (H. R. 6837) was passed.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, request a conference thereon with the House of Representatives, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. OVERTON, Mr. RUSSELL, Mr. THOMAS of Utah, Mr. GURNEY, Mr. BROOKS, and Mr. REED conferees on the part of the Senate.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR GOVERNMENT CORPORATIONS AND INDEPENDENT AGENCIES, 1947

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 6777, making appropriations for Government corporations and independent establishments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947.

I shall not make a statement about the bill, but if there are questions regarding any amendment which has been proposed or if there are questions which Senators wish to ask in regard to other matters, I shall attempt to answer them to the best of my ability.

So, Mr. President, I have made the motion.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6777) making appropriations for Government corporations and independent executive agencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations, with amendments.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that it be read for amendment, and that committee amendments be first considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered, and the clerk will proceed to state the amendments reported by the committee.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the heading "Title I—Tennessee Valley Authority," on page 2, line 2, after the name "Watauga Dam", to insert "and beginning construction of a fertilizer manufacturing plant at or near Mobile, Ala."; in line 13, before the word "together", to strike out "$25,906,000" and insert "$46,572,000"; and in line 16, after the word "appropriations", to insert a colon and the following proviso: "Provided, That of the $46,572,000 appropriated herein, $17,666,000 shall be available for the immediate resumption of construction and continued prosecution of the work on the Watauga and South Holston Dams with a view to the completion of the work on both dams at the earliest possible date and $3,000,000 toward the construction of a fertilizer manufacturing plant at or near Mobile, Ala."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Department of Agriculture—Federal Crop Insurance Corporation," on page 4, line 4, after the word "expenses", to strike out "$6,800,000" and insert "$7,880,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title II—Independent agencies and corporations," on page 6, line 1, before the word "shall", to strike out "$500,000" and insert "$525,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Federal Loan Agency," on page 6, line 19, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$33,553,000" and insert "$35,553,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "National Housing Agency," on page 11, line 17, after the words "total of", to strike out "$1,400,000" and insert "$1,501,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 14, line 8, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$4,500,000" and insert "$5,000,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, after line 2, to strike out:

Liquidation of resettlement projects: Not to exceed $99,500 of the receipts derived from the operation of the projects transferred under paragraphs 1 (g) and 6 of Executive Order 9070 of February 24, 1942 (7 F. R. 1529), shall be available for necessary expenses in connection with and to facilitate disposition of the improved or unimproved lands in the suburban resettlement projects known as Greenbelt, Greendale, and Greenhills, pursuant to the provisions of section 5 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935 (49 Stat. 115), including temporary employment of persons or organizations, by contract or otherwise without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes and the civil-service and classification laws, for making surveys, plans, and plats, and expenses of additions, alterations, and improvements to streets and utilities.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, after line 2, to insert:

Liquidation of resettlement projects: Not to exceed $99,500 of the receipts derived from the operation of the projects transferred under paragraphs 1 (g) and 6 of Executive Order 9070 of February 24, 1942 (7 F R. 1529), shall be available for necessary expenses in connection with and to facilitate disposition of the improved or unimproved lands in the suburban resettlement projects known as Greenbelt, Greendale, and Greenhills, pursuant to the provisions of section 5 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935 (49 Stat. 115), including temporary employment of persons or organizations, by contract or otherwise without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes and the civil-service and classification laws, for making surveys, plans, and plats, and expenses of additions, alterations, and improvements to streets and utilities.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, line 19, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$75,000" and insert "$98,400."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Department of Agriculture," on page 20, line 17, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$8,000,000" and insert "$8,760,000"; on page 21, line 3, after the word "hereof", to strike out the colon and the following additional proviso: "Provided further, That none of the fund made available by this paragraph shall be used for administrative expenses connected with the sale of Government-owned or Government-controlled stocks of farm commodities at less than parity price as defined by the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 or the comparable price as provided by section 4 (a) of the act of July 1, 1941, as amended (15 U. S. C. 713a–8); and the method that is now used for the purposes of Commodity Credit Corporation loans for determining the parity price or its equivalent for seven-eighths inch Middling cotton at the average location used in fixing the base loan rate for cotton shall also be used for determining the parity price for seven-eighths inch Middling cotton at such average location for the purposes of this proviso: Provided further, That the foregoing shall not apply to the sale or other disposition of any agricultural commodity substantially deteriorated in quality (or in the case of perishable fruits, vegetables, and animal products if there is danger of deterioration or of accumulation of stocks) or sold for the purpose of feeding, or the extraction of peanut oil, or commodities disposed of for export pursuant to section 21 (c) of the Surplus Property Act of 1944 (Public Law 457) or commodities sold to farmers for seed or for new or byproduct uses, or commodities sold for the purpose of establishing claims against persons who have committed fraud, misrepresentations, or other wrongful acts with respect to such commodities: Provided further, That no wheat or corn will be sold for feed at a price less than the parity price of corn at the time such sale is made: Provided further, That in making regional adjustments in the sale price of corn or wheat the minimum price need not be higher in any area than the United States average parity price of corn."

And on page 22, line 16, after "(15 U. S. C. 713a–4)" to insert a colon and the following additional proviso: "Provided further, That no part of any funds appropriated in this act for the Commodity Credit Corporation shall be used, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, to make any payments to other than domestic producers, under any subsidy program operation not in effect on the date of enactment of this act."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, after line 23, to strike out:

Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation: Provided, That funds acquired by the Corporation as an agency of the United States, other than funds transferred pursuant to the act of June 28, 1937 (50 Stat. 323), shall remain available to the Secretary of Agriculture for the purpose of liquidation and dissolution of the Corporation: Provided, however, That not to exceed $40,000 of such funds may be expended for administrative expenses during the fiscal year 1947.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 23, line 9, after the word "exceed," to strike out "$3,750,000" and insert "$3,875,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 23, line 23, after the word "exceed," to strike out "$1,500,000" and insert "$1,688,501."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 24, line 2, after the word "exceed," to strike out "$1,600,000" and insert "$1,644,912."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 24, line 5, after the word "exceed," to strike out $341,000" and insert "$391,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title III—General provisions," on page 27, line 20, before the word "vehicles," to strike out "nonserviceable."

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That completes the committee amendments.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, on behalf of the committee, I send forward an amendment and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 29, after line 16, it is proposed to insert the following:

SEC. 306. In order to meet emergencies or contingencies arising subsequent to approval of the Budget and not provided for in the Budget program, a corporation. or agency covered by the provisions of this act may, with the approval of the President, adjust its budget program to provide, within the limits of available funds and borrowing authority, for the immediate initiation of programs authorized by law and not specifically set forth in the Budget: Provided, That the new program shall be promptly transmitted to the Congress as an amendment to the Budget: Provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed as authority for increasing the amount available for administrative expenses under any limitation on such expenses.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I object very strenuously to the amendment. It seems to me that it would absolutely abolish the Budget Act. As I read the Byrd-Butler law, I can form no other conclusion.

Mr. McKELLAR. The amendment was sent to the committee by the President and by the Bureau of the Budget. I do not see why it would have been sent by the Director of the Budget if the amendment would abolish the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. TAFT. The Byrd-Butler Act was passed in order to require that a budget be submitted by each Federal corporation for its own operation. Allow me to read the language of the amendment:

In order to meet emergencies or contingencies arising subsequent to approval of the budget and not provided for in the budget program, a corporation or agency covered by the provisions of this act may, with the approval of the President, adjust its budget program to provide, within the limits of available funds and borrowing authority, for the immediate initiation of programs authorized by law and not specifically set forth in the budget.

That language removes all limitations. The RFC, for example, has some $5,000,000,000 available for borrowing, and they, therefore, operate under no limit whatever.

The purpose of the Budget Act was to require corporations to tell Congress in advance what their programs were to be. If we agree to this amendment, we say, in effect, to those corporations, "You no longer must do that." It may be said, "There is a new emergency, and the President says you should go ahead. So go ahead and undertake programs which have not been authorized by the Congress." It is just the same as if we were to say, in connection with appropriations, "Because there is an authorization of $100,000,000 we are now appropriating $50,000,000. But if the President wants to spend more money, up to the limit of the total authorization, he may do so."

Mr. RUSSELL. Oh, no.

Mr. TAFT. That is the way I read the language.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I understand the amendment. The purpose of it is to enable the Commodity Credit Corporation to have some flexibility within its limitations in dealing with certain contingencies which might arise with respect to some program for which provision was not made in the Budget. The only testimony presented before the committee in urging the amendment came from the Commodity Credit Corporation. It wished to be enabled to deal with the farm program.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, there also came a letter from the President, dated June 19, 1946, strongly urging the amendment, and after the Senator has concluded his remarks I shall wish to read the letter into the RECORD.

Mr. RUSSELL. My only interest is not to tie the hands of the Commodity Credit Corporation in its present program dealing with farm crops. The amendment states, in part, "within the limits of available funds and borrowing authority."

Mr. TAFT. That is no limit whatever, because the corporations in question have a considerable amount of borrowing authority beyond anything which they may spend. The very purpose of the passage of the Budget Act was to require Government corporations to say in advance what their programs were to be. If the Senator desires to incorporate a special provision with regard to certain things which the Commodity Credit Corporation may do within the limit of their field, I would have no objection, but it seems to me that this amendment takes off the limit. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has five or six billion dollars of borrowing power. Under this amendment they may undertake any project which they may wish.

Mr. RUSSELL. It would have to be authorized by law.

Mr. TAFT. What must be authorized by law? The RFC is authorized by law to do almost anything. The very purpose of the Byrd-Butler law is to tie them down in the same way that we tie down an ordinary department provided for in an appropriation bill.

Mr. President, it seems to me very clearly that this is legislation on an appropriation bill. I believe that I should make the point of order that the amendment is not in order.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, if the amendment were amended so as to apply solely to the Commodity Credit Corporation would the Senator from Ohio withdraw his point of order? I do not believe that we should tie down the Commodity Credit Corporation when the Steagall and other acts guarantee farmers a certain program.

Mr. TAFT. My understanding of the act is this: the Commodity Credit Corporation should file a budget program. They do not have to be particularly specific. They must merely indicate the programs which they intend to undertake during the following year.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, unfortunately they did set forth a very specific program. They indicated an amount which they would pay within the limitations of the price control act to the producers of milk, and so much for sugar. There is a likelihood that the Congress will be in adjournment for 5 or 6 months, and if no relief is granted the producers of some commodities will be absolutely wiped out unless they are able to get Government aid. Of course, the amendment is subject to a point of order.

Mr. TAFT. Will the Senator indicate where in the bill the Commodity Credit Corporation is dealt with?

Mr. RUSSELL. I do not have the bill before me. Allow me to ask the Senator if he would be willing to agree to an amendment on line 3, after the words

"Budget program" to insert "the Commodity Credit Corporation, with the approval of the President."

Mr. TAFT. Here is another question I was about to ask the chairman of the committee. What is the relation between this bill and the OPA extension bill which was passed this afternoon which expressly provided authority to pay subsidies, and buy and sell at a loss if both the RFC and the Commodity Credit Corporation set out a specific limitation of the money which may be used for that kind of a program?

Mr. RUSSELL. The specific over-all limitation carried in the OPA bill would be binding on the Commodity Credit Corporation or any other agency of the Government which might be paying a subsidy. The Commodity Credit Corporation set up the programs which they anticipated handling during the coming fiscal year. I think we will be apt to work a great hardship on some group in this country which already has received assurances in other legislative measures unless the Commodity Credit Corporation has been given power to adjust their budget to meet any emergency which might arise.

Mr. TAFT. I have some doubt whether language of the kind proposed might not completely set aside the limitation of the subsidy program which we just approved in the Price Control Act.

Mr. RUSSELL. I do not think so.

Mr. TAFT. I do not see why not.

Mr. RUSSELL. I do not believe that that issue could arise, and certainly I have no such idea in mind.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, what is the meaning of the following language on page 22 of the bill?

Provided further, That no part of any funds appropriated in this act for the Commodity Credit Corporation——

Incidentally, there are no funds appropriated except $8,000,000, so far as I know. The other appropriation is a deficiency appropriation. I continue reading:

shall be used, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, to make any payments to other than domestic producers, under any subsidy program operation not in effect on the date of enactment of this act.

Under the provisions of the Price Control bill which the Senate has just passed, it is provided that no payments may be made to any producer under any subsidy program not in effect on the date of the act. So this seems to me to imply repeal of the Price Control Act which was just passed.

Mr. RUSSELL. It was put in for a wholly different purpose. It was offered by the Senator from Nebraska, who feared that some authority in the OPA Act might be applied to sugar, and he wanted the domestic sugar producers protected by the amendment. It could not possibly extend the limitations in the OPA Act to affect the subsidy which can be used, nor is there anything in the pending amendment or the legislation which would allow the payment of any subsidy beyond the limitations contained in the OPA Act.

Mr. TAFT. Why have it, then?

Mr. RUSSELL. I presented that viewpoint to the Senator from Nebraska, that they could not pay any new subsidies, but he was apprehensive that within the limitations of the OPA Act some new subsidy might be paid for sugar, and the purpose of the amendment which the Senator has just read was to prevent that being done.

Mr. TAFT. But the implication is, as I see it, that some subsidy may be paid somehow under the authority of the appropriation bill.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, that cannot be done unless it is done out of the $8,000,000 for administration, because that is the only appropriation contained in the bill. That was the point I urged on the Senator from Nebraska, but he and others who were interested in the sugar problem felt it would be at least an admonition to the Commodity Credit Corporation not to engage in any new subsidy program with respect to sugar, other than as to domestic producers. It cannot possibly have any effect on the OPA Act. It is merely a limitation on this appropriation in the first place. It is not legislation.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Ohio yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. After quoting the proposed amendment, the President said this, which I think is pertinent to what the Senator is suggesting:

This section is substantially the same as that included in the corporation supplement to the Budget for the fiscal year 1947 which I transmitted to the Congress on May 2, 1946. In transmitting this Budget approval language was recommended which would restrict the programs of each corporation to those set forth in its 1947 Budget. However, it was recognized that, because of its urgencies or contingencies arising subsequent to the approval of the Budget, a corporation might be called upon to immediately undertake a program which, while authorized under basic law, had not been specifically set forth in its budget. Under these circumstances I recommended that if a corporation had sufficient funds it should be permitted, with my approval, to initiate immediately such a program, and that it be promptly transmitted to the Congress as an amendment to the Budget.

I consider that a provision which is designed to meet emergencies or contingencies is within the spirit of the Government Corporation Control Act, a view which is concurred in by the House Appropriations Committee, since the act clearly states that such a provision may be included in the Budget programs for each corporation. However, rather than make such provision in the Budget for each corporation, it is considered that a general provision, applicable to all corporations, would be more satisfactory and thereby improve the Budget estimates. Obviously it would appear quite improbable that emergencies or contingencies would arise in each corporation during a given year.

In view of the foregoing I strongly urge that the provision for meeting emergencies and contingencies in the Budget programs of corporations included in H. R. 6777 be restored.

That was the purpose.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, the purpose stated is clearly a purpose to nullify the whole Byrd-Butler Act, so far as corporation control is concerned. If we are to adopt an amendment which provides that a corporation may spend any money it wants to spend, if the President says there is an emergency, then why have a budget at all, why present a budget, why adopt this whole new procedure which is required by the law?

Mr. President, I feel compelled to make a point of order against the amendment.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Ohio is entirely correct, for the reason that all these corporations have authorizations which they have not yet used. They can use revolving funds, for example. The Byrd-Butler law was supposed to put them under the control of Congress, just as is any other department of the Government. Under this amendment that control would be lifted. In my judgment, it clearly and completely nullifies the Byrd-Butler Act, which it took Congress 10 years to pass. If the Senator from Ohio does not make a point of order, I certainly shall.

Mr. TAFT. I make the point of order. I would like to say to the distinguished Senator from Georgia that I should like to consult with him. I think we can work out some language. There will be other bills in connection with which I think this matter could be handled. I should like to study the relationship of the different provisions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. RUSSELL. I do not know of any other bill on which it can be put. I appreciate the consideration of the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. TAFT. I am not at all satisfied with the relation between the provisions for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Commodity Credit Corporation, and the Price Control Act limitations on subsidies. I think they should be carefully examined.

Mr. RUSSEL. I have here the language of the Byrd-Butler Act, and certainly as it relates to the Commodity Credit Corporation, and what I have in mind, this amendment, if confined to the Commodity Credit Corporation, can do no violence to the spirit of the Byrd-Butler Act. I read from it:

The Budget program shall be a business-type budget, or plan of operations, with due allowance given for the need of flexibility, including provision for emergencies and contingencies, in order that the Corporation may properly carry out its activities as authorized by law.

It may be that this budget is in that shape, but from my examination of the Commodity Credit Corporation budget I am very apprehensive of what will happen if some leeway is not given which will permit the Corporation to carry out the instructions of Congress as provided in other basic legislation.

Mr. BYRD. Why can it not be put in the Budget, just as in the case of other corporations?

Mr. RUSSELL. They could not spell out everything for emergencies and contingencies.

Mr. BYRD. They should have set it up, and if it is the fault of the Commodity Credit Corporation in not bringing in the proper kind of a budget, they certainly should not be exempted.

Mr. RUSSELL. Of course, the point of order is good; there is no question about it.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator from Georgia knows I do not want to do anything to interfere with the Commodity Credit Corporation, but if we exempt one corporation from the Byrd-Butler Act, we shall have to exempt all of them. If we exempt one, the others will want to be exempted.

Mr. RUSSELL. Congress has told the Commodity Credit Corporation to carry out certain programs in certain eventualities, and this amendment would only allow them to initiate programs which are authorized by law.

Mr. BYRD. That is all they could do anyway. The Commodity Credit Corporation has resources and authority to borrow. The purpose of the Byrd-Butler law was to reduce the blanket authorizations which have been made. They have the right to use revolving funds. No one knows how much they may amount to.

I wish to say to the Senator from Georgia that I shall be glad to confer with him and the Senator from Ohio, but no one seems to understand this amendment, and I certainly could not sit here and have it agreed to when it is subject to a point of order.

Mr. McKELLAR. I call the Senator's attention to this statement of the President:

> The act clearly states that such a provision may be included in the Budget programs for each corporation.

Mr. BYRD. Why was it not included? The Senator from Georgia states it has not been properly prepared, and it is up to the Commodity Credit Corporation to prepare it properly. This would give them an exemption.

Mr. McKELLAR. Instead of having it for each corporation, he included them all together.

Mr. BYRD. That was not the purpose of the Byrd-Butler Act. Each corporation was to come before the Congress, as the Senator from Tennessee knows—and he helped in the passage of the act—and present its budget, just as any other department does.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I, too, took the same position, not on account of the Byrd-Butler law, but I took a position against the amendment because it seemed to me that what we were trying to do was to limit the corporations.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the object of the Byrd-Butler Act was to restrict these corporations, and take away from them the power they had exercised. I do not know how much excess buying power the Commodity Credit Corporation has.

Mr. WHERRY. I said, "Why do you not come in and ask for it in your budget?"

Mr. BYRD. They have to come to Congress, anyway, to get it.

Mr. WHERRY. If the Congress is in session, it is all right, but if Congress is not in session, how are they to have authority to borrow money to take care of the needs for which the original corporation was set up?

Mr. McKELLAR. It could not be done.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I do not know who has the floor, but will the Senator who has the floor yield to me for a moment?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I understand that a point of order has twice been made against this amendment by two different Senators.

Mr. RUSSELL. That is correct.

Mr. WHITE. It seems to me to be conceded by all that the point of order is well taken. That would suggest to me the wisdom of letting this matter go over until tomorrow in the hope that the interested Senators might get together, study the language, and accomplish the purpose sought without offense to the rules of the Senate, and really make progress toward the ultimate disposition of the legislation.

Mr. McKELLAR. I should be glad to do that, if the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] and the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] and other Senators interested meanwhile would get together.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I am tremendously concerned about the situation as it might apply to the Commodity Credit Corporation, and I would be glad to take any steps which would protect the farmers in the program that has been prescribed by the Congress for them.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will the Senator from Ohio be willing to undertake to consider the matter with other Senators between now and the time we reconvene tomorrow?

Mr. TAFT. Yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. Since that is the case, Mr. President, I shall ask that the bill go over at this point until tomorrow. But before the bill goes over I wish to ask unanimous consent that an amendment be agreed to. On page 3, at the bottom of the page, in line 21, there is a proviso as follows:

> Provided further, That none of the funds herein shall be used to pay contributions with respect to projects constructed under authority of Public Law 671, Seventy-sixth Congress.

I ask that that language be stricken out, and that the amendment be taken to conference, if no Senators object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee? The Chair hears none, and the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. McKELLAR. I now ask that the bill go over until tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the bill will be passed over until tomorrow.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, respecting the last item mentioned by the Senator from Tennessee, I tried to get on my feet before the bill was passed over.

Mr. McKELLAR. I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. FERGUSON. It is satisfactory to me that the language be stricken out, but only for the purpose of taking the amendment to conference. I think the conferees should give due consideration to this question. We should not be appropriating money to take care of these matters when there is some other way to take care of them; that is that the State or the municipality may take care of the costs of amortization of these buildings. I think it is a bad practice for the Federal Government to be subsidizing anything that the State or the municipality or the building organizations may determine should be paid.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am rather inclined to think the Senator is right.

Mr. FERGUSON. When the Senate passes a measure making certain appropriations I do not consider that we are bound thereafter to appropriate money for such purposes. If there is any place where sovereignty applies it is right here at home. Sovereignty applies at home as well as in our foreign relations. The Government is not bound to appropriate continuously and on into the future without a determination by each House.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, will the Senator from Tennessee yield for a question?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. FULLBRIGHT. I wanted to ask the Senator about the RFC. I understand that agency expires at the end of this year. Does it not?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not think it does.

Mr. FERGUSON. It expires in 1948.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am not sure, but I believe it expires in 1948. It does not expire this year.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. May I ask the Senator from Ohio. Does not the RFC expire, under the terms of its charter, at the end of this calendar year?

Mr. TAFT. We have a bill on the calendar to extend the life of the RFC. I do not think it expires tomorrow.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. No, I say the end of this calendar year.

Mr. TAFT. I think some time in that neighborhood. I think it is February 1947.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. The appropriation appearing on page 6 is based on the theory that RFC will be extended for the period of a year.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes. It is based on the theory that the organization will be in existence the full year.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. At the request of the Senator from Tennessee, the bill will go over until tomorrow.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE COAST GUARD, TREASURY DEPARTMENT, 1947

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill (H. R. 6428) making appropriations for the Coast Guard, Treasury Department.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6428) making appropriations for the Coast Guard, Treasury Department, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that it be read for amendment, and that the committee amendments be first considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will proceed to state the committee amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the heading "Coast Guard," on page 5, line 19, after the word "stragglers", to strike out "$72,000,000" and insert "$76,020,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, line 11, after the word "ordnance", to insert "ordnance stores."

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MURDOCK in the chair). That completes the committee amendments.

The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. McKELLAR. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, request a conference with the House thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. McKELLAR, Mr. McCARRAN, Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. GREEN, Mr. MAYBANK, Mr. WHITE, Mr. GURNEY, and Mr. REED conferees on the part of the Senate.

BILLS AFFECTING THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. HOEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of three bills which are on the calendar and which relate to the District of Columbia. The three bills have been unanimously reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia. There is no objection to them that I know of from any source. The expiration date in each case will be June 30, so it is necessary that the bills be passed today. The bills are Senate bill 2234, Calendar No. 1593; House bill 5933, Calendar No. 1648; and House bill 6516, Calendar No. 1649. I have spoken to both the majority and the minority leaders with respect to these bills and told them they were reported unanimously from the committee.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HOEY. I yield.

Mr. WHITE. The Senator from North Carolina spoke to me earlier today about these three bills. I made an effort to contact the minority members of the District Committee with respect to them. I found no opposition on the part of any of the District Committee minority members who are present, and I know of no objection to the bills.

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. HOEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate bill 2234, Calendar No. 1593.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2234) to amend the District of Columbia Unemployment Compensation Act, to provide for unemployment compensation in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment, on page 1, line 5, to strike out the following:

Section 3 (c) (4) is amended to read as follows:

"(4) (i) No employer's rate of contribution for any calendar year or part thereof shall be reduced below the standard rate unless and until his account could have been charged with benefits paid throughout the 36-consecutive-calendar-month period ending on the computation date applicable to such year or part thereof.

"(ii) No employer's contribution rate for any calendar year shall be reduced below the standard rate unless records filed with the Board indicate he has established taxable wages in each of the three annual pay rolls as used in calculating his average annual pay roll.

"(iii) (1) Contribution rates after termination of military service. Notwithstanding any inconsistent provisions of this act, the contribution rates of trainees shall be determined in accordance with the following provisions of this subsection for the periods and with respect to the matters specified herein. Except as herein otherwise provided, all other provisions of this act shall continue to be applicable in connection with such contribution rates.

"(2) The term 'military service' as used in this subsection means active service in the land or naval forces of the United States, but the service of an individual in any reserve component of the land or naval forces of the United States who is ordered to active duty in any such force for a period of 30 days or less shall not be deemed to be active service in such force during such period.

"(3) The term 'trainee' as used in this subsection means an individual who entered military service after March 31, 1940, who continued such service for more than 30 consecutive days, whose military service was terminated under conditions other than dishonorable, on or before the 6 months after the war in which the United States is now engaged has been terminated by proclamation by the President of the United States.

"(4) Upon written application by a trainee, who was formerly an employer subject to the provisions of this act and who has returned to engage in substantially the same type of business in which he was engaged prior to his entrance into the military service, the entire period between the time of his entrance into military service and the date of termination of such service shall be excluded in determining his contribution rate. The Contribution Rate Review Committee may in its discretion exclude a reasonable period before and after the trainee's actual period of military service if such Committee finds that the trainee was out of business solely because of such military service.

"(iv) If the amount in the fund as of the computation date is less than 5 percent of the total pay rolls subject to contributions under this act for the twelve consecutive month period ending on said computation date, the contribution rate for each employer shall be increased by the percentage differential between said 5 percent of such total pay rolls and said fund's percentage of such total pay rolls, but in no event shall the contribution rate for any employer be more than 2.7 percent. Said percentage differential for each employer shall be computed to the next highest one-tenth of 1 percent.

"(v) If, on December 20 of any calendar year, the amount in the fund becomes less than 2.4 percent of the total annual pay rolls subject to contribution under this act for the 12-consecutive-month period ending on the preceding June 30, the Board shall make a declaration to that effect. Effective the quarter following such announcement, each employer's rate of contribution shall be the standard rate."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the District of Columbia Unemployment Compensation Act, approved August 28, 1935, as amended, is further amended to read as follows:

"Section 3 (c) (5) is amended to read as follows:

"'(5) The Board shall for any uncompleted portion of the calendar year beginning with the effective date of this act and for each calendar year thereafter classify employers in accordance with their actual experience in the payment of contributions and with respect to benefits charged against their accounts. Each employer's contribution rate for each subsequent year or part thereof shall be calculated on the basis of his records filed with the Board and benefit payments disbursed through the applicable computation date.'

"Section 3 (c) (7) is amended to read as follows:

"'(7) (a) If the business of any employer is transferred in whole or in part, the transferee shall be deemed a successor for the purpose of this section. In case the transfer of any of the assets of a covered employer's business by any means whatever, otherwise than in the ordinary course of trade, such transfer shall be deemed a transfer of business and shall constitute the transferee a successor hereunder, unless the Board, on its own motion or on application of an interested party, finds that all of the following conditions exist:

"'(1) The transferee has not assumed any of the transferor's obligations; and

"'(2) The transferee has not continued or resumed transferor's good will; and

"'(3) The transferee has not continued or resumed the business of the transferor, either in the same establishment or elsewhere; and

"'(4) The transferee has not employed substantially the same employees as those the transferor had employed in connection with the assets transferred.

"'(b) The successor, if not already subject to this section, shall become an "employer" subject hereto on the date of such transfer, and shall accordingly become liable for contributions hereunder from and after said date.

"'(c) The successor shall take over and continue the employer's account, including its reserve and all other aspects of its experience under this section, in proportion to the pay roll or employees assignable to the transferred business as determined for the purposes of this section by the Board. The successor shall be secondarily liable for any amounts owned by the employer to the fund at the time of such transfer; but such liability shall be proportioned to the extent of the transfer of business and shall not exceed the value of the assets transferred.

"'(d) The benefit chargeability of a successor's account under section 3 (c) if not accrued before the transfer date shall begin to accrue on the transfer date, in case the transferor's benefit chargeability was then accruing; or shall begin to accrue on the date otherwise applicable to the successor, or on the date otherwise applicable to the transferor, whichever is earlier, in case the transferor's benefit chargeability was not accruing on the transfer date. Similarly, benefits from a successor's account, if not chargeable before the transfer date shall become chargeable on the transfer date, in case the transfer was then chargeable for the benefit payments; or shall become chargeable on the date otherwise applicable to the successor or on the date otherwise applicable to the transferor, whichever is earlier, in case the transferor was chargeable for the benefit payments on the transfer date.

"'(e) The account taken over by the successor employer shall remain chargeable with respect to accrued benefit and related rights based on employment in the transferred business, and all such employment shall be deemed employment performed for such employer.

"'(f) The contribution rates applicable with respect to the accounts of the successor employer and a transferring employer shall be respectively determined or redetermined as of the next preceding June 30 computation date, to apply from the date of transfer of business until the close of the current calendar year, and shall thereafter be determined whenever required by section 3 (c), as follows: For the purposes of section 3 (c), the Board shall determine the "experience under this section" of the successor employer's account and of the transferring employer's account by allocating to the successor employer's account for each period in question the respective proportions of the transferring employer's pay roll and the benefits which the Board determines to be properly assignable to the business transferred.

"'(g) Special combinations of experience: Any successor employer who has failed to obtain credit for its predecessor's experience, solely because of the provisions of section 3 (c) (7) of the act prior to its amendment by this act, may file a written application for such allowance after the effective date of this act. In the event the board finds that such employer is entitled to such combination of experience under the provisions of section 3 (c) (7) as amended by this act, the combination shall be allowed effective for the calendar year next succeeding the date of such application.'

"Section 3 (c) (8) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following subsection:

"'(iii) Except as otherwise provided in this section, whenever through inadvertence or mistake erroneous charges or credits are found to have been made to experience-rating accounts, the same shall be readjusted as of the date of discovery and such readjustment shall not affect any computation or rate assigned prior to the date of discovery but shall be used on the next computation date in calculating future contribution rates.'

"Section 3 (c) (10) is amended by inserting, after the words 'employer thereof' found at the end of the third sentence of said section, the following additional sentence: 'All such hearings shall be held before a Contribution Rate Review Committee composed of three members who shall be employees of the Board and appointed by the Board. The findings and decision of this committee shall not be subject to review by the District Auditor.'

"This act shall take effect as of 12:01 antemeridian on the first day of the next succeeding calendar quarter following the enactment of this act."

NURSERY AND NURSERY SCHOOLS FOR DAY CARE IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. HOEY. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House bill 5933, Calendar No. 1648.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5933) to authorize and direct the Board of Education of the District of Columbia to establish and operate in the public schools and other suitable locations a system of nurseries and nursery schools for day care of school-age and under-school-age children, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia, with amendments.

The first amendment was on page 1, line 4, after the words "Board of" to strike out "Education" and insert "Public Welfare."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was on the same page after line 7, to strike out section 2 as follows:

SEC. 2. On and after July 1, 1946, the Board is authorized and directed to establish, maintain, and operate in and on the buildings and grounds of the public schools of the District of Columbia and at other suitable locations, a system of nurseries and nursery schools for the day care of children of school or under-school age of parents residing in the District of Columbia who are employed and are financially unable otherwise to provide for the day care of their children or who are so handicapped that they cannot otherwise provide for the day care of their children. The Board is authorized to employ teachers, attendants, clerks, custodians, and other persons necessary to provide such day care and to pay compensation for their services in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended.

And to insert in lieu thereof the following:

SEC. 2. On and after July 1, 1946, and until June 30, 1947, and no longer, the Board is authorized and directed to establish, maintain, and operate in and on such of the buildings and grounds of the public schools of the District of Columbia, as may be designated and approved by the Board of Education, and at such other suitable locations, as may be designated and approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, not to exceed a total of 14 nurseries and nursery schools for the day care of children of school or under-school age of parents residing in the District of Columbia and who have resided therein for not less than 1 year immediately preceding the entry of their children into such nurseries or nursery schools and who are employed and are financially unable otherwise to provide for the day care of their children or who are so handicapped that they cannot otherwise provide for the day care of their children. The Board is authorized to employ teachers, attendants, clerks, custodians, and other persons necessary to provide such day care and to pay compensation for their services in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended. Appropriations now or hereafter available for the maintenance and operation of the buildings and grounds of the said public schools shall be available for the maintenance and operation of such of the buildings and grounds of the said public schools in and on which such nurseries and nursery schools may be established, maintained, and operated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to authorize and direct the Board of Public Welfare of the District of Columbia to establish and operate in the public schools and other suitable locations a system of nurseries and nursery schools for day care of school-age and under-school-age children, and for other purposes."

INCREASE IN SALARIES OF METROPOLITAN POLICE AND OTHERS

Mr. HOEY. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House bill 6519, Calendar No. 1649.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 6516) to increase the salaries of the Metropolitan Police, the United States Park Police, the White House Police, and members of the Fire Department of the District of Columbia, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SIMPLIFICATION AND IMPROVEMENT OF CREDIT SERVICES TO FARMERS

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, early this year the Senate passed unanimously a bill offered by the late lamented senior Senator from Alabama, Mr. Bankhead, respecting the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act. The bill since that time has been in the House committee. The House passed its own version of the bill H. R. 5991, and it was referred to the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and was unanimously favorably reported by that committee, and is now on the calendar, Calendar No. 1353. I should like to have the measure considered now.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question? I have received telephone calls from the National Grange and from two other farm organizations who are not in favor of this measure. They tell me there were no hearings held on the bill at all.

Mr. RUSSELL. I can say to the Senator that that statement is certainly not correct.

Mr. WHERRY. Was any evidence submitted before the House committee except evidence on the part of Government agencies?

Mr. RUSSELL. I do not know about that.

Mr. WHERRY. I understood that perhaps a hearing was held, but that only Government agencies were represented. They were heard in a great hurry one afternoon, and no one else was invited to attend. No farm group or any others interested were invited to come to the hearing, and no testimony was adduced on their behalf. Is that correct?

Mr. RUSSELL. I do not know about that. Hearings were held in the Senate committee, at which all persons who wanted to testify were permitted to testify, and the committee reported the bill unanimously. When it comes to the question of the bill which has passed the House, I do not know how extensive the House committee hearings were.

Mr. WHERRY. I should like to say to the distinguished Senator from Georgia, whom I should like to accommodate, that three or four Senators have asked me that if the bill came up to object its consideration.

Mr. RUSSELL. If that be the case, I shall not press the matter.

Mr. WHERRY. The Senate will be in session tomorrow.

Mr. RUSSELL. The situation is rather unusual. The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. BALL] objected to the bill on the call of the calendar. I spoke to him about it and he stated that he had no further interest in the bill, and no objection to its passage.

Mr. WHERRY. I shall be glad to read a letter, which convinces me that there should be hearings on the bill.

Mr. RUSSELL. I know that hearings have been held on the bill.

Mr. WHERRY. This letter is from the National Grange. According to the letter, none of the farm organizations had an opportunity to appear and testify in the hearings on the bill.

Mr. RUSSELL. They may not have had such an opportunity when the bill came up the second time, but they certainly had opportunity to be heard when the first hearings were held.

Mr. WHERRY. I do not wish to interfere in any way with the wishes of the Senator from Georgia. Will he permit the bill to go over until tomorrow?

Mr. RUSSELL. I shall be glad to do so. However, let me say that some of the farm organizations have always been opposed to the Farm Security Administration. If something is not done to put these two bills in conference, where a bill can be drafted before this session of Congress is over, it may be that the opponents of the Farm Security Administration will succeed in destroying it.

Mr. WHERRY. I do not wish to do that; but I would appreciate it very much if the Senator would withhold his request until tomorrow. By that time I shall be able to give my answer one way or the other relative to taking up the bill by unanimous consent.

Mr. RUSSELL. Of course, I shall not press the matter now; but I apprehend that if the Senator from Nebraska is satisfied, perhaps we shall find another objector. I regret that I did not discuss the question with the Senator.

Mr. WHERRY. Three Senators have spoken to me this afternoon and asked me to object to consideration of the bill. I do not know all of their objections, but I am certain that the Senator would not press his request under those conditions.

Mr. RUSSELL. Of course not.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Swanson, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the President pro tempore:

S. 2341. An act to amend the National Housing Act, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 6042. An act to amend the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, as amended, and the Stabilization Act of 1942, as amended, and for other purposes.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. RUSSELL. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MURDOCK in the chair) laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following favorable reports of nominations were submitted:

By Mr. McCARRAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary:

George B. Harris, of California, to be United States district judge for the northern district of California (new position);

Bunk Gardner, of Kentucky, to be United States district judge of the Canal Zone; and

Louis LeBaron, of Hawaii, to be associate justice of the supreme court, Territory of Hawaii.

By Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on Naval Affairs:

Sundry officers for appointment in the Navy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will proceed to state the nominations on the Executive Calendar.

UNITED STATES MARITIME COMMISSION

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Granville Mellen to be a member of the United States Maritime Commission.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA—PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION

The legislative clerk read the nomination of James H. Flanagan to be a member of the Public Utilities Commission of the District of Columbia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection the nomination is confirmed.

UNITED STATES COAST GUARD

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Commodore Ellis Reed-Hill to be Engineer in Chief of the United States Coast Guard, with the rank of rear admiral, effective from August 1, 1946, for a term of 4 years.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

That completes the calendar.

Mr. RUSSELL. I ask that the President be immediately notified of all nominations confirmed this day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the President will be notified forthwith.

RECESS

Mr. RUSSELL. I move that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock a. m. tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock and 26 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Saturday, June 29, 1946, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate June 28 (legislative day of March 5), 1946:

DIPLOMATIC AND FOREIGN SERVICE

The following-named persons for promotion in the foreign service of the United States of America, to be effective as of May 19, 1946:

FROM FOREIGN-SERVICE OFFICER OF CLASS 3 TO FOREIGN-SERVICE OFFICER OF CLASS 2

Maurice W. Altaffer, of Ohio.
George R. Canty, of Massachusetts.
Fayette J. Flexer, of Illinois.
Julian C. Greenup, of California.
